Strike title VI of the bill.

Mr. ANDREWS (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the modification.

The CHAIR. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

The CHAIR. Without objection, the amendment is modified.

There was no objection.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, this bill has moved to the floor under an open spirit of bipartisan cooperation. The Committee on Education and Labor had a markup very much in that spirit. Members’ views have been solicited and received from throughout the House, and this manager’s amendment is very much in that same spirit. I want to briefly review the substance of the manager’s amendment so that the Members may understand it.

The amendment clarifies that the goal of reaching a quarter of a million volunteers is throughout all national service programs and not simply AmeriCorps. It promotes the use of interagency agreements between the Corporation For National and Community Service and other Federal agencies. Many of these agencies have innovative service projects they carry out through nonprofits, and this manager’s amendment will allow these participants to earn education benefits.

The amendment adds a new definition of “severely economically distressed community,” and allows the corporation to consider whether projects in the bill respond to the needs of economically distressed communities.

The amendment includes language that will allow participants in the Opportunity Corps to conduct activities that would increase access to child nutrition programs.

The amendment also ensures that programs and models currently authorized could be incorporated into the new corps created in the bill.

The amendment is needed to make further technical clarifications in the bill, and we would ask for our colleagues to support the bill.

I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman from Pennsylvania is recognized for 15 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. PLATTS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

First, I would like to recognize Chairman MILLER and the staff for working to include a number of important changes in this manager's amendment. While there are many technical changes included, there are a number of important changes, including protections against double dipping and Federal control of curriculum, and provisions designed to streamline the application process for grants under the national service programs.

This amendment includes language that would clarify current law to ensure that the corporation is only able to provide one grant to support the same project. This protection ensures that Federal funds are used wisely and that the same project is not funded through multiple funding streams.

The manager's amendment also includes important language that specifically prohibits an employee of the Federal Government from mandating, directing or controlling a school's curriculum or instructional program. Under the amendment, States would also not be required to have academic content or student academic achievement standards approved or certified by the Federal Government in order to receive a national service grant.

Although we agree there is a role for the Federal Government to play in supporting State and local service learning programs, I believe that the decision on what type of instructional practices or curriculum is used in the classroom should very importantly be made by teachers and principals in the Nation's elementary and secondary schools, not here in Washington. This is an important change that will ensure that the corporation's activities conform to the highest standards of quality, integrity and accuracy, and are objective, neutral, nonideological, and free of partisan political influence.

Finally, the manager's amendment includes a provision that requires the corporation to promote efficiency by consolidating application procedures and reporting requirements for programs funded under the national service laws. Small organizations may currently be unwilling to participate in these programs because the application procedures and reporting requirements are too burdensome on them. This change will help promote diversity among the size of the organizations participating in this program and applying for grants.

Again, I want to thank the majority and urge a "yes" vote in favor of this amendment.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, before I yield back, I would like to thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania for his very diligent work on this bill and this amendment, and for his spirit of bipartisanship. It is very much appreciated.

I am pleased to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. HINOJOSA), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Higher Education.

Mr. HINOJOSA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the manager's amendment and the underlying bill, the GIVE Act, H.R. 1388. This legislation reauthorizes and strengthens our national service programs. I would like to thank my good friend, CAROLYN MCCARTHY, chairwoman of the Healthy Families and Community Subcommittee, as well as the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PLATTS), Chairman MILLER and Ranking Member McKEON for their bipartisan work on this fine legislation.

The spirit of service runs strong in our Nation. Many Americans—young and old, rich and poor—look for ways to give back to their communities and to the Nation. During difficult times such as those we are facing today, we need to enable more people to answer the call to serve.

I am proud to have served on our Knapp Hospital board in Weslaco for nearly 10 years. Another great board where I served from 1984 to 1994 was the Boys and Girls Club board of directors. During those 10 years, I saw the need for helping young children get involved after school and on weekends, and saw how the programs that we developed on education and sports helped keep them out of trouble and helped raise them to be college-ready.

The GIVE Act is the first reauthorization of our national service programs in 16 years, and it is long overdue. With this legislation, we will set a national goal for volunteers of 250,000 by the year 2014. It addresses a wide range of community needs, from disaster relief to health care to education, nonprofits, and housing.

I am especially proud that the GIVE Act, through this manager's amendment, harnesses the power of service to promote and strengthen financial literacy. Our economic crisis has shed an unflattering light on the lack of financial and economic knowledge across the Nation, especially in the communities that can least afford it. The GIVE Act will put resources and volunteers into our communities to help turn this around.

The GIVE Act will make our great tradition of service even stronger. I urge all of my colleagues to vote "yes."

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS), as modified.

The question was taken; and the Chair announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey will be postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 2 OFFERED BY MS. PINGREE OF MAINE

The CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 2 printed in House Report 111-39.

Ms. PINGREE of Maine. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

The CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 2 offered by Ms. PINGREE of Maine:

In section 122(a)(3)(A) of the National and Community Service Act of 1990 as proposed to be amended by section 1302 of the bill, redesignate clauses (xi) and (xii) as clauses (xii) and (xiii), respectively, and insert after clause (x) the following new clause:

"(xi) providing clean-energy-related services designed to meet the needs of rural communities;"

The CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 250, the gentlewoman from Maine (Ms. PINGREE) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Maine.

Ms. PINGREE of Maine. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, H.R. 1388 is an important call to service for the entire country. It will offer opportunities to people of all ages, races, and backgrounds to get involved in their communities and make lasting changes in the places they live. I strongly support this bill and want to commend the authors for their hard work in crafting this essential piece of legislation.

Among the many important provisions of this bill, I was pleased to see the inclusion of the Clean Energy Corps. In my home State of Maine, we have some of the oldest housing stock in the Nation, and we are one of the most dependent on home heating oil. Clean energy innovation is essential to our economic growth and survival.

I believe our rural State can become a leader in clean energy and in creating good-paying, sustainable jobs. Clean energy development is an important issue for both urban and rural communities, but rural communities often have to address their clean energy needs in different ways than big cities do.

In addition, rural areas frequently have a wide array of natural resources at their disposal that enable them to effectively address their clean energy needs.

This amendment will give service-based projects in small towns the flexibility to design clean energy solutions that are specific to their rural needs.

I would like to share with you one short example of an innovative and groundbreaking project that was developed in my hometown, the island of North Haven.

I live in a rural community on an island 12 miles off the coast of Maine. Because we have to get our electricity from the mainland over an undersea cable, electric rates are extremely high. Most recently, we paid 27 to 29 cents per kilowatt hour. So the people of my tiny town, where we have 350 year-round residents, have gotten together with a neighboring island and have put together a plan to construct a wind turbine that will provide our electricity, and may even allow us to send some back to the mainland.

This is nearly a $10 million project. This project could not and would not happen without the volunteer efforts of dozens of people in our community who have donated thousands of hours to make this clean energy project a reality.

It is crucial to encourage volunteerism and ingenuity in rural areas which are traditionally underserved by these types of service projects. This amendment extends additional opportunities for volunteerism into rural areas so we can continue to help and encourage our citizens of all ages to contribute to our clean energy future.

I urge you to vote "yes" on this amendment.

Mr. ANDREWS. Will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. PINGREE of Maine. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. ANDREWS. On behalf of the committee, I just want to congratulate the author of the amendment and indicate my enthusiastic support for your amendment.

In hearing the gentlelady tell the story of her neighbors volunteering to bring wind energy to her hometown, imagine how many hours of volunteer effort we will leverage by AmeriCorps and other participants being expanded under this bill. I think the gentlelady is not only directly addressing one of the great needs of rural America, which is energy diversification, but also opening the door for many more people to participate. I thank the gentlelady for her amendment. The majority strongly supports the amendment.

Ms. PINGREE of Maine. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman from Pennsylvania is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. PLATTS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this amendment, which adds to the list of approved Clean Energy Corps activities the development of clean energy programs designed to meet the needs of rural communities. Our rural communities are a vital part of America, and this amendment helps to ensure that they are equally served under this act.

I urge a "yes" vote.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. PINGREE of Maine. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. INSLEE).

Mr. INSLEE. I want to thank the sponsor of this amendment for broadening the application of this bill.

I just want to make the point that this is a bill that is not only for the benefit of the individuals, the people who are going to gain these skills, but the whole country. When we weatherize homes, when we install solar panels, when we engage in all of these activities, it is part of the whole clean energy revolution that this country is going through, and it is going to help all 50 States.

The best vote I have ever cast, the very first vote I ever cast in Congress was for AmeriCorps, and I am happy that that is being extended. Mr. SARBANES and I introduced a stand-alone bill to get this Energy Corps going, and now I'm glad that we make sure it is all across the country. I thank the gentlelady for her sponsorship.

Mr. PLATTS. Mr. Chairman, I urge a "yes" vote in favor of the amendment, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. PINGREE of Maine. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Maine (Ms. PINGREE).

The question was taken; and the Chair announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Maine will be postponed.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the request for the rollcall vote on the manager's amendment and to reinstate the voice vote for which the Chair ruled in favor of the amendment.

The CHAIR. Without objection, amendment No. 1, as modified, is adopted by voice vote.

There was no objection.

AMENDMENT NO. 3 OFFERED BY MR. HUNTER

The CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 3 printed in House Report 111-39.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

The CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 3 offered by Mr. HUNTER:
Amend section 1404(11) of the bill to read as follows:

(11) in section (c)(6)—

(A) in the matter preceding subparagraph (A), by inserting after "national service educational award" the following: "and summer of service educational award"; and

(B) by amending subparagraph (B) to read as follows:

"(B) the student's estimated financial assistance for such period under part A of title IV of such Act (20 U.S.C. 1070 et seq.).";

The CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 250, the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise today to offer an amendment to H.R. 1388, the Generations Invigorating Volunteerism and Education Act, that ensures veterans are no longer denied the educational benefits they earn through national service programs. My amendment simply removes GI benefits from the maximum educational award calculation so that veterans have full access to national service educational benefits.

Under current law, individuals who participate in national service programs earn educational awards to support their postsecondary education. The total amount a student can draw down for any one period takes into account the cost of attendance at an institution, Pell Grants, and the amount a student receives in veterans' educational benefits. In other words, veterans qualify for lower benefits if they choose to participate in national service programs.

At some low-cost institutions, educational benefits provided to veterans through the GI Bill either significantly reduce the national service award or deny access to this benefit altogether. In States such as California, where the true cost of living is not accurately captured by an institution's cost of attendance, veterans are often unfairly denied the educational award they earn for participation in national service programs.

Full access to these benefits would make a significant difference for some students in high-cost areas, particularly when college costs continue to increase at a rate of 6 or 7 percent a year. Additionally, removing GI Bill benefits from the maximum educational award calculation would likely increase the enrollment of veterans in national service programs, an idea that I hope all of us would support.

Our Nation's veterans are experienced leaders with invaluable skills acquired through years of military service. These qualities make them ideal candidates for volunteer opportunities, yet only about 2 percent of the total AmeriCorps participants are veterans. That is due in large part to the fact that current law discourages this type of service among America's veteran population.

National service programs provide important services that improve the lives of others. Increasing the enrollment of veterans in these programs will only serve to improve their quality and effectiveness.

This amendment is consistent with provisions included in the Higher Education Opportunity Act enacted last year that excluded veterans' educational benefits from a student's eligibility for Federal financial aid. Policies on veterans' educational benefits should be consistent. Students should not be denied the educational assistance they earn through volunteer programs because of their service in America's Armed Forces.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment so that we can build on our commitment to promote and advance educational opportunities for America's veterans.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman from New Jersey is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, the committee majority supports the amendment and thanks the gentleman for offering it.

The amendment is a great idea for two reasons: First, it will significantly broaden participation by our veterans in the national service programs. The skills and abilities and integrity that veterans bring to these programs will no doubt enhance each one of them. And then secondly, we share with the author of the amendment the conclusion that service in the Armed Forces should not act as a penalty, which it sort of does right now. By counting veterans' benefits against the subsidy characterization, the award characterization, in effect we say that veterans aren't entitled to the same benefit everybody else is. So we think it is an excellent amendment, and we enthusiastically support it.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the honorable gentleman from California, the ranking member on Education and Labor, Congressman McKEON.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I rise in support of the Hunter amendment.

The gentleman that is the sponsor of this amendment speaks with great expertise when he talks of military and veterans affairs, having joined the Marine Corps the day after 9/11 and having served two tours in Iraq and one in Afghanistan. In fact, when he signed up to run for Congress, he was recalled up, sent back to Afghanistan, and couldn't even campaign. So I thank him for offering this amendment.

Since passage of the original GI Bill, we have provided educational benefits to soldiers returning from battle. Helping these brave men and women pursue a college education is a small price to pay for their valiant service to our Nation. These benefits are not a government handout; rather, they're a small token of our appreciation for their willingness to serve. Unfortunately, the education awards under the GI Bill may actually be held against veterans participating in national service by sometimes decreasing their ability to receive other educational awards.

I support the Hunter amendment because it restores fairness in how veterans' educational awards are treated. This amendment is consistent with bipartisan reforms enacted last year to the Higher Education Act, and it is consistent with our commitment to the veterans who have already given so much to our Nation.

Mr. HUNTER. I would like to thank Congressman ANDREWS and the Democrat side for just recognizing that we have the best of this generation serving in the U.S. military at this time. They are put under extreme stress all the time. If there is any way that we can give back to them, for them to have higher education opportunities and for them to share in those things which people who did not serve share in and not to penalize them, we should do so.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER).

AMENDMENT NO. 4 OFFERED BY MR. LOEBSACK

SUBTITLE K—VOLUNTEER GENERATION FUND
Sec. 199P. Volunteer generation fund.

The CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 250, the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. LOEBSACK) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. LOEBSACK. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself as much time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I want to thank Chairman MILLER, Ranking Member McKEON, Subcommittee Chairwoman MCCARTHY, and Ranking Member PLATTS for their bipartisan work on the GIVE Act. I am offering this amendment today to build on this important legislation and increase volunteerism across America.

My amendment authorizes grants to nonprofits, including faith-based organizations, and to States to increase the supply of volunteers in this country, and to strengthen volunteer infrastructure organizations nationwide. These grants will help address national and State priorities, especially in areas with the greatest need for this support.

I have never seen more clearly the need for volunteers than in Iowa this past year. In June 2008, Iowa was overcome by severe flooding. As my colleagues know, 85 of Iowa's 99 counties were declared Presidential disaster areas. The Second District, which I represent, sustained the greatest damage. Thousands of homes and businesses were destroyed, families were displaced, and the devastation was indescribable.

Needless to say, we are still struggling to get back on our feet.

In the initial days of the floods, we faced many challenges. Among them was the need to coordinate volunteer efforts. United Way of East Central Iowa; Serve the City, a local ecumenical group; and several major corporations were all involved in various efforts to recruit and deploy volunteers, but there was no centralized location and point of contact.

In late June United Way of East Central Iowa formed a partnership with Community Corrections Improvement Association, the Iowa Commission on Volunteer Service, and AmeriCorps. Together they created the East Central Iowa Volunteer Reception Center to organize and coordinate volunteer responses to the disasters. AmeriCorps/

VISTA team members, working with the United Way and the Iowa Commission staff, opened the volunteer center within 3 weeks of the flood's crest and began taking calls from both volunteers and those who needed volunteer help. AmeriCorps members have helped coordinate over 800,000 volunteer hours through eight volunteer reception centers.

Iowa would not have made the progress it has made in the wake of disasters without volunteers, and Iowa is not alone. Across this country States are faced with growing unmet public needs which can be better addressed by leveraging the work of volunteers. And I might just say, as we speak, we have over 600 student volunteers from universities from all over the country taking time in their spring break to help us continue work in Iowa. This amendment is the missing link in the current set of strategies at the Corporation For National and Community Service to achieve the goal of enabling all Americans to make a contribution through service.

A modest but critical Federal investment in a new volunteer generation fund that builds capacity and access for millions of new volunteers can leverage billions of dollars in volunteer services to some of the country's neediest citizens. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment, and I will submit an article written by an AmeriCorps intern, Lacy White, who was inspired by the work of all the AmeriCorps members in what they were doing and asked if she could do her part by recording their story.

AMERICORPS FUELS HOPE THROUGH DISASTER RELIEF

(By Lacy White)

The summer of 2008 brought tornados and floods that devastated many Iowa towns. In May, an F5 tornado tore through Parkersburg, leveling almost half the town. Homeowners emerged from their basements to find nothing on their lots but piles of rubble and debris. In June, record flooding submerged towns like Oakville and Cedar Rapids. When the waters receded, residents were left with houses full of molding walls and possessions beyond salvaging.

Families across the state were in dire need of help, the damage so extensive that any hope of rebuilding their homes—and their lives—seemed out of reach. Many did not know how or where to begin the enormous task that lay ahead.

AmeriCorps quickly stepped in to offer its service—hundreds of members arrived eager to do whatever necessary to rally and relieve distressed communities. Arriving in Parkersburg less than a week after the tornado, Bill Dillon, a Corporation for National Community Service (CNCS) program director, realized the greatest need was for organization. Dozens of volunteers sat waiting to be deployed, but there was no system for coordinating them. “We determined the most appropriate use for our team was to set up a Volunteer Reception Center (VRC) to which all groups—internal and traveling through—could report,” said Dillon. This is also where homeowners could call in and register for assistance.

The VRCs established by AmeriCorps teams across the state provided the key element of efficiency to the work being done in each town, benefiting not only AmeriCorps members, but any volunteer who registered at the VRC. They also became a place for residents to socialize with volunteers, to tell their stories or take their minds off their trouble. Perry Onorio, a member of the Washington Conservation Corps AmeriCorps program, served as head of the Oakville VRC. “I had direct contact with almost everyone in that town,” he said. “I talked to them and let them vent or let them know what was going on. I assured them there were people who had come in solely to help them rebuild their lives.”

It was this assurance by Onorio—and countless other AmeriCorps members like him—that helped facilitate one of the program's most important duties: to offer hope to those who could not see past the devastation in front of them, those who saw their belongings lost or destroyed, their futures uncertain. Many thought their homes were beyond repair and there was nothing they could do. But, as Onorio observed in Oakville, their outlook evolved: “As people started seeing things change in town it became more hopeful. Once a group like AmeriCorps comes in and does a lot of the work for you—rips out your carpet and drywall—it looks much more doable. You can say, ‘I can totally fix this up now.’ I saw that change in people on a daily basis as homes were gutted out.”

In flooded towns, the work consisted of draining houses of water and mud, throwing out waterlogged furniture and appliances, removing everything down to the studs and power washing inside and out. In Parkersburg, it was removing debris—everything from trees to metal to glass to concrete to piles of lumber—and anything salvageable from inside houses. AmeriCorps members were able to undertake a tremendous amount of manual labor, freeing many residents from the emotional task of gutting their own homes. Their tireless commitment to backbreaking work in sweltering humidity and the enthusiasm with which they met each challenge provided the support residents needed to endure the summer.

AmeriCorps members also took something away from the experience of disaster relief. Katie Graham, a member of Volunteers in Service to America (VISTA), shared the lesson she learned from her ten week term in Cedar Rapids: “I learned the importance of living for someone other than yourself, for giving even when you think you have nothing to give, for giving without an expectation of being thanked. And I learned how much community service can tie you to the place where you serve; you sow a part of yourself into whatever community you serve, so returning is a little like coming back home. It's familiar, it's comfortable, it's yours.” This is a sentiment echoed by many other members who found it difficult to leave when their first term was up, often requesting to extend their service to a second term. In Cedar Rapids, VISTA remains a strong presence as it continues to help the town in its rebuilding process.

Across the state, AmeriCorps helped accomplish in weeks what it would have taken individual homeowners and volunteers months to complete. The program's quick and effective response cleared a space for hope to rise up from the muck and debris, and there are those now rebuilding on foundations AmeriCorps helped clear and cleanse. It has left a lasting impression on the towns through proactive and sustainable volunteer coordination systems, thousands of eager helping hands and relentless positivity. It was this selfless desire to alleviate the frustration and vulnerability of those left suddenly in need that put so many Iowa residents on the road to reclaiming their lives in the wake of disaster.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, I rise to claim the time in opposition to this amendment.

The CHAIR. The gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, Members on both sides of the aisle have worked hard to strike a balance on this legislation. We have produced a major reorganization and renewal of national service programs, and we've done so without layering on unnecessary new programs.

The purpose of this amendment is to generate volunteers, which is the purpose of the whole bill. It's a worthy goal, and that's why we've taken steps to ensure that all national service programs, in one way or another, encourage volunteerism. The approach included in the bill, agreed to in a bipartisan manner, is the right one. Rather than creating a new program, which this amendment does, we should work to achieve the goal of generating volunteers under the existing programs authorized in this legislation.

Therefore, I oppose this redundant amendment and encourage my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LOEBACK. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to my colleague ROB ANDREWS.

Mr. ANDREWS. I thank my friend for yielding.

I rise in support of the amendment he's offering.

The ranking member is correct that the purpose of the underlying bill is to generate volunteers, but I think that the gentleman from Iowa has put a finer point on that and given the structure of the program a specific place at which volunteers will be generated.

It is a full-time job to generate volunteers. You need someone who gets up every morning dedicated to that purpose. And although the present program has generated millions of hours of volunteer service, I think too often that's been done in a way that's not as effective and robust as it could be.

So we support the gentleman's amendment and urge its adoption because I believe it will result in a quantum leap in the number of volunteer hours.

Mr. LOEBACK. Mr. Chairman, at this time I want to thank my colleagues for their consideration of my amendment and urge its passage.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. LOEBACK).

The question was taken; and the Chair announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa will be postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 5 OFFERED BY MR. ROE OF TENNESSEE, AS MODIFIED

The CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 5 printed in House Report 111-39.

Mr. ROE of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment made in order under the rule.

The CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 5 offered by Mr. ROE of Tennessee:

In paragraph (1)(C) of section 501(a) of the National and Community Service Act of 1990 as proposed to be added by section 1841 of the bill, strike "such sums as may be necessary" and all that follows and insert "$405,000,000 for fiscal year 2010 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 2011 through 2014."

The CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 250, the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. ROE) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

Mr. ROE of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be modified by the text I placed at the desk.

The CHAIR. The Clerk will report the modification.

The Clerk read as follows:

Modification to amendment No. 5 offered by Mr. ROE of Tennessee:

In paragraph (2)(A) of section 501(a) of the National and Community Service Act of 1990 as proposed to be added by section 1841 of the bill, strike "such sums as may be necessary" and all that follows and insert "$405,000,000 for fiscal year 2010 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 2011 through 2014."

The CHAIR. Is there objection to the modification of the amendment?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROE of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1½ minutes.

My amendment would cap the authorization level in this legislation for fiscal year 2010 at the fiscal year 2008 level of $405 million. This is 5 percent less than fiscal year 2009, which I think reflects what State and local governments are asking their programs to do all over the country.

The legislation we have before us today continues the process of turning the AmeriCorps program into a much more streamlined, cost-effective program that is leveraging a great deal of service for dollars we are spending. While I have some concerns that a few programs want additional scrutiny, the majority of the programs within the national service laws are performing well.

With that being said, the fact is we are in a recession and face record deficits. The legislation before us includes a sense of Congress that the AmeriCorps and several other programs should increase the number of volunteers to 250,000, up from its current level of just over 75,300, which, if achieved, would represent a 300 percent increase. While it seems to me this is a worthy goal for the future, I'm concerned about the temptation to try to get there all at once without some direction to the Appropriations Committee on how much funding to allocate the program.

Nothing in this amendment prevents the program from growing in future years. If our economy gets back on track and revenues increase, which we all are hoping will happen, I think it's perfectly reasonable in the future years to increase the funding for the program. At least for this year, however, when our focus should be on tightening our belts to lower our deficits, this amendment sets what I think is a reasonable boundary for the program.

I urge adoption of this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I rise to claim time in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIR. The gentleman from New Jersey is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, we oppose this amendment because it replaces carefully reasoned consideration of the growth of the program with an arbitrary standard.

I'm quite sympathetic to the author's concern that no program grow more quickly than it should. I think that he's right, and I think that that's a concern we should have in every aspect of the Federal budget. But I think that the proper place to adjudicate that concern is in the appropriations bill.

What the bill before us does is to set a maximum limit, an authorization limit, for how much money can go into these programs. As the gentleman knows, each year the Appropriations Committee will consider, among competing priorities for the public funds, how much money this program should receive. The purpose of an authorization level is aspirational. It is to set a goal that we think is the optimal goal. But we may be wrong. It's shocking, but it's been known to happen around here. If that's the case, it is the job of the Appropriations Committee, after full public hearing and usually under a very open procedure here on the floor, for Members to come and debate the proper amount of funding that should go into such a program.

So we believe that the goals are right. We believe that the aspirational goals in this organization bill are quite right. But we understand that it's our responsibility to subject those aspirational goals to the rigor of the annual appropriations process, and that is what would happen if the bill passes without this amendment's being adopted.

So although we certainly understand the gentleman's concerns, we respectfully oppose his amendment because it deprives the appropriate committee, the Appropriations Committee, and the entire body of the right to make that annual assessment as to what the appropriate level of funding is.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ROE of Tennessee. Mr. Chair, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished ranking member of the Education and Labor Committee, the gentleman from California (Mr. McKEON).

Mr. McKEON. I thank the gentleman for yielding and welcome him to the committee, a new member of our committee and a great addition to the committee.

The gentleman that just spoke is correct. We do have the appropriators who spend the money, but that does not mean that the authorizers should give up their responsibilities, and they have the responsibility of putting in the bills what they think should be spent.

None of us needs reminding about the grave economic and fiscal challenges we face at this time. In fact, a child born today carries a debt of at least $175,000. That's the equivalent of having a mortgage and no house.

The Roe amendment is a small step but a very important one. It underscores our commitment to fiscal responsibility. And I think, as authorizers, we can step up and do that, and I commend him for offering the amendment.

The GIVE Act, as currently drafted, offers no clear guidance on funding levels for AmeriCorps and its supporting programs. Rather, this section of the bill is merely authorized to spend "such sums as may be required," and we would be giving up the opportunity to advise the appropriators.

As we implement major structural changes in the bill, such as the new fixed-price grant structure, it would be prudent to take our time before deploying on a larger scale. Therefore, although we have encouraged the corporation to actually expand these programs, I support this amendment to authorize funding for the coming year at the fiscal year 2008 level and allow flexibility in future years to help reach the goal we have articulated.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I continue to reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ROE of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

I know I am new here in Congress and probably don't understand the way things work, but I have a basic philosophy that I have applied throughout my public service. It's very simple: The government should spend less than it takes in. It's a concept that our State governments and local governments achieve every year, and I know there's pain, but they get it, and it's because that's what they have to do. States like California and Tennessee have to make major spending cuts this year to bring their budgets in balance. The city I was mayor of has a 5 percent cut in their budget this year.

Congress, unfortunately, seems to be best at completely ignoring this principle. I'm not blaming Republicans or Democrats, because it has occurred under the watch of Presidents of both parties. But now is our chance to do something about it. Our economy is in crisis, our deficits are soaring, and I think it's reasonable to ask good programs like AmeriCorps to join the rest of the country in tightening our belts and making do with what we have for 1 more year while we try to get out of this crisis.

With that I urge adoption of my amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, we would again respectfully request a "no" vote on this amendment.

The fiscal concerns that the gentleman raises are quite valid. We believe that the procedure that's in place to address those fiscal concerns is the right one, and we actually believe that this bill in many ways is a partial answer to the country's fiscal crisis in three ways:

First, it promotes many more people getting a higher education. A skilled workforce is one of the most important ways we can grow the economy.

Second, it addresses some of the most pressing needs of the country that are precluding us from growth. Whether it's illiteracy, juvenile delinquency, gaps in our health care system, this underlying bill, we believe, addresses those needs, and this amendment artificially cuts off funding for some of those needs.

And, finally, we think that the volunteer hours that are leveraged by this legislation accomplish so much more for the commonwealth at no cost to the public treasury.

□ 1415

We believe that the amendment artificially cuts off those possibilities and we urge a "no" vote.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. ROE), as modified.

The question was taken; and the Chair announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. ROE of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee will be postponed.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Ms. KILROY) having assumed the chair, Mr. PASTOR of Arizona, Chair of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 1388) to reauthorize and reform the national service laws, had come to no resolution thereon.

PERMISSION TO REDUCE TIME FOR ELECTRONIC VOTING DURING PROCEEDINGS TODAY

Mr. ANDREWS. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that, during consideration of H.R. 1388 pursuant to House Resolution 250, the Chair may reduce to 2 minutes the minimum time for electronic voting under clause 6 of rule XVIII and clauses 8 and 9 of rule XX.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

GENERATIONS INVIGORATING VOLUNTEERISM AND EDUCATION ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 250 and rule XVIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill, H.R. 1388.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H.R. 1388) to reauthorize and reform the national service laws, with Mr. PASTOR of Arizona in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIR. When the Committee of the Whole rose earlier today, amendment No. 5 had been postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 6 OFFERED BY MS. KILROY

The CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 6 printed in House Report 111-39.

Ms. KILROY. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

The CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 6 offered by Ms. KILROY:

In section 122(a)(2)(A) of the National and Community Service Act of 1990 as proposed to be amended by section 1302 of the bill, redesignate clauses (vii) and (viii) as clauses (ix) and (x), respectively, and insert after clause (vi) the following new clauses:

"(vii) addressing childhood obesity by providing volunteers to organize and supervise physical education classes and after school physical activities at elementary and secondary schools and providing nutrition education to students;

“(viii) addressing issues faced by homebound elderly citizens through food deliveries, legal and medical services provided in the home, and providing transportation;”

The CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 250, the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. Kilroy) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Ohio.

Ms. KILROY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise today regarding my amendment to the Generations Invigorating Volunteerism and Education Act, or the GIVE Act.

My amendment would add additional opportunities to the GIVE Act by adding the Healthy Futures Corps, by helping children and the elderly.

Mr. Chairman and Members, as a former VISTA volunteer, as a former school board member who helped bring City Year to my community, and as a former county commissioner who worked diligently on the issues of childhood obesity and hunger in our community, as well as with senior options, issues facing our homebound elderly, this amendment continues some of the issues and concerns that I have seen and recognized back in central Ohio.

As somebody who has had close involvement with AmeriCorps and City Year and with VISTA, I can assert that these are very cost-effective programs that provide vital services to our community. In this instance, today, in Ohio, more than 30 percent of our children between the ages of 10 to 17 are found to be overweight or obese.

As we know, childhood obesity leads to lifelong health consequences, including diabetes and heart disease. Our poorest children are more than twice as likely to be overweight. At a time when our schools are facing cuts, physical education classes are being cut and parents are working more than one job to keep families together, this program would allow us to step up, to help educate our children about living healthy lifestyles.

My amendment focuses volunteers towards programs that combat obesity through physical education for children, after-school activities and nutrition classes. We simply cannot continue to ignore this nationwide epidemic and also the corollary epidemics of preventable chronic diseases.

Physical education opportunities not only help to build strong bodies but help to build for these children habits for a healthy lifetime of good, healthy living. And, as I have seen this as a member of the school board, I believe that including physical education and exercise in our children's daily lives also helps them improve their learning.

Along with our children, our elderly face challenges in obtaining access to health care and other services. Many senior citizens face restrictions on their movement, making them unable to leave their homes. It shuts them off from the world, and not only from medical care, but from social interaction, from companionship, dealing with other human beings.

Our homebound elderly struggle to get food and adequate nutrition, because they are unable to shop for groceries. It can be a lonely life and a dangerous one where a fall can mean a painful end of their life. My amendment would also allow volunteers to bring food, medical supplies, and legal counsel to these senior citizens who may never be able to access these services otherwise.

I ask for support of children and the elderly by supporting my amendment to direct volunteer services towards combating childhood obesity and providing services to the homebound elderly, to our senior citizens who we need to respect and care for in their later years.

Mr. Chairman, America is facing unprecedented challenges, and it is in these times that Americans must come together to support one another by directing our attention to those who truly need our help.

It was heartwarming to me to learn in our local newspapers that many people who have lost their jobs are devoting themselves to volunteerism, putting their talents to work.

President Obama has called on Congress to create new opportunities for Americans, to build a stronger country, stronger communities and calling for a new era of service.

This bill, the GIVE Act, is an answer to that call, a call to all Americans to help give back to their communities and to offer help to those of us in greatest need.

Again, I can testify from my experience as a VISTA volunteer and being inspired by the young people in City Year, we see people helping people, helping themselves. We see young people becoming role models for other young people, and we see these young volunteers, themselves, learning and developing their own leadership skills.

I support the GIVE Act. It helps people of all ages, from our schools and our school children to our seniors and encourages others to invest their time and passion in their communities.

I urge support of this bill, which will signal a new era of social responsibility.

The CHAIR. The time of the gentlewoman has expired.

Mr. PLATTS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to claim the time in opposition to the amendment, although I am not opposed to the amendment.

The CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman from Pennsylvania is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. PLATTS. Mr. Chairman, I would just quickly say I support the amendment, commend the maker of the amendment, the gentlelady from Ohio, for ensuring that through the GIVE Act we are looking out for our Nation's youth and our elderly, especially when it comes to their health and nutrition, and especially in the area of physical fitness. As we know, many schools are struggling to be able to provide physical education classes.

I have a fourth grader and sixth grader and know how important those classes are to them, both from a health standpoint and from just a release to be out of school now and then and burn off a little energy. I think that probably makes them all the more focused in the classroom and maybe a little less antsy in the classroom, which benefits their teachers as well.

I support the amendment.

I yield 3 minutes to the gentlelady from North Carolina (Ms. FOXX).

Ms. FOXX. I want to thank my colleague from Pennsylvania for yielding the time.

I want to thank the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KILROY) for her service in various governmental capacities and for her amendment. We all agree that service to this Nation is important. That's why all of us are here. We serve our constituents.

So I would like to ask the gentlewoman, Ms. KILROY, why she voted to block consideration of a bill to require the Treasury Secretary to recoup the outrageous bonuses to AIG employees.

This week, $165 million was awarded to 73 AIG employees. Today's vote would have stopped the bonus payments on behalf of American taxpayers and prevented future abuses of bailout funds. All Americans, my constituents, your constituents, which we serve, are outraged over this because it is taxpayers who are keeping this country alive.

So I ask the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. Kilroy) why she didn't stand up and serve her constituents today. We all had a chance to do something today.

I would like to yield to the gentlewoman for a response.

Ms. KILROY. Mr. Chairman, I would like to address those comments. Nobody is more outraged by the actions of AIG than myself.

Ms. FOXX. Reclaiming my time, I would like to ask the gentlewoman to answer my question. Why did you not vote for that bill to stop these payments?

Ms. KILROY. If the gentlelady will yield, there have been votes on record in this House, including a vote prior to the last allocation of TARP funds, in which I am on record as asking for restrictions on executive compensation.

Ms. FOXX. Reclaiming my time, I would like to ask the gentlelady to answer my question.

The CHAIR. Members should direct their remarks in debate to the Chair.

Ms. FOXX. Mr. Chairman, I have asked the gentlewoman from Ohio for a simple answer and I am not getting that. I would like to ask her to please answer the question that I asked her: Why did she not vote to stop the bonuses to the AIG employees?

Does the gentlelady refuse to answer?

The CHAIR. Members are reminded to direct their comments to the Chair.

Ms. FOXX. I yield to the gentlelady from Ohio.

Ms. KILROY. It appears the gentlelady from North Carolina does not like the answers that she has been receiving.

I am on record as being against excessive compensation, restrictions on bonuses paid to those recipients of the TARP fund.

I think there should be a time and a place for this debate, and it is unfortunate that a debate on volunteerism and service has been turned into a debate on another issue.

Ms. FOXX. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, the gentlewoman from Ohio says there is a time and place for this debate. She indicates this is not the time and place.

It is my belief that this is the time and place for that debate. It is a time and place for there to be accountability and responsibility. We have heard those words over and over and over from the other side and from the President. It's time that the other side decides to live up to their responsibility and their accountability.

The CHAIR. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has 1 minute remaining.

□ 1430

Mr. PLATTS. Mr. Chairman, I again rise in support of the amendment, and thank the maker of the amendment for offering it and urge a "yes" vote.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KILROY).

The question was taken; and the Chair announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Ms. KILROY. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Ohio will be postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 7 OFFERED BY MR. ROSKAM

The CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 7 printed in House Report 111-39.

Mr. ROSKAM. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

The CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 7 offered by Mr. ROSKAM:

In the table of contents in section 1(b) of the bill, strike the item relating to section 1601 of the bill and insert the following:

"Sec. 1601. Family and medical leave and reports."

In section 1513 of the bill, strike paragraphs (1) and (2), and redesignate paragraphs (3) and (4) as paragraphs (1) and (2), respectively.

SEC. 1601. FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE AND REPORTS.

(a) FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE.—Section 171(a)(1) (42 U.S.C. 12631(a)(1)) is amended by striking "with respect to a project" and inserting "with respect to a project authorized under the national service laws".

(b) REPORTS.—Section 172 (42 U.S.C. 12632) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(d) EVALUATION USING PROGRAM ASSESSMENT RATING TOOL.—

"(1) STUDY.—The Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall conduct a study to evaluate the programs authorized by this Act, including the amendments made by this Act, under the Program Assessment Rating Tool or a successor performance assessment tool that is developed by the Office of Management and Budget.

"(2) COMPONENTS OF STUDY.—The study conducted under paragraph (1) shall consist of—"(A) a comprehensive examination of the program;

"(B) an examination of the programs cost-effectiveness, particularly in relation to other comparable AmeriCorps service programs;

"(C) whether the program has data and quantifiable measures to adequately assess the program's progress toward achieving its strategic goals;

"(D) a review of the Office of Management and Budget's 2005 Program Assessment Rating Tool assessment of the program; and

"(E) recommendations for future Congressional treatment of the program, particularly assessing whether the program is duplicative or could be more efficiently managed.

"(3) SUBMISSION.—The results of the study conducted under paragraph (1) shall be submitted within 6 months of the date of enactment of this subsection."

The CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 250, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. ROSKAM) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. ROSKAM. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. In a nutshell, this is an amendment that is meant to follow on some of the themes that President Obama articulated in his inauguration where he said—and I'm paraphrasing—"Programs that are good, we are going to continue to do, but those that are not so good, let's not do them."

Toward that end, this is an attempt to give us a diagnostic tool to make sure that we have a clear understanding of what's working and what's not working.

So, in a nutshell, Mr. Chairman, the amendment directs the Office of Management and Budget to evaluate all programs authorized by the entire legislation under the Program Assessment Rating Tool or some successor standard to that.

It also directs the GAO to conduct a review of the National Civilian Community Corps program, and it strikes one of the underlying provisions of the bill which, in my view, and I hope in the majority's view, we can do a little bit better, which would have eliminated the Community Corps' annual reporting requirement, and it would have said let us evaluate this in 2014. But instead, with the amendment, if it's adopted, Mr. Chairman, it will say let's continue on an annual basis with the evaluations.

So I think it's short, sweet, not meant to be controversial, and it's my understanding that it is perceived in that way.

With that, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to claim time in opposition, although we do not oppose the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR (Mr. BLUMENAUER). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I thank you. We will support this amendment because we certainly want whatever analytical tools the Office of Management and Budget or whomever uses to rigorously look at all aspects of this bill and this program.

We believe that it's a very sound program, but we certainly invite rigorous scrutiny of the expenditures of the program when it's adopted.

I do want to address some of the remarks by my dear friend from North Carolina. I notice she's left the floor.

She asked the rhetorical question, Mr. Chairman, "When is the right time to discuss the bonuses paid by some of the recipients of the financial recovery legislation of last fall?" The answer is: Probably within the next 24 hours.

It's the intention of the House leadership, my understanding, to bring to the floor a bill which does not make a political point but actually solves the problem.

So I think the short answer to the gentlelady's rhetorical question is: The right time is when you know what you're doing, when you have found the mechanism that will actually solve the problem, and you can bring the bill to the floor when it's the issue on the floor, and not make it into an ancillary diversion, which is what happened here.

This bill is about improving and strengthening national service. We believe this amendment is consistent with the bill, and we will support the amendment.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ROSKAM. I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. ROE).

Mr. ROE of Tennessee. I thank the gentleman for yielding. I rise in support of conducting a GAO study of whether the NCCC and PART programs are accomplishing their mission in a cost-effective manner.

While reauthorizing the Corporation for National and Community Service in our committee, I learned that approximately up to $27,000 dollars is spent per volunteer in the NCCC. In Tennessee, where I am from, you can go to a university in our State for 3 years for that.

I understand that this is a residential program, so there are additional costs for this program that don't exist for other programs, but it still seems high to me. I think it would be helpful to have an independent evaluation of this program to prove its effectiveness, and I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. ANDREWS. I support the amendment and yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ROSKAM. I thank the gentleman from New Jersey, thank the gentleman from Tennessee, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. ROSKAM).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 8 OFFERED BY MS. MARKEY OF COLORADO

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 8 printed in House Report 111-39.

Ms. MARKEY of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 8 offered by Ms. MARKEY of Colorado:

In section 129A(b) of the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (as proposed to be inserted by section 1307 of the bill), strike “$600” and insert “$800” and strike “$800” and insert “$1,000”.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 250, the gentlewoman from Colorado (Ms. MARKEY) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Colorado.

Ms. MARKEY of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I'd like to thank Chairman MILLER, Congresswoman MCCARTHY, and the entire committee for their diligent work on this important legislation.

I rise today to urge my colleagues to support my amendment to H.R. 1388. My amendment would increase the amount of funds that go to organizations to support national servicemembers. AmeriCorps is one such organization, and its members are making a difference in communities across the United States.

Each year, AmeriCorps offers 75,000 opportunities for adults of all ages and backgrounds to serve through a network of partnerships with local and national nonprofit groups, including nine in my home State of Colorado.

These projects have helped to coordinate such days as Martin Luther King Day of Service and Colorado Cares Day.

Within my congressional district, the Weld County Youth Conservation Corps contracts with the city of Greeley and does everything from working in museums to making buildings handicapped-accessible to eradicating weeds in our State parks. The Corps maintains the Poudre River Trail Corridor, works at the Wray Fish Hatchery, and supports the forest service. In my rural district, VISTA members address poverty needs and disaster relief.

Additionally, one of my constituents, Justin Horn, won “Corps Member of the Year” for the State of Colorado in 2008. Constituents in my district contribute to the great work being done around Colorado, along with 75,000 AmeriCorps programs across the country.

To help our men and women do this admirable work, Congress established the Education Award Program in 1998 in order to address concerns about costs organizations incurred from hosting national servicemembers.

Currently, organizations receive only $600 to support the individuals who are enrolled in full-time national service positions. This small amount helps to pay for operational and member support costs, including a living allowance. My amendment proposes an increase to that amount. In today's economy, these organizations are struggling.

My amendment is not only an investment that will boost these organizations and their noble work but, at the same time, improve these communities throughout the United States.

I urge all Members to support my amendment to H.R. 1388.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PLATTS. Mr. Chair, I rise to claim time in opposition, but I rise in support of the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. PLATTS. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

As I said, I rise in support of the amendment in strong recognition of the National Service Corporation's request for this additional ability to ensure they can recruit needed personnel.

So I urge a “yes” vote.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Would the gentlewoman from Colorado yield?

Ms. MARKEY of Colorado. Yes, I yield.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. I want to thank the gentlewoman for introducing this amendment. It's an important amendment so that we can preserve the quality of these programs, and we can make sure that they remain accessible to all those who want to participate.

This will help such grantees as the Boys and Girls Club of America, the Student Conservation Association, and so many other organizations that are responsible for covering this cost. This will help them out in that effort.

They clearly are putting their own resources into this program. This is the Federal Government providing up as a good partner to increase the opportunities that the gentlewoman from Colorado has supported and spoken to the committee about.

We support the amendment. Thank you.

Ms. MARKEY of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Colorado (Ms. MARKEY).

The question was taken; and the Acting Chair announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Ms. MARKEY of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Colorado will be postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 9 OFFERED BY MR. HILL

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 9 printed in House Report 111-39.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chair, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 9 offered by Mr. HILL:

In section 122(b)(1)(I) of the National and Community Service Act of 1990 as proposed to be amended by section 1302 of the bill, insert “, such as sending care packages to members of the Armed Forces deployed in combat zones overseas” before the period.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 250, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. HILL) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HILL. I am happy that we are taking up this important piece of legislation today. I think it's the right thing to do. The President and the First Lady have, of course, been strong advocates for national service programs.

The amendment that I am offering today evolved as a result of a bill that I introduced in this session. It's House Resolution 1090, called the Homefront Heroes Tax Relief Act. It's a bill that gives support to our troops and our military families who are serving our country.

This legislation actually came about because of a constituent of mine in Bloomington, Indiana—Indiana University Professor Catherine Dalton—who came up with the idea. She had been sending care packages to Iraq and incurring a lot of expense. These care packages were sent to families and to soldiers in Iraq that were not related to her own family.

Everybody wants to help our troops, and this fine young woman was doing just that. She was helping our troops, on her own. But she was also incurring a lot of expense. So she came to me and said, "Congressman HILL, I think it would be a good idea to help people like myself who are trying to help our troops, and that is the expenses that we incur are tax deductible on our income taxes."

So I filed the bill, the Homefront Heroes Tax Relief Act, to allow people like Professor Dalton to do just that.

So my amendment simply ensures that sending care packages to members of the armed services deployed in combat are also included in the eligible national service program.

Currently, people like Professor Dalton have to just absorb these expenses. If this amendment is passed, it would allow volunteer programs that send care packages to members of the armed services to be eligible for grant funding under the GIVE Act.

With that, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PLATTS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to claim time in opposition to the amendment, although I am not opposed to the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. PLATTS. I yield myself such time as I may consume. I rise in strong support of the amendment. I thank the gentleman from Indiana for offering this amendment.

Having had the privilege to visit our courageous troops eight times in Iraq and five times in Afghanistan, I know how much these care packages from home really mean to the troops, and how they look forward to them and what a morale boost it is.

I think recognizing this type of service, especially to those who are serving us in harm's way, is a wonderful amendment, a change to the legislation, and urge a "yes" vote.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Will the gentleman yield for 30 seconds?

Mr. HILL. I will yield.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. I just want to commend him for offering this amendment, for all of his work on behalf of not only our veterans, but service people on active duty and in support of his constituent from Indiana that came up with this idea to start sending care packages to our troops in service in the theaters of battle.

We clearly think this is a consistent use and allowable use under the National Service Act, and we welcome the amendment and support it.

Mr. HILL. I yield myself such time as I may consume. I thank the chairman and the ranking member for this bipartisan support. This is a bipartisan bill and amendment, and I am sure it will gain a lot of Democrat and Republican votes.

This is the right thing to do. This is how democracy is supposed to work. We are supposed to listen to our constituents who have good ideas and come here to Washington to pass good legislation. So I am happy that we have this bipartisan support.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. HILL).

AMENDMENT NO. 10 OFFERED BY MR. TEAGUE

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 10 printed in House Report 111-39.

Mr. TEAGUE. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 10 offered by Mr. TEAGUE:

In section 122(a)(4)(A)(ii) of the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (as proposed to be inserted by section 1302 of the bill), insert after "opportunities" the following: " , including such opportunities that reflect their military experience".

In section 122(a)(4)(A)(iii) of the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (as proposed to be inserted by section 1302 of the bill), insert after "certification" the following: " , licensure, and credentials, including coordinating with and assisting State and local agencies administering veterans education benefits and programs for internships and fellowships that could lead to employment in the private and public sector".

In section 122(a)(4)(A)(iv) of the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (as proposed to be inserted by section 1302 of the bill), strike "active duty military members" and insert the following: "members of the Armed Forces serving on active duty, including such efforts to help veterans file benefits claims and assist Federal agencies in providing services to veterans".

In section 122(a)(4)(A)(vi) of the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (as proposed to be inserted by section 1302 of the bill), insert after "disabled," the following: "rural,".

In section 122(a)(4)(A)(vi) of the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (as proposed to be inserted by section 1302 of the bill), insert after "veterans" the following: " , including such projects that assist such veterans with transportation".

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 250, the gentleman from New Mexico (Mr. TEAGUE) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Mexico.

Mr. TEAGUE. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to offer an important amendment to an important piece of legislation, the GIVE Act. My amendment, which I am offering together with my friend, Congressman KLEIN of Florida, establishes that a Veterans Volunteer Corps would engage in activities that are important to veterans in my district and across the country.

Those activities include: Helping veterans pursue education and employment by coordinating with State and local agencies that administer education and job programs for veterans; helping veterans file benefit claims; and, aiding rural, disabled, and unemployed veterans with transportation needs.

This amendment is especially important for veterans in rural areas like the one I represent. Many veterans in my district have to travel 4 hours or more to reach a veterans hospital for doctor appointments. For folks who would require constant medical care, the burden of this travel weighs heavily on both the veteran and his or her family. Ensuring that a veteran can receive a helping hand for transportation through the GIVE Act will mean so much to men and women in Southern New Mexico and rural areas across the country.

Additionally, providing access to knowledgeable volunteers for veterans applying for their benefits can be a guiding light through the maze of the benefits application process. Veterans service organizations across the country already provide assistance like this at veterans benefits centers often on a volunteer basis. My amendment bolsters their critical service.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment invests in our veteran community, while also allowing our veterans to invest in themselves and their fellow vets.

I thank my chairman on the Veterans' Affairs Committee, Congressman FILNER, for his assistance and support of this amendment, and I thank Chairman MILLER.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PLATTS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to claim the time in opposition to the amendment, although I am not opposed.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. PLATTS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I just rise in support of the amendment. I want to commend the gentlemen from both New Mexico and Florida for offering this amendment, a great addition to the bill, and, as with the previous amendment, ensuring we do right by those who are serving our Nation, past and present, and that we recognize the sacrifices they have made in defense of our Nation, along with their families, and that we now keep our commitment as a Nation to them. I urge a "yes" vote.

I yield back the balance of my time.
Mr. TEAGUE. I yield to Chairman MILLER 30 seconds.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. I thank the gentleman for yielding. I want to thank him for bringing this to the committee and offering this amendment.

All of us in our congressional offices know how thin the support services for the veterans as they seek out occupational opportunities, therapy opportunities, all of the needs that our returning veterans have. The gentleman is making a great contribution to this legislation, especially since this is the first time that we have fully integrated veterans into the national service corps of this Nation. These kinds of services are in desperate need in so many areas of the country. This is a very important amendment to making sure that our veterans are able to proceed with all of their needs when they return home.

I thank the gentleman for offering the amendment, and I urge passage of the amendment.

Mr. TEAGUE. Mr. Chairman, I yield the remaining time to the cosponsor of this amendment, Congressman KLEIN of Florida.

Mr. KLEIN of Florida. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Chairman, Members, I rise in strong support of this amendment and the underlying bill. Congressman TEAGUE and I introduced this amendment in order to clarify the services that could be formed by Veterans' Corps volunteers anywhere.

I represent Palm Beach and Broward Counties in south Florida, home to many of our Nation's veterans. We all agree that when Americans who wear the military uniform return from service, they deserve to be treated with the highest level of respect and dignity that they have earned. This includes making sure they receive the benefits they are entitled to, and I know we all share that commitment.

While the United States Department of Veterans Affairs and military staff work hard to ensure that every veteran gets full advantage of the benefits they have earned, some veterans still have difficulty navigating the system and coming up with all the necessary documents. By allowing trained Veterans' Corps volunteers to guide them through this process, we can ensure more veterans obtain the benefits they were promised.

With thousands of new servicemembers returning from Afghanistan and Iraq, the job of the Veterans' Corps is more critical than ever. As of September 2008, 330,000 Iraq and Afghanistan war veterans have filed disability claims with the VA; yet, 54,000 are still waiting for confirmation that the VA even received their claims. The average wait for a disability claim is more than 6 months. This amendment could help these veterans access the services they need.

I can think of few priorities greater or more urgent than providing basic services such as these to our brave men and women who serve to protect our country, secure our peace, and safeguard our way of life.

I would like to thank my colleague, Congressman TEAGUE, for working with me on this amendment, and particularly Chairman MILLER for introducing this important piece of legislation, which will enable hundreds of thousands of Americans to dedicate their time to a cause that is bigger than themselves through volunteerism and community service. I urge adoption of this amendment and a "yes" vote on the underlying legislation for the betterment of our community and our country as a whole.

Mr. LUJAN. Mr. Chair, I rise in support of the GIVE Act and the amendment offered by Congressman TEAGUE of New Mexico and Congressman KLEIN of Florida. This is a great example of furthering our commitment to America's veterans, and I commend Congressman KLEIN and my fellow New Mexican, Congressman TEAGUE, for leading the effort to ensure our veterans have access to resources and programs that will benefit them.

During times of crisis and economic hardship, Americans have always joined together to overcome obstacles. The GIVE Act will provide Americans with the tools to get our country back on track by working in their communities. Americans of all ages have always responded to the call of service in times of crisis, and this legislation helps Americans to respond to this call by creating new opportunities to serve. This amendment ensures that those who are no strangers to service to our nation—our veterans—are included in this bill.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this amendment to put veterans back to work and train them for civilian careers. This addition would provide support to veterans in their pursuit of education and professional careers, and assist disabled and unemployed veterans with transportation needs. This is an important step in moving forward with constructive legislation that gives due respect to those who have given so much. I thank Congressman TEAGUE and Congressman KLEIN for their efforts on behalf of our nation's veterans and urge an aye vote.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Mexico (Mr. TEAGUE). The amendment was agreed to.

Sec. 198G. National Service Programs Clearinghouse.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 250, the gentlewoman from Nevada (Ms. TITUS) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Nevada.

Ms. TITUS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise today in support of this amendment, which will create a National Service Reserve Corps.

In recent years, we have watched with broken hearts when the aftermath of some natural disaster has left people homeless, jobless, and helpless. But we have also felt, as we witnessed our fellow citizens rise to the occasion with perseverance and selflessness to assist those in need, a real hope for the future.

Many wonderful Americans, including Members of this body, have reached into their hearts and their pockets to help, to serve, to work, and to give. The creation of a National Service Reserve Corps will make sure that those who are most eager to serve and already have the training that communities need can be deployed quickly and effectively.

Our amendment will create a National Service Reserve Corps composed of alumni of AmericaCorps and Senior Corps programs. These wonderful volunteers can be identified and called upon in time of natural disasters and emergencies to start the relief and rebuilding process post haste. The corps members will not only have the valuable training and experience from their year of service, but they will also receive annual training sessions in emergency response.

Our Nation is facing numerous economic challenges, and Nevada, my State, is one of the hardest hit. We have endured record foreclosures and an unemployment rate that is approaching double digits. Nevada AmeriCorps volunteers have been invaluable to our communities in need. Over 2,000 AmericaCorps members have served in 15 different programs; they have provided more than 2.5 million hours of service, and have earned over $4.7 million in education credits. In 2007, AmericaCorps programs contributed over 25,000 hours of service to Nevada, and members recruited over 3,300 community volunteers who then gave more than 23,000 hours of service.

With public need rising all across the country, we must do all we can to shore up volunteer programs and provide opportunities to those who want to be of service. By creating a National Service Reserve Corps, we will create an organized deployment system for those citizens who are ready to serve and are trained to do so.

We will also show volunteers and anyone who is considering a year of national service that we value their contributions and we will continue to honor it in the years to come. So I encourage my colleagues to support this amendment as well as final passage of the GIVE Act.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. PERRIELLO).

Mr. PERRIELLO. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of this great national service bill, and specifically the Reserve Corps amendment. I rise also as a proud member of the community service generation. My generation, which was often given a hard time for not voting, was always volunteering in record numbers. We did believe in the idea of civic duty and community service that we had learned from our grandparents in the greatest generation, and we saw through the original AmericaCorps programs and others what a great idea service was. Not only was it a chance to help out those struggling in our community, but it was a chance to build our own character and our own sense of commitment to community and to country.

I come from the nonprofit sector. I spent most of the last decade before Congress in the nonprofit sector, and I have not had a day of that experience go by that I did not feel that I had benefited as much as I had helped. I have worked in West Africa, in Darfur, and in the communities with at-risk kids back here at home, and always enjoyed and celebrated that time.

There are a few things that I have learned from that time in the nonprofit sector that I believe have gone into this Reserve Corps amendment. First and foremost is the idea that once you get someone to volunteer for a little piece of time, you have turned them into a volunteer for life. Volunteering is a wonderful program, and where we can reach out and help people become volunteers we will see that continue to come back to our communities time and time again.

And this cannot be something that is only affordable to those with wealth. We have so many displaced workers who want to volunteer, senior citizens who want to volunteer, community and high school students. And we need to be celebrating and fostering that spirit of service.

Finally, we need to respect and understand the level of professionalism in our nonprofit and volunteer sector. People learn skills here that are incredibly valuable to our community, and this Reserve Corps is based on the idea that once we have made that investment in giving someone the skills to be a great high-level professional in their community, let's keep them on as a Reserve Corps so that we can call them up in times of great national emergency, like Hurricane Katrina, to help them rebuild levees, to help build low-income homes. Let's make volunteerism not something just to do for a summer, but something to do for a lifetime.

I believe this amendment reaches into the best of the American tradition of service and the best of our sense of this being not something that happens for one generation, but across generations, particularly at this time of economic crisis when we must all come together.

Mr. PLATTS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to claim the time in opposition to the amendment, although I am not opposed to the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. PLATTS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise in support of the amendment, and commend the gentlelady from Nevada and the gentleman from Virginia for their amendment and urge a "yes" vote.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. TITUS. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Nevada (Ms. TITUS).

The question was taken; and the Acting Chair announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Ms. TITUS. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Nevada will be postponed.

Amend the table of contents in section 1(b) by striking the item relating to section 1304 and inserting the following:

Sec. 1304. Prohibited activities and ineligible organizations.

Amend the table of contents of the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (as proposed to be amended by section 4101 of the bill) by striking the item relating to section 125 and inserting the following:

“Sec. 125. Prohibited activities and ineligible organizations.”.

Ms. FOXX (during the reading). I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman from North Carolina is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. FOXX. Madam Speaker, this motion to recommit codifies current regulations with regard to activities and organizations ineligible for grants from the Corporation for National and Community Service and AmeriCorps volunteers.

The activities include lobbying, protesting, union organizing, engaging in partisan political activities or religious instruction, conducting voter registration, or providing direct benefits to for-profit businesses, labor unions or political parties.

It also adds to the list of organizations, those that promote or provide abortion, as well as for-profit organizations, political parties, labor organizations, lobbyists, and those indicted for voter fraud. Organizations are also prohibited from receiving funds under these instructions if they are also co-located with an organization that engages in prohibited activities.

Finally, no organization that receives funds under this bill may displace current employed workers or volunteers.

Madam Speaker, the overriding principle here is that money is fungible. Funds must be used for the purpose of service and encouraging others to serve within their communities. They must not be allowed to be used for prohibited activities.

Groups that might be eligible for these grants and volunteers, if this motion to recommit were not to pass, include a laundry list of organizations that engage in activities that many Americans do not support.

For example, ACORN employees and supervisors have been indicted for voter fraud in recent history. During the 2008 election, proof surfaced that voter registration by the group was, in the words of the New York Times, “vastly overstated,” including registrations for Disney characters and Dallas Cowboy football players. Experts say that instances of inaccurate registration and fraud are greater when volunteers receive payment for their services. The American taxpayer should not be forced to pay for fraudulent behavior in the name of promoting community service.

For the current 2008–2009 AmeriCorps service year, Oregon Planned Parenthood has listed position for a paid volunteer. This AmeriCorps volunteer would be responsible for “providing, promoting and protecting access to reproductive sexual health care for the women, men, and teens.”

While individuals should be aware of how to access health care services within their communities, the Federal Government prohibits use of Federal funds to be used for abortion as a form of family planning. Planned Parenthood is the largest abortion provider in the U.S. Federal taxpayer dollars should not be used to fund volunteers at organizations such as this.

Volunteerism plays a critical role in meeting many needs in our society. However, the Federal Government should not be paying individuals to volunteer their time at locations that are prohibited from receiving taxpayer dollars, especially when Americans are already facing budget constraints from all the demands they face. This is not acceptable.

This motion to recommit ensures that taxpayer dollars are not directed toward programs that are politically divisive and morally objectionable. It also ensures that AmeriCorps volunteers and recipients of corporation grants do not disrupt current volunteer activities and employee responsibilities.

I yield back the balance of my time. Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Madam Speaker, I am against it, but I will not oppose it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Members of the House, I want to begin by thanking all of you for your support for this legislation, for the bipartisan support we have received throughout the committee deliberations in our committee, and the support that we received both in the Rules Committee and on the floor today.

As we went through the amendment process, Members of Congress from both sides of the aisle spoke in favor of this most important American value, and that is service to our country, service to our neighbors, service to our communities, and that's what's reflected in this legislation. It is a rather remarkable mosaic of organizations and individuals from every corner of this country, from large cities to small rural towns that have responded to the needs of others, and they have responded without question. They have responded with their skills, their talents, and they have come forth to build a stronger America and a better community.

Earlier today at an event that we had with many of the volunteers to discuss this legislation, we were honored with the presence of Captain Scott Quilty, who retired from the Army after 10 years of service as a decorated infantry captain and Army Ranger during his tour in Iraq, where he led a platoon assigned to train, assess and build the operational capacity of a 460-man element of the Iraqi Army.

In that tour of duty, he lost an arm and a leg. When he returned to America, as if he hadn't given enough service to America, he immediately joined the organization of Survivor Corps to help our returning vets when they come back to this country after serving in Afghanistan, Iraq, and other places around the world, to reintegrate with their families, their communities, their schools, their jobs, their friends, their neighbors.

We were honored with Scott Quilty. And at that very same service, a gentleman walked up to me and handed me these, many of us see this when we tour our Army bases or our Air Force Bases or meet with the troops, it's called the Young Marines, and they do much of the same service. They give their time to our veterans. But they are not the only ones. We have senior grandparents, we have Teach For America, we have Jumpstart, we have Americans doing all of this.

We have Americans in the AmeriCorps that organized over 300,000 hours of volunteer service when the floods hit Iowa. They were there first. They came with their first responders in California with the wildfires and with the floods. They showed up early and they stayed late with Katrina and Rita.

This is what we celebrate with this legislation, and I want to thank you for your support and your good words on behalf of these people, Americans all, who step forward every time one of us needs them or the community needs them.

This legislation will strengthen and enable more Americans to be able to do so. It will tie in an educational benefit so that young children can have a service experience in middle school and high school and schools will become the center of service for young people in their communities.

Now let me get to the motion to recommit. I think, as we have only seen it for a few minutes, I think most of the motion to recommit is, in fact, already covered in statutes, regulations and the grant agreements that are issued. We are well aware of these issues. The Members on both sides of the aisle have spoken to them, and they have offered statutes, not only in this act, but in other acts, making sure that people who get these grants don't engage in activities that they should not be.

So we plan to accept this amendment. I appreciate the gentlewoman offering it, and we will take it to conference.

But, again, I want to thank you for supporting this legislation in advance of your support, and I would ask that you feel free to vote for the motion to recommit.

Again, I ask for passage of the bill.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Ms. FOXX. Madam Speaker, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 9 of rule XX, the Chair will reduce to 5 minutes the minimum time for any electronic vote on the question of passage.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 318, noes 105, not voting 8, as follows:

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF MOTIONS TO SUSPEND THE RULES

Mr. POLIS, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 111-40) on the resolution (H. Res. 257) providing for consideration of motions to suspend the rules, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

AIG'S EXECUTIVE BONUSES

(Mr. LANGEVIN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LANGEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my deep outrage over AIG using $165 million in government funding to pay top executive bonuses.

The company, for all intents and purposes, is bankrupt and has been bailed out by taxpayer dollars, and the fact that these bonuses could have gone forward simply defies logic.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend Chairman FRANK and Chairman KANJORSKI for presiding over today's hearing on AIG and for their continued oversight to make sure that taxpayer funds are being used responsibly to get our economy back on track.

While I was pleased to hear that Edward Liddy said that he would try to recoup the bonuses from his employees, I remain furious at how and why AIG chose to reward complete incompetence with taxpayer money. AIG executives must be held more accountable for their decision and may need to pay for mismanagement with their jobs. That is why I joined over 90 of my colleagues in sending a letter to Secretary Geithner demanding a full accounting of the use of taxpayer money at AIG and to block these bonuses and why I support legislation to ensure that taxpayers receive a full refund.

At this time of great uncertainty and instability in our Nation, the public deserves more from AIG and from us, their elected officials, who are entrusted to make responsible decisions on their behalf.

FDA ADVERSE EVENT REPORTING LABELING CHANGES

(Mr. CHAFFETZ asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CHAFFETZ. Mr. Speaker, Americans are concerned not only about the safety of their food but their ability to put food on their tables. So it makes no sense that the Food and Drug Administration has mandated change to dietary supplement labels which will add no safety benefits or protections to consumers. These forced changes will result in higher prices for vitamins and minerals many Americans rely on to maintain a healthy diet and lifestyle.

In December of 2006, the Dietary Supplement and Nonprescription Drug Consumer Protection Act was passed into law. The law requires mandatory reporting of serious adverse events. That is a good thing. But the FDA has now mandated label changes which they're only giving the industry 1 year to comply with. Industry will make the required changes in their labels, but forcing them to do so in less than 9 months is not the answer.

Keep in mind, however, the law underlying this guidance did not require any label changes. It was the FDA's decision, independent of legislation, to force these changes on supplement producers. And what is the price tag for these required changes? According to the FDA's own documents, compliance would exceed $220 million. Not a small amount in today's business environment.

Clearly, now is not the time for our government to find ways to needlessly increase costs for consumers, especially when these mandates provide no added benefits or protections for consumers.

THE FIGHTING TIGERS OF MIZZOU

(Mr. LUETKEMEYER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LUETKEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, if you listen very closely, very closely, you can hear it. It's the sound of Tigers roaring from their den at the University of Missouri-Columbia, deep in the heart of the Ninth Congressional District.

For those of you who haven't heard, the Fighting Tigers of Mizzou were unleashed upon their unsuspecting Big 12 prey and earned MU's first league championship in 16 years and first Big 12 Basketball Championship this past weekend.

I want to congratulate Coach Anderson and the 2009 Missouri Tigers for a regular season to remember. I also want to recognize the best defense in the country for offering their opponents “40 Minutes of Hell.”

But these Tigers are still hungry. And as the No. 3 seed in the West Regional, they are seeking new prey, beginning with Cornell this Friday. Mr. Speaker, I'm not a betting man, but something tells me that the Tigers will roar when they hit the floor, knocking down that national championship door. Go Tigers.

CAP-AND-TRADE ENERGY TAX

(Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida. Mr. Speaker, let me quote from a meeting with the editorial board at the San Francisco Chronicle that then-candidate Barack Obama had in January of 2008. He said, "under my plan of a cap-and-trade system, electricity rates would necessarily skyrocket. This will cost money. They will pass that money on to consumers."

Well, ladies and gentlemen, unfortunately, the President's cap-and-trade plan, or as many people call it, the cap-and-tax plan, does exactly that.

There was a recent study conducted by MIT, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and it was able to assess the fact that a total energy bill for the average household will increase over $3,000. As a matter of fact, it will be up by $3,128 per year. According to CBO testimony, those figures actually will relate.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 2009, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

ON THIS SIXTH ANNIVERSARY OF WAR, LET US WORK FOR PEACE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, in 2 days, we will mark the sixth anniversary of America's invasion and occupation of Iraq. When President Bush announced the start of the conflict on the night of March 20, 2003, he said that America must go to war against a regime "that threatens the peace with weapons of mass murder." Of course, Mr. Speaker, we know that those weapons did not exist and that the war should never have been fought. But today, I don't want to go back, and I don't want to revisit all the many mistakes of the past. Instead, I want to use this time to remember the literally millions of men, women and children from the United States of America, from Iraq and from the many other countries whose lives have been shattered over the past 6 years.

These include those who died, the wounded, the veterans, the refugees, the orphans, the widows and the many other family members who are left to mourn and to struggle. We have a great responsibility in this House of Representatives to honor and to give meaning to their sacrifice. I believe the best way to do that is by committing ourselves to work for peace so that war becomes a thing of the past.

On this sixth anniversary, Mr. Speaker, this anniversary of the occupation, we have more reason to hope for peace than on the previous five. That is because we have a new leader in the White House, one who has already taken some very positive steps. President Obama is committed to diplomacy, not war, and the most important tool of American foreign policy. He has banned the use of torture. He is closing the notorious prison at Guantanamo Bay. And he has announced a plan to remove all combat troops from Iraq. But Mr. Speaker, there is much more that we need to do.

The Iraq withdrawal plan will leave 50,000 troops behind to continue the occupation. That is unacceptable. All troops and military contractors must come home by August 2010, at the latest. In Afghanistan, the administration is planning to double down on our military involvement. But, Mr. Speaker, there is no military solution to the situation in Afghanistan. That is why I have joined my colleagues, BARBARA LEE and MAXINE WATERS, in asking the President to establish a timeline for the redeployment of our troops out of Afghanistan. We have also called for a plan to assist the Afghan people, because we cannot defeat the Taliban with bombs and bullets. We can only defeat the Taliban by helping the Afghan people to meet their desperate needs for schools, for roads and for economic development.

But we need to do more than just solve problems as they arise. We need to be proactive. We need to have a comprehensive strategy for keeping the peace. Let me suggest two ways to achieve that goal. First, I believe this is a good time to renew Congressman KUCINICH's calls for the establishment of a Cabinet-level Department of Peace so we can work full-time to analyze international problems and advise the President on strategies to prevent war and to peacefully resolve conflicts around the world. The President of the United States has never had the advantage of such advice. I believe it is high time that he did.

Second, I believe that this is a good time to renew our proposal for a smart national security plan. "Smart" is based on a simple idea: War is an outdated concept. That is why my smart plan keeps Americans safe through strong global alliances and better intelligence, as opposed to pre-emptive military strikes. Smart also calls for the United States to support nuclear nonproliferation, and it includes an ambitious humanitarian development agenda to end the hopelessness and oppression that lead to war and terrorism in the first place.

Mr. Speaker, after these many years of violence, one thing is clear. The American people have had enough war. They are seeking a better way to make the world safe for their children and grandchildren. So let us resolve in the honor of those who suffer because of a mistaken occupation 6 years ago to do everything we can to avoid the mistakes of the past and lay the foundation for a peaceful future.

That is the best way to honor those who were caught up in the chaos of Iraq. And it is the best way to turn the tragedy of this sixth anniversary into a time of hope for the people of the world.

REDESIGNATING THE DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY AS THE DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY AND MARINE CORPS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. JONES) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my colleagues in the House, from both parties, for joining me as cosponsors of H.R. 24, legislation to redesignate the Department of the Navy to be the Department of the Navy and Marine Corps. As of today, this legislation has 100 cosponsors.

Mr. Speaker, this is the right thing for the Congress to do. For the past 7 years, the language of this bill has been part of the House version of the National Defense Authorization Act. And this year, I'm grateful to have the support of Senator PAT ROBERTS, a former Marine, who introduced the same bill in the Senate, S. 504. With his help, I'm hopeful this will be the year the Senate supports the House position, and we can bring proper respect to the fighting team of the Navy and the Marine Corps.

It is important to remember: The National Security Act of 1947 defines the Marine Corps, Army, Navy and Air Force as the four services. It clearly indicates that the Marine Corps is a legally distinct military service within the Department of the Navy. The Navy and Marine Corps have operated as one entity for more than two centuries, and H.R. 24 would enable the name of their department to illustrate this fact.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to share part of a 2006 editorial published by the Chicago Tribune which describes what that legislation is really all about. And I quote the editorial, "no service branch shows more respect for tradition than the United States Marine Corps does, which makes it all the more ironic that tradition denies the Corps an important show of respect, equal billing with the other service branches." They are the words that were in the editorial in the Chicago Tribune. But sometimes it is good to break with tradition. The War Department, for example, became the Department of Defense after World War II. The Army Air Corps was elevated in 1941 to the Army Air Forces, and in 1947 to the autonomous Air Force.

The Marine Corps has not asked for complete autonomy. Nothing structurally needs to change in their relations with the Navy which has served both branches well. The Corps only asks for recognition. Having served their Nation proudly and courageously since colonial days, the leathernecks have earned a promotion.

Mr. Speaker, the marines who are fighting today deserve this recognition.

Before closing, I would like to show you what this change could mean to the family of a fallen Marine. Mr. Speaker, on this poster is an enlargement of a copy of a letter that the Secretary of the Navy sent to a Marine Corps family. The Marine was killed for this Nation serving in Iraq. And I read from the letter from the Secretary of the Navy, and I will point out that the head of the letter says, "the Secretary of the Navy, Washington, D.C.," with the zip code, November 18, 2008. "Dear Marine Corps family, on behalf of the Department of the Navy, please accept my very sincere condolences on the loss of your loved one."

Mr. Speaker, if this becomes reality this year, should this be a requirement, if any more of our Marines are killed in Afghanistan and Iraq, the letterhead would say, "the Secretary of the Navy and Marine Corps, Washington, D.C., Dear Marine Corps family, on behalf of the Department of the Navy and Marine Corps."

Mr. Speaker, that is what it is all about. This is one fighting team, and the name should carry equal, Navy and Marine Corps. And with that, Mr. Speaker, before I close, I will ask God to continue to bless our men and women in uniform. I ask God to place in His loving arms, to hold the families who have given a child dying for freedom in Afghanistan and Iraq. And I close by asking God to continue to bless America.

DISPELLING THE MYTHS OF HEALTH CARE REFORM

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. MURPHY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MURPHY of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, as we begin a potentially transformational debate about health care this year, I think it is critical that we start making policy based on facts and empirical data, rather than anecdotes. Currently, our Nation's conversation about the future of health care is a little sloppy when it comes to backing up interesting stories with actual data. The result is that dozens of myths both about our own health care system and about that of other countries with systems of universal care have become so dangerously prevalent as to risk becoming accepted truth.

So, I thought it might be useful for the next few months to try to come down to this floor and dispel some of those myths and to put hard cold facts back on the table as we begin to move forward with a better way of providing health care for this country.

So let's start with this. Over and over I have heard the health care reform skeptics tell stories about people that they know or that they have heard of living in Canada or living in England waiting for care, who had to wait weeks or months or maybe even years to get to see a doctor or to get to have a procedure done.

Every time I hear these stories I think to myself, "Well, they are right; that one person probably did encounter that type of resistance from the system." But then I also think to myself that it doesn't matter, because in this place we need to make policy not on anecdote, we need to make policy based on true, real, aggregated data.

So I think it is time that we started talking about this idea, often promulgated by menacing stories of people waiting in other countries for a necessary surgery, that a health care system run or overseen by a public entity comes automatically with unreasonably long wait times for care. The fact is not only is that idea a myth, but the very idea that our own health care system delivers the speediest care in the world might be an even bigger myth.

So here are the facts.

Mr. Speaker, a Commonwealth Fund study of six industrialized nations showed that the U.S. actually ranked fifth out of six in patients reporting that they could receive a same day or next-day appointment for an immediate medical problem. We were behind New Zealand, Great Britain, Germany, and Australia, just in front of Canada. In fact, the difference between us and England was astonishing, especially because many of the stories that you hear about wait times come from the British system.

In England, 71 percent of patients receive a next-day appointment for a nonroutine or emergency care visit. In the United States, that number is 47 percent. That means, in other words, that more than half of Americans when they believe that they have an immediate need to see a doctor have to wait at least 48 hours to get in to see that physician.

Here's another fact. A study by the Institute for Health Care Improvement cited in a recent speech by a medical director of a large U.S. insurer showed that, on average, Americans are waiting nearly 70 days to see a health care provider. That same medical director noted that many people who are diagnosed with cancer are waiting over a month to get in for their first appointment for care.

Compare that to Canada, a country with a system of universal health care most often cited as having unreasonable wait times. Canada's national statistics agency reports that its citizens are now waiting about 3 weeks for elective surgery, a week less than many people in the United States are waiting for cancer treatment. And today in Canada, there are no wait times for emergency surgery.

Now as Paul Krugman points out, it is true that across the board, Canadians do wait longer for nonelective surgeries. For instance, in one case, the facts back up the claim that hip replacement and knee replacement surgeries happen more quickly in the United States. And, in fact, there probably are people from Canada traveling to the United States to get those procedures done. But you know who pays and schedules those procedures here in the United States? You guessed it, the government. As it turns out, in America's government run health care system, Medicare, which pays for those hip replacement and knee replacement surgeries, wait times aren't really that much of a problem.

The fact is, there is ample evidence to dispel the myth that Americans don't wait for health care, and those in government-run systems do. And when we looked at the Canadian, which in some cases does have longer wait times, we need to remember this: In Canada, they are spending about half as much money on a per capita basis as the United States. If they spent 1 percent more of their GDP, they could eliminate their wait times.

The bottom line? Stories about people waiting in lines for health care in other countries are just that; they are stories.

The facts, on the other hand, dispel that myth. We wait for health care, too. Mr. Speaker, health care reform is our chance to fix that.

AIG BONUSES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. MORAN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MORAN of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I rise this evening in the House in strong opposition to AIG's recent payments to employees in the form of bonuses. I can't believe that this conversation is even necessary. The handling of these bonus payments by AIG's management is an insult to the people who are ultimately paying for them, the American taxpayer.

I believe that good business behavior and superior professional performance should be rewarded. That's the way the market system works and should work. People that are good at their jobs should be recognized. Compensation bonuses awarded to certain AIG employees do not fall into this category of recognition. The American people own 80 percent of this company, yet 73 individuals employed by AIG received a bonus of at least $1 million each.

The CEO of AIG today here on Capitol Hill called the bonuses "distasteful." I can tell you that Kansans have a much more colorful description when they are telling the story about these bonuses. Their outrage stems from a series of corporate actions, actions that have steadily eroded our Nation's confidence in the competency of Wall Street and the business community, and the Federal Government's response to these business conditions. And the mortgaging of our children's future is especially damning when news of the bonuses arrives like it has this week.

When the Troubled Asset Relief Program was first laid out, Members of Congress were assured that this would be a benefit to the public and would make a difference not only in the short term, but especially in the long term.

For many reasons, I did not support the initial bailout, including my belief that there were few taxpayer safeguards within this legislation. Recent actions on the part of AIG only confirmed what I feared. Troubled businesses—and I think this is what is happening here—troubled businesses were not forced to change their failed practices. Instead, they were given a lifeline, and they are beginning to pull us under with them.

Kansans ask only to have an opportunity to earn a paycheck and make a living. Most Americans realize that bonuses are awarded if and when their employer is profitable and successful. AIG is neither. It is not fair, it is not right, and it ought not happen.

I ask my colleagues in the House and the Senate to pursue all methods of recourse against companies that flaunt the will of the American taxpayer. But it is not just AIG we should blame. Congress passed this legislation without timely consideration. We rushed to judgment. In many instances, we violated principles that we know work, principles of an economy. And our actions as a Congress that passed this legislation allowed AIG to pay these bonuses. Shame on AIG and shame on Congress.

By demanding accountability and some commonsense from those businesses that are being assisted, Congress may finally begin to get it right, and the taxpayer may finally be protected.

CONDEMNING SHIPMENTS OF NUCLEAR WASTE ACROSS THE SOUTH

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, on March 6, 2009, two ships named the Pacific Pintail and Pacific Heron left the port of Cherbourg in France bound for Japan. The total cargo onboard the purpose-built ships amounts to 1.8 tons, or 1,800 kilograms, of plutonium mixed-oxide nuclear fuel, which according to Greenpeace, is enough to produce 225 nuclear bombs. Scheduled to arrive in May, the shipment is to travel via the Cape of Good Hope, the Southern Ocean, the Tasman Sea between Australia and New Zealand, and the southwest Pacific Ocean.

The latest shipment of plutonium mixed-oxide nuclear fuel is part of an ongoing process involving several major countries in Europe and Japan, whereby Japan usually supplies spent fuel from commercial reactors in return for MOX nuclear fuel from Europe. Using a procedure known as reprocessing, plutonium and uranium are extracted from highly radioactive products contained in the spent fuel. Most of the extracted plutonium, along with the nuclear waste, will eventually be returned to the country of origin.

Mr. Speaker, this latest shipment of MOX fuel complements earlier shipments of spent fuel, about 170, from Japan to Europe. As usual, plans for this latest shipment, the largest so far, were covered in shrouds of secrecy, without prior consultation or notification of en route states. Yet any action involving the ships or their cargo could have catastrophic consequences on the environment and the populations of en route states. Moreover, with the increasing threat of piracy, the transported plutonium MOX fuel could easily fall into the hands of terrorists.

This unnecessary and unjustifiable shipment provides another example of the unacceptable risks and adverse impact the use of nuclear power and nuclear materials have on the environment and the lives of those involved. It demonstrates once again the best example of arrogance and imperialistic behavior of some major countries at the expense of others.

In 1995, I accompanied Mr. Oscar Temaru, the current president of French Polynesia, on the Greenpeace Warrior, which took us to Moruroa to protest French nuclear testing. At the time, while the world turned a blind eye, the newly elected president of France, Jacques Chirac and the French government broke the world moratorium on nuclear testing and exploded eight more nuclear bombs at the Pacific atolls of Moruroa and Fangataufa in Tahiti. Adding insult to injury, President Chirac stated that nuclear explosions would have no effect on the ecological environment.

Mr. Speaker, history shows that for some 30 years the French government detonated approximately 218 nuclear devices at Moruroa and Fangataufa atolls in French Polynesia. About 10,000 Tahitians are believed to have been severely exposed to nuclear radiation during French nuclear testing.

Our own U.S. Government contributed to this grim history of nuclear testing in the South Pacific. Indeed, one may argue that it was the nuclear testing program in the Marshall Islands that set the precedent for France to follow suit and use the Pacific Islands as testing grounds for nuclear bombs. Between 1946 and 1958, the United States detonated 67 nuclear bombs in the Marshall Islands, including the first hydrogen bomb, or the Bravo shot, which was 1,300 times more powerful than the bomb that was dropped on Hiroshima. Acknowledged as the greatest nuclear explosion ever detonated by the United States at the time, the Bravo shot decimated six islands and produced a mushroom cloud 25 miles in diameter. It has been said that if one were to calculate the net yield of the tests conducted by our government in the Marshall Islands, it would be equivalent to the detonation of 1.7 Hiroshima nuclear bombs every day for 12 years.

Mr. Speaker, such was the magnitude of the devastation that threatened the Marshall Islands. In addition to the annihilation of the surrounding environment and ecological system, the U.S. nuclear testing program exposed the people of the Marshall Islands to severe health issues and genetic irregularities for generations to come. It was so serious that we had to move our nuclear testing program, this time conducted underground in the deserts of Nevada. What happened was that this nuclear cloud that came from the Pacific Ocean went as far as Minnesota and Wisconsin, with contaminants later found in milk products coming out of Wisconsin as well as Minnesota.

Mr. Speaker, something needs to be done about the shipment of this nuclear waste from Europe to Japan. I sincerely hope that my colleagues will help me develop legislation.

Mr. Speaker, at this critical point in our history when the global community is confronted with tough decisions concerning energy resources for future generations, it is important to remind ourselves of the lessons of the past.

I am inspired by President Obama's recent decision concerning the storage of nuclear waste in Yucca Mountain, Nevada. In cutting funding to the Yucca Mountain project, President Obama made good on a campaign promise. But more significantly, he reignites the debate on a controversial issue: how to move and store the Nation's radioactive wastes?

To understand the President's recent decision, I am reminded that as a U.S. Senator in 2007, he then wrote in the Las Vegas Review-Journal that "states should not be fairly burdened with waste from other states." Moreover, "every state should be afforded the opportunity to chart a course that addresses its own interim waste storage in a manner that makes sense to that state."

From the above statement, one may infer that President Obama's decision to terminate funding to the Yucca Mountain project underlines the high risks and danger involve with the storage and transportation of nuclear wastes and nuclear materials.

Mr. Speaker, I believe a similar framework should apply to the international treatment of nuclear waste and nuclear materials. Each nation should be responsible for its own interim waste storage and avoid shipments of nuclear waste and nuclear materials across oceans and territorial waters of other nations.

I support a moratorium on all international shipments of nuclear fuel and nuclear waste until the international community has in place an agreement to ensure the protection of our oceans and the environment, economy and population of coastal and small island states. Such an agreement should include prior notification and consultation of en-route states before shipment of all hazardous and radioactive materials, environmental impact assessments, a satisfactory liability mechanism and protection from terrorism attacks.

Until such system is in place, Europe, Japan and all nuclear states, should keep their nuclear materials and waste in their own backyard, and not endanger the lives of others.

[From USA Today, Mar. 17, 2009]

RESPONSIBILITY? YUCCA CHOICE SQUANDERS $8B INVESTMENT

We usually applaud politicians who keep their campaign promises, but one we were hoping President Obama would forget was his pledge to end the 22-year effort to build a nuclear waste repository inside remote Yucca Mountain in Nevada.

Like it or not, the nation needs nuclear power as a carbon-free bridge to a future in which wind, solar and other options will power computers and TVs and charge plug-in hybrid cars. It makes sense to dispose of spent nuclear fuel in a single place instead of at more than 100 nuclear plants around the country, where it is now. Yucca was the presumed central location until the president's "new era of responsibility" budget would eliminate virtually all funding. Never mind that environmental objections to the project have long seemed strained and the logic for going forward strong.

Now the government has to find some other way to fulfill its contract with nuclear utilities to take the waste off their hands. Since 1983, the government has levied a fee on every kilowatt hour of nuclear-generated electricity—guess who's been paying that, ratepayers—to finance a national disposal site. The feds have collected about $30 billion and spent almost $8 billion on the Yucca Mountain site. So much for that investment.

During the presidential campaign, candidate Obama said he wanted no new nuclear plants until there was some place to store the waste, a stance that seems ominous now that he's killed off the only central disposal site. When we asked the Energy Department if that means no new nuclear plants until there's a successor to Yucca Mountain, we got a carefully hedged non-answer: "The president remains committed to resolving key issues including nuclear waste, non-proliferation and plant security."

Yucca's demise shouldn't be an excuse to delay new nuclear plants. Storing spent fuel at existing plant sites is a second-best solution, but it's a safe enough stopgap until the nation agrees on a permanent disposal site. Once spent fuel has cooled enough to move, it's typically stored outdoors in steel pods that weigh 100 tons or more, emitting little radiation and virtually impossible to destroy or steal.

The president and the nuclear industry now want a group of experts to convene to decide what to do next. An idea to revisit is reprocessing spent fuel, which President Carter banned out of security concerns that seem much less compelling 30 years later. Reprocessing allows fuel to be re-used and shrinks the ultimate amount of spent fuel—but what's left still has to go somewhere.

One potential site is in New Mexico, which in the past decade has quietly accepted more than 7,000 shipments of radioactive material from the nation's nuclear weapons facilities and buried them in a salt bed almost half a mile below the desert in the southeastern part of the state. By law, the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant can't accept spent fuel from nuclear power plants, but some state officials have agitated for a second facility there as a backup for Yucca. It might be an alternative worth pursuing.

Killing Yucca is a big political win for Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid and other Nevada lawmakers who've long opposed the storage site. But that victory empowers not-in-my-backyard politicians in every state to dig in their heels. And, whether it's waste dumps or wind farms or oil refineries or air routes, they do—the national interest be damned.

When Obama lifted the ban on stem cell research last week, his press secretary said the president made it clear that "politics should not drive science." Unfortunately, that's exactly what happened here.

YUCCA PLAN POSES 'GRAVE' RISK

(By Harry Reid and John Ensign)

We applaud President Obama's bold decision to scale back the budget for the proposed Yucca Mountain nuclear waste dump. Permanently ending the project is right not just for our state but for our entire country.

The peril of storing 70,000 tons of the nation's toxic trash just an hour's drive from Las Vegas rightly worries Nevadans, and all Americans would face a grave threat from this bad idea.

The reasons for ending the taxpayer boondoggle are plentiful: supporting data that relies on flawed science; estimated costs of nearly $100 billion; and the egregious error of burying waste that could, with American innovation, be less dangerous and even be turned into energy.

The Department of Energy's plan to store deadly nuclear waste at Yucca ignores even the most glaring facts, such as the major earthquake fault lines running across the storage site. Many Americans are unaware that DOE concedes that water will flow through the dump, eventually carrying radiation into Nevada's groundwater.

Yucca Mountain, simply put, is bad policy that is wrong for America.

America still needs a scientifically sound and responsible policy to deal with nuclear waste. More taxpayer money dumped into the Yucca Mountain project is more money wasted that could have been invested in securing waste on nuclear plant sites in dry casks, while researching new technologies such as reprocessing. There are solutions.

That is why we are working together and with our colleagues on bipartisan legislation to form a commission exploring alternative approaches. The Obama administration and the nuclear energy industry have expressed support for reviewing our nation's approach to nuclear waste so we will no longer be stuck with the current failed policy.

Forming such a commission would be only a first step away from Yucca Mountain. It's an important and necessary step, though. The effort will require input not only from our nation's foremost authorities on nuclear energy and nuclear waste, but also from policymakers, environmental experts and public health and safety advocates.

The time is now to put Yucca Mountain to rest and work together to deal with nuclear waste concerns while also protecting the health, safety and security of all Americans. We look forward to working with President Obama and all stakeholders in resolving our country's nuclear waste issues.

CHARGING WOUNDED VETERANS FOR TREATMENT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida (Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida. Mr. Speaker, can you believe that President Obama wants to start charging wounded veterans for their treatment?

Our first Commander-in-Chief, George Washington, once said, "The willingness with which our young people are likely to serve in any war, no matter how justified, shall be directly proportional to how they perceive the veterans of earlier wars were treated and appreciated by their country."

Taking care of those who have sacrificed for our Nation is, I believe, our sacred duty. It is a national promise that goes back to Presidents Washington and Lincoln. President Obama actually acknowledged this during his campaign when, on the floor of the Senate on April 10, 2007, he said these are soldiers who fought in World War II, Korea, Vietnam and Iraq. They made a commitment to their country when they chose to serve, and we must now keep our commitment to them.

I could not agree more with those words. But in the meantime, as we all know, he was elected. Yesterday, we learned that President Obama plans to move ahead, despite what he said on the floor of the Senate, and start to charge veterans private insurance for the treatment of combat-related injuries.

Let no one be mistaken that the President's plan breaches the moral responsibility the Commander-in-Chief owes to veterans wounded on the field of battle. It is a breach of our national promise, and we should not let this stand. The proposal is outrageous and beyond belief. The men and women he proposes to charge are those injured on the field of combat. These are people who sacrifice not only their sweat and tears, but their flesh and blood so the American dream can be protected.

Mr. Speaker, what must the average American think? Just recently, the criminals at AIG received hundreds of millions of dollars in bonuses paid by the taxpayers. Is the President now seriously considering balancing a $1.7 trillion deficit on the backs of veterans? To do so would be a great insult to anyone who ever wore the uniform of this great country.

LEADING THIS COUNTRY OUT OF THE ABYSS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. COHEN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. Speaker, I was pleased to read that President Bush made his first address since he left the Office of President yesterday in Canada. President Bush said that he loved his country more than he loved his party, and he wished President Obama success. I thought that was really telling. President Bush, while I differed with him on many policies and many of his initiatives, I always felt he was a good and decent person. And I think what he said showed that in many ways he is.

I wish that the people on the other side of the aisle, rather than coming here and constantly bringing up false information about our current President, wishing him ill will—which of course Rush Limbaugh has done, the leader of the other side, and others, like former Vice President Cheney, who came out for television on Saturday and had some statements that were very inappropriate for a former Vice President to make this quickly after he has left office. There is a certain time when Presidents and Vice Presidents should go back to their private lives, maybe practice shooting, and learning how to shoot in a proper direction and not jeopardize their friends, and do other things, but not necessarily take shots at the new President of the United States and not claim that the American public is less safe, which is not in any way true. As my colleague here from Kentucky has well spoke in a 5 minute recently, the other side of the story and the full side of the story showed history that we are safer.

But the bottom line is, President Bush said he wished our country well, his country came before party. And it gets tiring to be here and hear the other side take shots and shots and shots and hoping they can win in 2012 and take back this House in 2010 rather than working for the American public and the American government.

We are at a very critical time, caused by years of lack of regulation and deficit spending, wars that we didn't need to be into, loss of life and monies, and lack of regulation that Mr. Paulson was responsible for in giving AIG this money, and in many other ways, without regulations and restrictions on benefits. And President Obama has had to deal with that.

I support our President. And I am proud to be a Member of this Congress trying to lead this country out of the abyss of which it seemed to be heading at the end of this last term.

I am also proud to join in a few minutes with my fellow sophomore Majority Makers, Mr. KLEIN of Florida and Mr. YARMUTH of Kentucky. We're called the Majority Makers because we did take this Congress in 2006 back, but it was after 12 years of Republican control in the House and Senate, 1994 to 2006, and a Republican administration that caused the deficit problems, caused the budget problems, caused the economic crisis. We plan to bring it out.

IMPROVING ACCESS TO CREDIT FOR SMALL BUSINESSES

(Mr. KLEIN of Florida asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KLEIN of Florida. Mr. Speaker, this week, we took important action to address a critical issue in south Florida and around the country, to improve access to credit for small business owners.

Small businesses generated more than 70 percent of the new jobs every year for the past decade, and even beyond that. And they will fuel our economic recovery, both where I live in south Florida, and nationwide.

I recently visited Uniworld Products, a family-owned business in Fort Lauderdale. This small business has been operating for 60 years, yet because of the frozen credit markets has been unable to secure vital loans and has been forced to lay off a quarter of its workforce in recent months. The plan announced by the administration this week will help businesses like Uniworld access the credit they need to keep their doors open and to thrive.

I strongly support this aggressive and immediate action and look forward to continuing to work with entrepreneurs and community leaders in south Florida to support our small businesses as they lead our way toward economic recovery.

AIG, SMALL BUSINESSES, AND THE BUDGET

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 2009, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. KLEIN) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. KLEIN of Florida. Mr. Speaker, it is, once again, an honor and a privilege, as a Member of Congress, to talk to the Members of this House and the American people about the kinds of things that are on their minds right now. And we are doing so with a group of us who were elected in 2006 and have the opportunity, from all parts of the United States, to represent our great country and work toward the solutions that are necessary to get our country back on track.

I am joined by Mr. YARMUTH from Kentucky, Mr. COHEN from Tennessee, and a number of others.

What we are going to talk about tonight are a couple of things; and these are the things that really are a great focus to all of us. One is AIG. Another one is, of course, the small business initiatives that I was just discussing a few minutes ago and will discuss them in greater detail. And the third is the budget. The budget, of course, is the framework by which we govern ourselves as a country, the kind of money we put into our government, and the kind of resources and commitments that we take out.

And particularly at this moment in time it is absolutely essential that we are not only thinking about the short term, but we have a unique opportunity to think about the long term, about how we are going to put ourselves in a very, very strong position so that when we recover, we will have the best workforce, the best technologies, the best businesses, the most competitive environment to prosper for generations to come.

I am just going to start, if I can, with the gentlemen that are with us tonight and the gentlewoman from Ohio that is going to join us about AIG.

I have to tell you, it is hard to even imagine the kind of thought process that the people at AIG came up with in allowing these decisions to be made to allow the $165 million in bonuses to go forward.

Now, we understand that AIG is a large insurance company. They came to this government, under President Bush, and asked for a massive bailout. It was given to them once before, twice, and it is now at about $180 billion.

One of the frustrations I've had—even before we get to the bonus issue—is the fact that AIG operates in 100 and some countries around the world. It is a very, very large insurance company. By the way, the insurance part of it—which is regulated in the United States by our State insurance commissioners, as I understand there was testimony before a committee today—is doing fine. Those people who have AIG policies, those are policies that will stand, and that's all good.

Unfortunately, some very creative people did a lot of things that they are now telling us they didn't even understand and put at risk a massive—I think it's $1.3 trillion of resources and investments into what they are calling "exotic" investments. You have already heard the terms "credit defaults," "swaps," and a whole lot of other things. And it is just extraordinary that, when it comes to this—and we recognize this is a worldwide issue—United States taxpayers, they have already put a lot of money into this, but if this is such a calamitous risk—which it obviously is very serious—why is it that the hundred and some other countries that are also under this same calamitous risk if AIG were to fall apart, why aren't they stepping forward and putting some money on the table? Why aren't they putting billions of dollars into AIG to make sure it survives if that is such a necessary thing?

Obviously, I think all of us—Democrats and Republicans, American taxpayers—feel very strongly that, if we are in it, we understand what the risks are, but at the same time, everyone needs to be in it. And the rest of the countries, Europe and Asia, that have played in this also need to put some money on the table.

But more particularly, what really got under people's skin, rightfully so—it has certainly gotten under my skin—is this idea that bonuses that were committed last year are all of a sudden something that had to be paid in this last number of weeks. I don't get it. And I hear them say the story is, well, they were committed, they're contractual. We're going to get sued. Well, I heard a very interesting story today. One of the members of our committee, when Mr. Liddy was testifying, asked a question, well, it's very interesting, insurance companies, by definition—and I will just stereotype for a minute—their tendency, when a claim is made, is to say no; that is just the sort of business as it is. And they like to fight over it. Obviously many companies pay legitimate claims, but a lot of the strategy is they hire lawyers, and lawyers say no, and you have to sue them before you can get the money. Well, that seems to be the typical way many insurance companies operate. Why is it, in this moment in time, we are told by the executives of AIG that, well, if we don't pay it, we're going to get sued? Since when is that such a defense when that is their strategy normally? I would have said don't pay it, they don't deserve it, the American taxpayers' money needs to be protected. And if somebody is so upset about it and they think they have a contractual right, let them sue.

But the reality is—and I will just make it real simple—the reality is, if this is a performance budget—and presumably it's performance based on a successful company that has profits at the end of the year—and if this company can't even survive on its own without our taxpayer money going into it, that seems to be a pretty strong case to say there is absolutely no basis for a payment of a bonus to a group within an organization that is failing or is really not in a profitable position.

As Americans, we understand success. We reward success, as President Obama says. If a company is successful, the shareholders, I think, are usually very comfortable with rewarding the management for good work—to a point. But when you are failing, I mean, I can't imagine any company in the United States feeling real strongly; and if they are doing it, if I am a shareholder, I am not supporting that kind of deal.

I am a taxpayer like everyone else here. And I am not happy, I am outraged, like everyone else, about the fact that this money was paid. The good news is that this Congress is going to take action, Democrats and Republicans together.

Today, Mr. Liddy said, well, we have now put out officially to the people who received this to give it back, at least give half of it back. Well, I think many of us said half is not enough; we want the money back. If that money is necessary to get AIG back on track, that's what it should be used for. And I can obviously think of a lot of other very good purposes and places for that money to go if it's not AIG—how about the American taxpayers and our needs? But this is something that he proposed today.

Well, I think we are going to take a little stronger action. Members of Congress, tomorrow, are going to have the opportunity to vote on a bill which demands that either almost all the money or all of it be returned to AIG and to the American taxpayers. And if they don't want to do it, then it will be taxed at 100 percent or 90 percent. That way, we make sure that that money comes back. This is not a game, this is the real thing. This is serious business.

We all want to get our economy back on track. Obviously, we don't want any company to fail, but at the same time, we want fairness and justice. That is how we operate in the United States. And businesses, we want them to succeed, but when we are going to put taxpayer money on the table, there is a different set of criteria that have to be applied.

With that, I am going to shift it over to my friend from Kentucky (Mr. YARMUTH), who is the president of our freshman class—and we are now sort of in the second term. But he just has been outstanding, and as a businessman, really understands the principles that I have been referring to. Feel free to add your thoughts to this.

Mr. YARMUTH. Well, I thank my colleague.

It is a very interesting situation to me, not just a question of outrage, but also a question of mystery. Because for many Americans who are viewing this situation basically as a new situation, looking at it just from the last week or so when the news of these bonuses came out—and of course they've known about the huge amounts that the taxpayers have been paying to AIG to keep them from collapsing—now we know that the American taxpayer owns 80 percent of AIG. But this story started a long time ago.

Last Congress, I was a member of the Oversight and Government Reform Committee. And last fall, we had the opportunity to hear from the last two CEOs of AIG before the government takeover. And it was a fascinating and illuminating story because what we learned during those hearings last October was that, early last year, in 2008, the man who ran this exotic investment faculty operation in London, Mr. Cassano, had told the board of directors of AIG that his division, the Credit Swap Division of AIG, would not cost the company one dollar. Several weeks later, all of a sudden there's $5 billion in losses in his division. And as we know, subsequent events have shown that there were literally hundreds of billions of dollars of credit default swaps—which are basically bets on whether a certain obligation will be a valid obligation—but it was basically nothing but bets, and that this division had brought down a giant company.

Now, Mr. Cassano, it came out in testimony, was paid for his leadership, if you can call it that, of that division, $280 million over 8 years, $280 million over 8 years. And, strangely enough, in light of what we have learned recently, he had a contract which entitled him to bonuses of another $34 million.

Now, we don't know yet who the recipients of these bonuses that were paid last week are, but it would be fascinating to know if Mr. Cassano was one of those people because he had one of those contracts. One contract with someone who has been paid $280 million over 8 years was contractually due $34 million more when he had essentially brought down one of the 10 largest corporations in the United States and in the process cost American taxpayers as much as $180 billion.

So it's not just a question of outrage now since the American taxpayers are paying attention and the Congress is paying attention to the AIG situation and all of us are rightly outraged, but we have to look back and see the greed, the malfeasance, and the close to criminality that occurred in this corporate operation.

Strangely enough, when we spoke to those CEOs in the Oversight Committee last year, they really didn't understand anything that had been going on. And in their defense, they came on the scene when this operation had already been going, and I assume at some point it had been making AIG a fair amount of money. But they didn't know what credit default swaps were. They didn't know what all these collateralized debt obligations were upon which these bets were made. But they did know that all of a sudden this one operation that was kind of hidden from their view and developed this mystery about it because nobody except Mr. Cassano knew what was going on there, they knew that he had cost them their company and he had cost the American people an awful lot of money.

The great finishing touch on this story is that even after Mr. Cassano had been fired, he was still on AIG's payroll as a consultant for a million dollars a month, a million dollars a month. And the reason was nobody else knew what was going on in that division. They had to have the benefit of his knowledge, even though his knowledge had cost them their company.

So this is a story that didn't happen yesterday. It didn't happen on Friday when those bonus checks were issued. This is a story that is symbolic of what has gone on in this country over the last decade when greed and a lack of supervision and a lack of regulation have resulted in a worldwide financial crisis. So we can rightly be mad and we will take action tomorrow to rectify this situation with bonuses, but this, again, is symptomatic of a much deeper problem that this Congress both in the Financial Services Committee in the House, the Finance Committee in the Senate, and throughout government is going to be dealing with for a long period of time.

So I'm glad that we have the opportunity to talk about this crisis in accountability, this crisis in regulation, this crisis in supervision in our country because the American people deserve not just to have those bonuses returned to the taxpayers' accounts, but they also deserve to have an economy that is free of the insecurity that these types of situations bring.

So with that I look forward to hearing from our other colleagues.

Mr. KLEIN of Florida. I thank the gentleman from Kentucky.

And I certainly agree with you. When we think about investments, we think about the word "transparency." And that is, as a small investor, if you buy a stock on the New York Stock Exchange or NASDAQ or whatever, you want to know as much as you can about that company. You want to make sure the information that's presented to you is real and that, if you're buying a bond, that the ratings services, Standard & Poor's and some of the other ones that have been before us, are giving an objective evaluation.

Something has gone wrong in the system, and it's a mood and sort of an inaction that has been bred into the last 10 years where we have gotten farther and farther away from responsible regulation. I hear people say we don't want more regulation. It's not a question of more or less; it's a question of the right kind of regulation that really focuses on what the investor wants to know. Whether it's an investor like my dad, who is 80 years old and he's depending on his stocks and bonds and smaller portfolio to take care of him plus Social Security, or whether it's a very sophisticated person, it's all the same point. And we have gotten away from that, and, unfortunately, these massive billions of dollars where people are making hundreds of millions of dollars on a transaction, something went wrong here because they were not regulated, and that's where we're really focusing the attention now. It's going to take some smart people collectively, not just Members of Congress but also the public to work together to get this right.

I thank the gentleman for those comments and that introduction.

Now I would like to turn it over to the gentleman from Tennessee, who's going to share with us some of his thoughts on this.

Mr. COHEN. I appreciate the opportunity to join my colleagues and particularly to follow my colleague from Louisville, which my basketball team, Memphis, also follows as the second team in the ESPN coaches' poll, Louisville being first. That won't last for long for the tournament starts and we're all on an equal footing and Memphis will once again be first, as they have been in many people's minds.

This situation with AIG is just hard to fathom that it could come about. When we had the Six for '06 when we started this Congress, we had six laws that we wanted to pass, and one of them was the minimum wage. And the minimum wage had been impossible to pass through 10 years of a Republican-controlled Congress. We increased that minimum wage for the first time in 10 or 12 years, and I think it was 12 years, where people making just $5 and $6 an hour were getting a very small increase, and this was done over the horror of certain people in business. And now we hear of people who are making $6.5 million bonuses in a year when their company lost money and would have gone bankrupt but for the bailout by Mr. Paulson and President Bush and have basically taken the financial economic situation in the country and put it in great peril. Having gambled and lost and jeopardized the entire world economic structure, they paid themselves bonuses in the area of $1 million to $6.5 million. And it's hard to see the contrast in perspectives in this Congress and this country when certain people just want a minimum wage and others get away with millions of dollars in bonuses for doing next to nothing.

I had a man come into my office last week, and I had checked him out on the Internet beforehand, and his salary the previous year was about $2 million. He had a company where the stock had gone from $45 to $1.50, and he told me that he was working for nothing. I thought, well, that was noble. I said, "Are you really working for nothing?"

He said, "Virtually nothing. Look at what happened to my net worth."

I said, "How about your salary?"

He said, "No, I'm taking my salary, but I'm taking less of a bonus this year."

Well, I thought that was unbelievable. His salary is in the millions. He's taking less of a bonus because of the stock's going from $45 to $1.50. And he said it with a straight face. I'm sure he wasn't in favor of the minimum wage. And there's something wrong with this country where people who work 40-hour weeks can't get a basic minimum wage and other people who think they're the masters of the universe and who have almost destroyed this universe want to get millions and millions of dollars and particularly now from government-handed-out moneys to save businesses from going under.

Well, I'm on the Judiciary Committee, and in the Judiciary Committee, we had a bill today which we voted out which would give the Attorney General the power, in consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury, to recoup those moneys paid in the past and to stop those types of expenditures in the future on compensation to people who are part of businesses that have gotten extraordinary government relief, $10 billion or more in government support, and but for the government moneys they would be in bankruptcy and taking the theory of bankruptcy and the theory of the laws against fraudulent conveyances that all States have and limiting the amount of moneys that they can give out to their management employees to a very decent amount. And that law would allow that money to be recaptured and prohibited in the future from those types of individuals.

When you have a fraudulent conveyance, it's assumed that you're paying money to preferred creditors at the expense of others. In this situation when AIG went ahead and said they were bound by contract to pay their gamblers, that they did it because they were bound to, the fact is these were fraudulent conveyances and but for the government they'd have had no money to pay them and they didn't earn any bonuses. Now, they were retention bonuses. Some of the people have already left. I don't know why they'd give retention bonuses to people who lost, but that's what happened. And I am pleased that the Judiciary Committee voted the bill out. It will probably come to the floor next week. It's a new way to approach this and an opportunity for constitutional experts to come together and fashion this unique approach for an unusual circumstance.

We see the taxpayer and the American Treasury being raped, and in such a situation if it's criminal law, you allow for police to take extraordinary actions with either the use of deadly force or the opportunities to apprehend somebody about to commit a crime in hot pursuit. And I think what the Judiciary Committee is proposing and what the Congress is doing, in essence, is hot pursuit to stop a violent felony from occurring to our Treasury by people who are morally reprehensible in taking this money at this time.

I don't know if my colleagues have thought too much about it, but I suspect there are other companies who have been paid billions of dollars by AIG, as they revealed this week under pressure, that are paying bonuses to their executives as well. The old Merrill Lynch and whatever their successor name is now; Goldman Sachs, I believe they might have been paid. Other companies, the banks have been paid moneys, and they're probably paying out bonuses as well with taxpayer money that's gone through AIG, and we need to look at that as well. These companies also are getting government support, and I'm sure they're paying out bonuses. And the names of every single one of those individuals who've received bonuses from any of these companies should be published. The head of AIG said they're not putting the names out because they're concerned about the safety of the individuals, but that ought tell you that what they did was wrong. Criminals don't want to be exposed to the public because the public would come get them in some type of personal posse. They would form their own groups, a posse comitatus, and come get them. And if they don't want to be revealed, obviously they did something wrong. If they did something good, they'd want to have their posters up and not in the post office.

So I'm proud the Judiciary Committee acted today, and I'm proud this House is going to act tomorrow. What's happened has made me, as one congressman, a representative of the people, extremely upset, and I had several thoughts about the French Revolution and what drove people to that. And if we were looking at this 200 and some odd years ago, we would have seen the guillotine being brought out because this is the type of thing that is absolutely revolting and it needs to stop. And I think there has been too much of this in our society where people just think that they are the masters of the universe on Wall Street. They've caused a cataclysmic condition. They've been rewarded for too long. And they have what is known in the Yiddish language as chutzpah, and we ought to call this the "chutzpah act of the 21st century."

I thank Mr. KLEIN for the opportunity to speak here on this floor.

Mr. KLEIN of Florida. I thank the gentleman from Tennessee. There are obviously some strong feelings on all of our parts here.

As we move forward, Mr. Speaker, if you would consider yielding the balance of my time to Mr. YARMUTH, I would appreciate that.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 2009, the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. YARMUTH) is recognized for the balance of the time as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. YARMUTH. Mr. Speaker, it now gives me great pleasure to yield to my good friend from Iowa who served with me on the Oversight Committee last year and sat through many of those hearings and now serves us well on the Energy and Commerce Committee, Mr. BRALEY of Iowa.

Mr. BRALEY of Iowa. I thank my friend for yielding. And I want to remind my friend from Kentucky that I actually had the privilege of following him immediately during that hearing and questioning the CEOs of AIG. And I have to tell you it was one of the more shocking examples of corporate greed that I've ever heard in my lifetime, and I have lived 51 years in this country.

But I think one of the things that we've talked about is the reality that we as taxpayers now own approximately 80 percent of this company because of the investment that we have made. So my recommendation to Treasury Secretary Geithner and President Obama is that we rename AIG to properly reflect and offer a lasting lesson to the American people of what happened here. I am going to recommend we rename this company "Arrogance Inspires Greed" because that is exactly what we learned on October 7, 2008, when we had a hearing in the Oversight Committee and got to the bottom of this problem.

So let's have a short history lesson of exactly what led this company into the crisis that brought it to the American Government for help.

We learned that the principal actor responsible for the demise of AIG was an employee named Joseph Cassano, and Mr. Cassano operated the London office of AIG, its Financial Products division, which was primarily the unit that sold credit default swaps that helped bring down AIG.

If you go back to the Presidential election, you may recall that CNN was running a feature during this time that had the 10 top villains responsible for the collapse of our financial system. The number one culprit that they identified was Joseph Cassano. Here's why.

Mr. Cassano, who was president of this division, was paid $280 million in cash during the last 8 years of his employment, far more than the CEOs of AIG made. The bulk of his money came from, guess what, a bonus program.

In fact, for every dollar that his unit made, Mr. Cassano and the executives who worked with him got 30 cents on the dollar, and this was a unit that was trading in trillions of dollars of credit default swaps.

To make matters worse, on February 28, 2008, AIG posted record losses of $5.3 billion. And the main reason for those losses was that Mr. Cassano's division had lost $11 billion.

So what did AIG do? Well, as a responsible corporate citizen, it fired Mr. Cassano. And the very next day it gave him a severance agreement that Mr. YARMUTH talked about, paying him $1 million a month and allowing him to keep that $34 million in uninvested bonuses.

So he was paid essentially, to do nothing, $1 million a month. So when we had this hearing in October of 2008, 6 months later, and these corporate CEOs who were in charge of the company during the period of time when he was receiving those payments were called to account for the conduct of this company, these are the questions and answers that I got.

The first CEO was Mr. Willumstad.

"Mr. Willumstad, let me start with you. As CEO of AIG, you had authority, until September 17, 2008, to cancel Mr. Cassano's consulting agreement for cause, but you never did that, did you?"

And his answer, "No."

Second CEO, Mr. Sullivan. "As CEO for AIG during the period from March 11, 2008, when this severance agreement was signed between AIG and Mr. Cassano, through June 15, 2008, you had authority to cancel Mr. Cassano's consulting agreement for cause, but you never took that action, did you?"

His answer, "That is correct."

Think about that. The one person identified as the principal culprit for the financial collapse of this country and the global economy continued to receive $1 million a month after driving this truck off the cliff. It was shocking then, it's more shocking now, because the losses continued to mount.

And what the American people are demanding right now is justice by superior firepower, and we in the House and our colleagues in the Senate and the White House and the Treasury Department have to provide that firepower because the American people are demanding it, and they deserve nothing less. But there were a lot of things that came up during that hearing, and one of them we talked about was this philosophy that less regulation is always better.

Well, one of the things that came out during this hearing, and which 60 Minutes covered in two excellent stories, was that this giant credit default swap market, which at the time was estimated to be between 63 and $75 trillion, 90 percent of it was the same thing as what you and I would consider gambling.

So back in 2000, when they had a chance to get a handle on this and provide some type of governmental oversight, what happened? Well, they could have classified it as insurance and made it subject to insurance regulation in all 50 States, but they decided not to.

Then they could have decided, well, this is gambling. Let's make it subject to gaming regulations in all 50 States. They decided not to.

Well, it's kind of like a security. Maybe we should make this part of the Securities and Exchange Commission. They didn't because of this push against any form of regulation. So now, in 2009, we are sitting here with no effective oversight at the State or Federal level of this enormous credit default swap market.

That has to change, and it's part of the ongoing regulatory reform we are pushing in the 111th Congress. We have to do it, and we have to be smart about how we do it so we don't find ourselves in this position again.

I just want to emphasize justice by superior firepower. Congress has the responsibility to act.

Mr. YARMUTH. It was a fascinating hearing, and something that came up in that hearing was intriguing to me as well. One of our members early in the questioning period asked the two CEOs why the Treasury Department, under Secretary Paulson, had bailed out AIG and not Lehman Brothers, and they both said, well, we don't know, you will have to ask the Treasury Department.

And when it got to my turn to question, I asked them, I said, you know, I would like to ask you a similar question or related question, but maybe in a different fashion, what was the relationship between AIG and Goldman Sachs? And the reason I asked the question was because Secretary Paulson and many of the officials at Treasury had come out of the Goldman Sachs operation.

And they responded, as you will recall, Goldman Sachs was the counterparty with AIG on $20 billion worth of credit default swaps.

And until the last few days, AIG had been unwilling to tell anyone who their counterparties had been, and they did reveal last week, a list of many of them, and how much money they had been paid and Goldman Sachs had been paid 11 or $12 billion of this amount.

So what we saw was an incredible amount of incestuous dealings among these giant corporations who were out to, essentially, create wealth without creating value. And creating wealth, not for the American people, but creating wealth for these few people, these giants of Wall Street, these masters of the universe, who got into an operation that they really didn't understand. And now we are all paying the price for that.

There is a fascinating article that's in the current issue of Harper's Magazine by a lawyer out of Chicago. It talks about what he perceives to be one of the problems in our current economic situation, and that it was that over the last 20, 30 years, we have put more and more emphasis on the financial services aspect of our country as opposed to the manufacturing facilities.

And it all happened because we stopped paying attention to how much money you could make in the banking business, and we essentially did away with usury laws so that banks could earn 25, 30, 35 percent on their money on credit cards, and these exotic instruments where they could leverage their assets 30 and 40 times.

And because they were making these huge profit margins, they drew capital away from manufacturing to the financial sector, because there was no longer nearly the return available to capital in the manufacturing sector, and it was all in the financial services sector.

What we have seen as a result of that is, as has been mentioned already today, the greatest disparity in wealth between the rich and everyone else in this country in its history, and also, basically, an unsustainable and dangerous financial services sector, one that had gotten so big and created so little value that it jeopardized all of our society and our economy.

With that, I would like to yield again to my friend from Memphis, the runner-up in the last poll to my beloved Louisville Cardinals, Mr. COHEN.

Mr. COHEN. Thank you. I would like to ask a question of one of my colleagues. Either of you can answer it.

I know the hedge funds, and they are involved in all of this as well, and the hedge funds folks were making enormous amounts of money, unfathomable amounts of money. They are taxed at capital gains rates, which is like, what, 15 percent instead of ordinary income, which a person on minimum wage is paying ordinary income. Of course, they are a lower rate, but still ordinary income.

Didn't we try to do something in the last Congress to try to change that taxing scheme of the hedge funds and find some problem and some pushback maybe from the administration? Do you recall that?

Mr. BRALEY of Iowa. I recall we had a lot of discussions about that as part of the ongoing debate about how to provide effective regulation to the broad scope of financial services, but I am fairly confident that no action was taken because of a lot of different reasons. But I think you have brought up a great point, one that came up at this hearing we had back on October 7.

When I was in law school from 1980 to 1983, the insurance industry and the financial services sector was completely different than it is today.

One of the things that came out of the hearing was AIG's insurance business was very successful, which is why, even though they lost $11 billion in their London office, they only had a loss of $5.3 billion, because of the off-sets from their insurance business.

But back in those days, most insurance companies were mutual companies. Their sole responsibility was to their policyholders.

And then we saw a lot of blurring of lines between various types of financial services providers. Why is that important? Well, in this case it's important because insurance companies, going way back to the McCarran-Ferguson Act, have had an exemption from antitrust oversight by the Federal Government.

And yet when you see companies that formerly limited their involvement to providing insurance products branching out into other types of financial services and vice versa, you get a lot of confusion. And then the big push, as my friend from Louisville mentioned, is returning profits to shareholders, not providing a conservative return on investments to protect policyholders.

So what happened is as continued de-emphasis on regulation was part of the Federal approach to all of these products, we had things going on that were completely beyond the control of the average investor.

In fact, these CEOs testified during the hearing that their understanding of credit default swaps was, in fact, quite limited, which is a shocking thing when you think of how deeply this company that they were shepherding was involved in this one high-risk financial investment tool.

Mr. COHEN. Let me ask a question, too, of my colleagues. The hedge funds monies, I think that's something, I thought we had a proposal on it, and I thought it got passed through the House, I'm not sure, to raise that, but that was an issue that came up and maybe there was a problem in the Caucus as well on taxing the hedge fund folks at regular income.

That's something that needs to happen, because it's outrageous. The money that they make and then the monies that they are taxed on is such a low percentage.

There was a lot of deregulation. The banks were deregulated, the financial services, and banks got into doing different things than they used to be able to do in savings and loans. Do you believe that we need to go back to some of these types of regulations to get into a more conservative type of financial structure?

Mr. YARMUTH. I can tell my friend that one of the reasons no action was taken last year was the carried-interest provision, which is to what you refer. Also, it affects a lot of people who are developing apartment complexes and other things, so they are essentially individual businessmen investors who had formed partnerships, and they would have been affected by the same change.

And there was a considerable amount of question as to whether that was advisable, because we want to promote people to do apartment complexes and shopping centers and so forth. We couldn't quite figure out a way to make the distinction. But that was, I think, one of the main reasons we didn't take action.

But in reference to your question, and I think our colleague from Florida discussed this perfectly in his opening remarks, and that is it's not a question of whether we need massive regulation, or little regulation, we need the right regulation.

What we have failed to do over the last 20 years is to modernize our regulatory system in such a way that it took recognition of the very changing picture of business, particularly in the financial sector.

I think this Congress, and I know Chairman FRANK of Financial Services, I know the administration is very much concerned with reshaping our regulatory system. Again, not to over-regulate the economy, but to make sure we have the right type of regulation in place, adapted to the current financial structure of the world, so that these types of situations don't reoccur.

I think that my colleague from Iowa also mentioned something that we really need to look into as a Congress and that is the whole question of our antitrust laws, and not just which industries are covered or not covered, but also what we can do and whether we should do something to in some way control the size of businesses because what we have seen in many of these cases recently is we have gotten businesses that are "too big to fail."

I understand that there is a worldwide economy and these companies have worldwide operations and there is somewhat of a limit as to what we can do, but we have not revisited the question of our antitrust laws and the size of corporations for some time in this country.

I think the American people would appreciate that conversation because they don't like being in a position in which they are virtually helpless when a giant corporation which yields no benefit to them—that they perceive, anyway—is able to affect their lives so dramatically.

Mr. BRALEY of Iowa. Would my friend yield for a followup?

Mr. YARMUTH. I would yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. BRALEY of Iowa. We have all sat here during this financial crisis and have heard over and over again from Treasury "this company is too big to fail." And I'd like to propose right now on the floor of the House of Representatives, the people's House, an exception to that rule, which is there are some companies that are too arrogant to save.

Here's an example of what I'm talking about. I'm going to quote to you—and I quoted this during the hearing on October 7. This is from a September 28, 2008, article of the New York Times. This was a comment made by the same Joseph Cassano who headed AIG's London office and who brought about this $11 billion first quarter loss that took them over the cliff.

Here's what he said when asked to respond to this financial crisis. He said, "It is hard for us," AIG, "without being flippant, to even see a scenario within any kind of realm of reason that would see us losing $1 in these circumstances." One dollar.

Then, apparently his math skills are somewhat lacking because he obviously earned a heck of a lot more than $1—$280 million over an 8-year period. That just shows the level of arrogance that these financial prognosticators have.

I'd like to throw this question over to my friend from Memphis. I remember when the Fed was trying to have discussions about what type of financial oversight was appropriate for these new financial devices called mortgage-backed securities and credit-default swaps.

Then-Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan was a firm believer in "just let the market regulate itself." In fact, that is what his recommendation was on credit-default swaps.

So then we saw this market grow to a $100 trillion-plus market with no Federal or State oversight. I guess we should be shocked that anyone would be surprised that we would find ourselves in this predicament.

Mr. COHEN. Well, thank you, sir. The SEC has a new leader—Ms. Mary Schapiro is her name—and I have confidence she's going to provide the regulation we need. In the past administration, the SEC was woefully understaffed, and I think when there were whistleblowers, they weren't listened to. I believe, if I'm correct, there was a whistleblower on the Madoff Ponzi scheme, and there was a Ponzi scheme that was through Dallas, Texas, and in my city of Memphis with a company called Stanford Financial that has taken a lot of people's investments, claimed they were buying CDs in an island in the Caribbean—I think Antigua—and in fact they weren't doing it. A lot of people have lost all of their investments. A lot of people lost all of their investments with Madoff.

They were not regulated. And that is what the SEC needs to do, is have regulations on all these companies to make sure they're really doing what they say they're doing and to listen to whistleblowers and to have investigative staffs. Money invested in government in these areas can save people in the long run. There are people who wished we had spent that money because they're not going to have their monies, and if they don't have their monies, it's going to hurt the Treasury as well because they are not having to have money for spending.

I believe you're on Financial Services, are you not, Mr. BRALEY.

Mr. BRALEY of Iowa. That would be my friend Mr. KLEIN.

Mr. COHEN. A lot of people have talked about mark-to-market changes, and I think Mr. KANJORSKI talked about that today, and also on the uptick rule. Are these two changes that you think might come about soon? And, if they do, do you think they will be helpful in having a more fair and just and realistic perspective on the valuations and on trading in the stock market?

Mr. KLEIN of Florida. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. COHEN. I yield.

Mr. KLEIN of Florida. Mr. COHEN, a couple of the issues are out there, and some of these are fairly technical but they are very important, actually, and for those people in banks, those people in real estate, financial service issues, one of the things that all of our small businesses know right now, and the people that own homes, the people that own real estate properties, commercial properties, is the banks are not lending enough.

There's some exceptions in there. But all I can tell you is when we had the eight large banks in front of our committee 2 weeks ago, we heard, Oh, we are lending here and billions of dollars here. That may have been to Fortune 100 companies. I understand that, and that's fine. But it was not translating down to our local communities.

I know in West Palm Beach, in Delray Beach, where we do business and things like that at home, it's not happening. And the short answer is: What can we and should we be doing.

The mark-to-marketing rule basically is a way that the regulators look at the bank's balance sheet and say that a certain asset is a certain value. And that works just fine when properties are going up in value. The problem is when there's really no market, when you can't sell a piece of property because nobody wants to buy it or finance it, they get written down to not necessarily zero, but something very insignificant.

And what that does is puts lots of pressure on the banks and their balance sheet and then they say, Well, we can't lend because our balance sheet looks so small. It's a chicken-egg thing between the regulators and the bank.

To make a long story short, there's common ground that needs to be found.

It's not a question the banks shouldn't be lending. They should. And the regulators may be being a little cautious right now under the circumstances.

But there is a middle ground. I think we have to find it and crank it up quickly because whether it's mark-to-market or a few other regulatory issues, we want to make sure the regulators are doing their job. It doesn't mean stopping lending. But there are a whole lot of creditworthy borrowers out there that could borrow.

Many of you have small businesses. They're making their payments; real estate owners that are making their payment. They are current but they're saying: I can't get a term loan even though I am current because they are saying the asset value is so low.

So on a simple basis we need to find that middle ground. We are pushing hard to let them put this through carefully. Lend to the appropriate people. Don't lend to people that shouldn't be borrowing for homes or anything else. But do it the right way.

So we are working on that right now, Mr. COHEN, and hopefully in the next couple of weeks they will have some answers and get the banks moving along again.

Mr. COHEN. Thank you, Mr. KLEIN. It's an issue I've heard from a lot of brokers about what they think would help the stock market, but they also think that the uptick rule would require people that at least own some stock and to have a trade take place before they shorted it, and basically win by the economy losing.

That's not the American way. And it's what has happened in the stock market so much, and in other ways in the stock market. People have manipulated the market. Hedge funds have manipulated the market to destroy companies and to make money while they did it, and to become fabulously wealthy.

This is where regulation is so important. We haven't had regulation in this previous administration. The market didn't work. The market needs regulating because if you let people go unchecked, greed comes into play. We've seen the utmost of greed.

I think Mr. BRALEY's wonderful new AIG is something that will take fire.

Mr. BRALEY of Iowa. Will my friend yield for a followup comment, and then I want to yield back to Mr. YARMUTH on this point that I think is an important complement, with an e, to the regulation piece, and that is the whistleblower protection. Because one of the things that Mr. YARMUTH and I had a key role in was passing out of our Oversight Committee the Whistleblower Enhancement Bill of 2007. It was an enormously overwhelmingly bipartisan bill. It passed on the floor of this House with over 330 votes which, as all of us can tell, if you're not naming a post office, that is doing pretty good down here.

Unfortunately, it ran into obstacles in the Senate and did not get to the President's desk in the 110th Congress. And then Congressman CHRIS VAN HOLLEN, who's a Democrat, and Congressman TODD PLATTS from Pennsylvania, who's a Republican, had the brilliant idea when we were putting together some of this financial recovery legislation in the stimulus bill, let's put the whistleblower bill back in. We're putting a lot of money into the economy. We want to provide protection to Federal employees to report instances of waste, fraud, and abuse.

And it passed overwhelmingly here and it went to the Senate. One Senator decided that that was not appropriate, and it came out of the bill. I think the American taxpayers are fed up with the lack of accountability. They want people to be protected when they have the courage to put their lives and their careers on the line and stand up for American taxpayers.

That is why we had a press conference last week to reintroduce the bill as a standalone bill. I hope we quickly get it over to the Senate and I hope this time the Senate understands that the American people are outraged. They want us to be on their side to protect their hard-earned dollars. I think this is a critical component we need to push.

With that, I will yield to Mr. YARMUTH.

Mr. YARMUTH. I thank my colleague. One of the things that we have to continue to do is to remind the American taxpayer of what has happened, what brought us to this point. I know that right now our colleagues on the other side are trying to play political games and, all of a sudden, because of this new revelation about bonuses, they want to make this all a Democratic problem.

But, as all of us will recall, and I think the American citizens will recall, we were cruising along last year, knowing that we were in a little bit of financial difficulty. We knew that the foreclosures were up, we knew that the signs of the economy were not where we would like them to be, and that, for many Americans, those of us that had been in the trenches politically since 2006, knew a lot of Americans have been hurting for a long time, particularly middle-class Americans and hard-working families out there.

But all of a sudden, last September, out of the blue, seemingly, Secretary Paulson and Chairman Bernanke call us all in and say, The sky is falling, and we are about to go over the cliff, and we need $700 billion to bail out these companies that are in severe difficulty.

I think the American people rightly were stunned, saying, Where did this come from? I think all of us were stunned because we didn't know where it came from.

And what we have found out subsequently is that in many of these operations like AIG, sometimes the CEOs didn't really know the depths of their problems.

I know we had hearings again in the Oversight Committee last Congress where we talked to, for instance, the rating agencies and some of the people who were involved in the measurement of risk and the analysis of risk, and even Chairman Greenspan, who said we had no way of assessing risk that involved declining real estate values.

All of the models they had built to assess the risk, whether it was Moody's or any of the rating agencies or, in this case, the Fed, said our computer models wouldn't accept negative growth in real estate. So all of a sudden the American people say, Whoa. Where did this all come from?

I think none of us really knew where it came from. And the reason we didn't know is because we had trusted the marketplace to be the salvation of our financial system. And, as we have seen, the marketplace that Chairman Greenspan worshipped, and others, was not capable of accounting for what happened in the real world.

So now we are cleaning up. We are trying to pick up the pieces. The American people are rightly dismayed that their government was not on the job. We have an opportunity now to show the American people that they can have confidence, not just in the economy, but also in their government. And that is the charge that I think all of us willingly accept.

I am very happy to be here tonight to talk about that and to be part of a Congress that is responding to a crisis that, basically, we didn't build, we didn't create, but we are more than willing to try to fix, because we owe that to the American taxpayer.

With that, I'd yield back to my colleague from Florida.

Mr. KLEIN of Florida. I thank the gentleman. I think you have summed it up exactly right, and that is the American people want answers. They want to make sure this doesn't happen again. It's unacceptable for there to be cycles where this happens; you clean up and it happens again. This is a very significant time for everyone, and the challenge is great.

So we are going to have to focus on them. And if I can, I will spend a last minute referencing the fact that we are now moving into the conversation about our budget for next year. But talking about the kinds of things that the American people are looking for, it is transparency and openness when we have a budget.

The last number of years, of which this group here has only been here 2 years, but the wars, which obviously we appreciate the work that our military did and all the rest of that, but 100-some billion dollars every year for the last number of years, not even on the books of the balance sheet of the Federal Government. Every year it is a supplemental budget. A supplemental budget is supposed to be when you have an emergency. God forbid you have a Katrina or something like that they didn't plan for. The war was there. It should have been planned for. It should have been accounted for.

And when you talk about a balanced budget, and all of us standing here today, we are fiscal deficit people. We are deficit hawks. We believe in it. I think every American does. It is common sense: You can only live within your means. And the Republicans didn't do it. The Democrats didn't do it in the past. But I think all of us together have got to get it right now. And it is going to take time. We inherited, unfortunately, a very difficult budget, and it is going to take some time to get through this. I think Mr. SPRATT who works with us, as well as President Obama, has got a lot of ideas. We are going to put them through the mix here, and I think we will come out with something. But, most importantly, it is an honest, open conversation.

The American people are smart people. They understand the process of building a budget. They do it for themselves every day around the kitchen table or in their businesses. And I look forward to the opportunity of working with everyone, Democrats and Republicans. There may be differences of opinion and priorities. I happen to personally believe that education and health care and energy, and making this country energy independent, is a very forward-thinking way of addressing the next generation of where we need to be. But we will get through that process. But the point of it is an honest, open process where the American people can understand all the debts, all the possibilities, all the opportunities to build a stronger country.

I will turn it back over to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. YARMUTH. I thank the gentleman from Florida. We just have a couple of minutes left, so we will just have some concluding remarks from the gentleman from Tennessee and the gentleman from Iowa. I think this conversation has been a good one, and I am glad that they joined us for it.

I yield briefly to my colleague from Memphis.

Mr. COHEN. I thank the gentleman.

I just join with my colleagues in saying how much of an honor it is to have the opportunity to try to clean up this mess. And as I started earlier, President Bush is to be commended for saying he hopes this President succeeds. He puts his country before his party. And I hope that his colleagues and the members of his party will listen to him and not to his Vice President, who broke the code of silence before it should have been broken.

With that, I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. BRALEY of Iowa. Well, the concluding remarks I just want to offer to the American people are, AIG is now a symbol of Arrogance Inspires Greed. That should be the lasting hallmark of this sad chapter in our Nation's history.

The other thing is, the American people expect us in Congress to provide justice with superior firepower. We have got a lot of intellectual firepower on both sides of the aisle, a lot of bright, creative people who have had diverse world experiences.

And to my colleague's reference about cleaning up, I spent a lot of time doing janitorial work putting my way through college and law school. I have got to tell you, I am excited to be here at this important moment in our Nation's history. We need bright, creative people with critical thinking skills, and together we will solve this problem.

Mr. YARMUTH. I thank my colleagues for their participation today. I look forward to our conversations next week, next Wednesday, and as we go through the year. It is a great honor for me to serve with so many thoughtful, dedicated Representatives.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

THE ECONOMY AND GOVERNMENT SPENDING

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GRIFFITH). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 2009, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. AKIN) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mr. AKIN. Mr. Speaker, we have a number of interesting topics that we are going to be talking about tonight, and even a little bit of a challenge question for people who are feeling imaginative and innovative, and it is a strategic question about some votes that are coming up tomorrow on the floor. It should be very interesting.

Joining us first off this evening is my good friend, Congressman PITTS, who hails from Pennsylvania and has come up with quite a barrage of different colorful charts here. I don't know, it looks like some part of a critical measurement of somebody's life expectancy or what it is, so I am going to yield time to Congressman PITTS, who has been a Congressman for a long time, highly respected, from Pennsylvania. I yield the gentleman time, and I would like you to tell us a little bit about what you graphed here, because they are quite interesting.

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. There is an old saying that a picture is worth a thousand words. And I think sometimes,

Mr. Speaker, pictures help explain some otherwise complicated situations, so I have assembled some data about the economy and government spending, and put them on charts to help explain some of the facts.

I think the overall emphasis is that there are economic consequences to what we do and what we say here in Congress. There are economic consequences to our taxation and spending, our budget policies. And I would just like to first explain some of the colors on the chart and go through them.

On the chart you see red and blue lines. The colors here indicate which party is in control of Congress. So where you have red, that is the control of Congress in both the House and Senate is Republican. So you have here and here in these years Republican control. Where you have blue, that is both chambers being controlled by the Democrats. Where you have the slanted marks, you have a divided Congress. So here, the House is Democrat and the Senate is Republican; and with the smaller lines, you have the House Republican and the Senate Democrat. And we have a range of years here from 1977 to 2009.

At the bottom, you can see President Carter here from 1977 to 1981, and then Reagan, and these white dash marks show the range of the terms of the President.

Mr. AKIN. Reclaiming my time. I think what you are saying is you are really putting a whole lot of information in one picture. Aren't you?

Mr. PITTS. That is correct.

Mr. AKIN. The white dash lines are transitions in terms of the Presidencies.

Mr. PITTS. That is correct.

Mr. AKIN. The blue color represents the Democrat color; the red is the Republican color; the hash marks is a mixed bag, you have got Republicans in one body and Democrats in the other. So now you have got basically a whole timeline going, what is it, close to 20 years or so?

Mr. PITTS. That is correct.

Mr. AKIN. Go ahead. Proceed.

Mr. PITTS. Thank you. If you look at how the market, for instance, reacts, here is the Dow Jones in yellow over this period of time. It is going along real nicely here until it hits the red section, and then you see it move sharply up. The Dow goes sharply up. You have a divided legislature. And, to be fair, you had the dot-com collapse and 9/11, as well as the switch of Jeffords to make the divided Congress. It goes down. And then you hit the red, it goes sharply up. As long as President Bush is there to veto any of the proposed tax changes that the Democrats in this Congress proposed, it goes up.

Mr. AKIN. Reclaiming my time, gentleman, it sounds like to me this is stock market advice that you are offering today. What you are saying is if you see the Republicans in charge of the House and the Senate, then go buy some stocks. Is that what you are trying to tell us?

Mr. PITTS. No. I am saying that markets basically react to rhetoric; and that on-again, off-again tax cuts, that rhetoric about tax increases affect the market dramatically in a negative way, and you can see this drop here.

This second chart is unemployment, which is sort of a mirror image in the strong periods and in the weak periods with the recessions. The next charts are the budget deficit and job growth. So if you look at these yellow bars here, these are the budget deficits. Notice under President Obama this deficit here, $1.752 billion, this bar. That is more than all of the 8 of the previous administration, under Bush, combined.

Mr. AKIN. Reclaiming my time, that little yellow line is so close to the edge that the first time I saw that, I just about missed what you are saying. This looks like some sort of science fiction thing. Let's go through it.

If you add up the yellow bars between those two sets of dotted lines, which represents the 8 years of the Bush years.

Mr. PITTS. That is correct.

Mr. AKIN. And that President Bush was being beat up because the Republicans were spending too much money. Now, was that true?

Mr. PITTS. That is true. I remember when they were attacking him for $250 billion deficits. Now, we have a $1.7 trillion.

Mr. AKIN. I voted against a lot of that spending. But now reclaiming, and taking a look at that chart, what you are saying is if you add up all of those Bush deficits together, how does that compare to that huge jump that you see this year?

Mr. PITTS. The deficit of $1.752 trillion is more than all of the previous 8 years combined.

Mr. AKIN. More than all 8 years of Bush. You add all of the 8 years, and you are saying in this year—is this 2009?

Mr. PITTS. That is correct.

Mr. AKIN. You are saying that, in 2009, we have more deficit we racked up than all 8 years of Bush?

Mr. PITTS. That is correct. I could have really scared you and showed you the proposed deficits in the future, but I only have this year's proposed deficits.

Mr. AKIN. My heart might not handle that.

I notice we have been joined here by Congressman ROONEY from Florida, who is bringing a little bit of southern perspective on these charts.

I yield to Congressman ROONEY.

Mr. ROONEY. Thank you, sir. I appreciate the chart, first and foremost, because what I wanted to jump in and tell you is that we have been joined by some children in the chamber. This past weekend, I had the opportunity to go camping with my kids in Central Florida, and it all sort of dawned on me and hit me at once, as we are now referred to as the party of "no."

When you see a chart like this and you see what these children are about to face and what my three young sons, who are 7, 5, and 2, are about to face, why we are the party of "no." And we heard recently from the other side as they were here and how outraged they were at AIG and how outraged they are at some of the things that are going on, this is why we vote "no." This is exactly the reason why. We have to stand by our children and not saddle them and put on their backs what you are displaying on that chart there, sir, so that we can keep our financial house in order and allow it to translate to them an America that is better than we inherited.

We are on the cusp, as one of my friends in Florida likes to say, of being the first generation of Americans that leaves to their children an America that is worse off than what we received. That is all on us.

So we can sit here all day and talk about how outraged we are at AIG and what has happened with these bonuses being paid out that was agreed to and voted on by this Congress, even though a lot of us on the Republican side voted "no," to be called the party of "no" and to see this, and now to hear the Democrats say they are outraged by what has happened.

Mr. AKIN. What just occurred today made it pretty obvious why we needed to be saying "no" to that big porkulus bill; because it had, just as we knew it would, all these little things hidden in it. We are going to be talking about that. We are going to be talking about some of the things that were hidden in it that were just announced on ABC News just recently.

We have also been joined by a doctor, we have increasingly a number of doctors in this Congress, the good Dr. CASSIDY from Louisiana.

I yield time to Dr. CASSIDY.

Mr. CASSIDY. Thank you. It is interesting, as you are talking, two things occurred to me. You mentioned how taxes have the ability to create uncertainty.

Now, if we just take this, not from the nationwide but bring it down to a family in Louisiana. This new budget is going to tax oil and gas exploration. Well, it turns out 90 percent of oil and gas is done not by ExxonMobil but by small wildcatters, if you will, and these folks employ about 320,000 people in my State in petrochemical. Now, these are great jobs. These jobs give benefits. They allow people to pay their mortgage. They are not service level in that sense, but they are jobs of the type that you can raise a family.

So earlier we heard our Democratic colleagues speaking about our need for energy independence, and I am struck. I am new here, so I don't quite understand it.

We want energy independence. We want to create good jobs for working folks with good benefits, help the uninsured, but at the same time we are penalizing a domestic energy industry, which cannot move because it is domestic, which is helping our energy independence and which is creating these jobs.

Mr. PITTS. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASSIDY. Yes, sir.

Mr. PITTS. I serve on the Energy and Commerce Committee, and we are having hearings every week. We had one today on the proposed new proposals, cap-and-trade they call it, of the Obama administration. Now in a time of economic uncertainty, families and small businesses have to conserve. They have to be more efficient. They have to save. They have to be a lot more frugal. This is not the time to massively expand the Federal Government.

We should be doing what we are supposed to do in a more frugal way, a more efficient way. And yet the new administration is proposing vast new proposals in the area of government-owned health care, in the area of cap-and-trade, which is a tax on all energy use in the United States.

Mr. AKIN. Reclaiming the time here. I recall standing not very far from where I'm standing right here on the floor of this House and hearing the President make a promise. And I felt good when he made the promise. He said, "I'm not going to tax anybody who is making less than $250,000." And I sort of slumped back in my chair and said, "well, at least he missed me." Now we are talking about cap-and-trade. And what he is going to do is he is going to increase the energy costs on every household across our country. It doesn't make any difference how much money you're making. If you're using electricity or burning fuel, you're going to get zapped. And the average is $3,000 per household. When you see that big yellow line, that just isn't a big old line on a graph. We are talking about families in America in all of our districts getting saddled. And this is just one proposal. This is just "cap-and-trade."

Mr. PITTS. Will the gentleman permit me to speak here? The cap-and-trade proposal really has eight taxes on energy. And the President is proposing to raise $646 billion with this new cap-and-trade regime. So this big line here, the deficit here, which makes all the other deficits look small in comparison, is reflecting these massive new government programs. In the stimulus bill we passed—not we—but the Congress passed, the creation of 31 new Federal programs and an expansion of 73 existing programs. This is massive government spending. That is what is reflected in this.

Could I just point one other thing out, Mr. Chairman?

Mr. AKIN. Certainly.

Mr. PITTS. There is a good lesson in here. Do you see these 4 years right here when the Republicans controlled the House and Senate? Speaker Gingrich was here. I served on the Budget Committee with John Kasich of Ohio. And because the Republicans in Congress worked with President Clinton—Clinton deserves some credit, and we deserve some credit—we balanced the budget 4 years in a row. We had four consecutive balanced budgets and paid down the public debt 4 years in a row.

Real bipartisanship works. This phony bipartisanship of wanting us to come in at the last minute and vote for something without having any bipartisanship in creating the bill, in crafting the bill at first, that will not work. Real bipartisanship is good for the country, not calling us in and trying to buy off three votes at the end. I yield back.

Mr. AKIN. The gentleman from Florida, Congressman ROONEY.

Mr. ROONEY. Sir, I appreciate your saying that, because as I stand here with my colleague, Dr. CASSIDY, as a fellow freshman, I do believe that when we came up here after campaigning recently, what the American public, or at least my constituents, were expecting, was the bipartisanship that you are talking about. And I have to tell you, it is the biggest disappointment from taking the oath of office and starting as a congressman, that that is just not reality. I don't know if that is how it has worked. Obviously, it has worked in the past. But that is not what we are getting now in this Congress. And it is an extremely disappointing, eye-opening phenomenon that unfortunately we have to endure.

I just want to expand a little bit on what the gentleman was talking about with regard to the $250,000 on top of what you are talking about with cap-and-trade, or cap-and-tax, as some people like to call it, with the people that are going to have to pay the $3,000 per household to afford the energy costs that cap-and-trade will bring. But the $250,000 cannot be dismissed without first realizing you're talking about the small business owners. The people who in my district employ five, 10, 15 people, they have told me that if they have to incur more taxes, because they are doing their taxes right now, if they have to incur more taxes, they are going to have to lay people off. So even if you don't make $250,000, you are going to be affected by this tax increase because you might be one of those people that the people making $250,000 lays off.

So I think it is important that the spending, the taxing, and now obviously the borrowing that we are having to incur is just the wrong recipe, as I said before, for the future of our country.

Mr. CASSIDY. Will the gentleman yield? It is a little bit ironic because I actually think our hopes are bipartisan. Our hopes are that we create jobs for the American people. Let's give it to our Democratic colleagues. They felt like spending this $1 trillion dollars is actually going to stimulate jobs.

Now, as I listened to you, Mr. PITTS, speak about your committee, John Marshall's quote occurs to me, "the power to tax is the power to destroy." I think our function here is actually to connect the fact that we share that hope for more jobs. But our fear is this tax, which is being justified by this deficit spending, will destroy. It will destroy these kind of jobs that we have in Louisiana for folks who may not go to college, but nonetheless are earning $70,000 to $80,000 a year and sending their kids to good schools with good benefits. And we are going to destroy it in the name of creating new jobs. When I was running for office, Congressman ROONEY, that was backward logic: Let's destroy in order to save.

Mr. ROONEY. If the gentleman will yield. And the question that you have to ask yourself, say that there are jobs created, and certainly there may be short-term jobs created. But what happens when the money runs out? You either have to pass another stimulus bill to keep those jobs or the small businesses are going to have to absorb those jobs. But if they have to incur increased taxes, they are not going to be able to do so. So whatever jobs are created through the current stimulus are a flash in the pan. And we are seeing there are a lot of things in that stimulus that we don't like so much, like bonuses for AIG. That is why we voted "no." And we are criticized for doing that. But it was the right thing to do. I think that in the end, with what you're saying, Dr. CASSIDY, is that there may be a short flash in the pan for jobs, but it is not the long-term jobs that this country needs.

Mr. CASSIDY. The thought also occurs to me that obviously the jobs that are created that do have long-term benefit are created by those small businesses. And so the thought occurs to me, someone said, a commentator of some sort, it is good that the stimulus package is going to have people hire two more, say, police officers. That is good. It helps safety on the street. But two more police officers does not create 10 more jobs. On the other hand, if we can enable that small business, that small business will create 10 more jobs. So, again, it just keeps echoing in my mind, "the power to tax is the power to destroy."

Mr. AKIN. Reclaiming my time. We have shifted the topic here just a little bit. But I think it is very important. And you're making excellent points.

What I'm hearing is we are talking about taxes. Let's just talk a little bit about an average guy that has a small business, because 70 or so, depending on how big you call a small business, 70 or 80 percent of the jobs in America are in small businesses. So let's talk about the average guy in a small business. First of all, most of them are making or have a $250,000 income. So starting right off the bat, we are going to tax these guys, because they are the rich guys.

Mr. CASSIDY. And gals.

Mr. AKIN. They are the ones making over $250,000. So first off, we are going to tax the very source of 70 percent or 80 percent of the jobs in America. Then we are going to whack them with a tax on energy, first in their own home, but then in their businesses. Depending on if it is a small job, it may or may not be an energy dependent kind of business. So we are going to hit them again. Then we are going to hit them again by allowing the dividends and capital gains tax cut, which very much helps small businesses, and the death tax, all that is going to be allowed to expire. So now we are going to whack them the third time.

After you get done beating them and beating them and beating them, then what we are going to do is spend money like mad on government programs, which the gentleman from Pennsylvania's chart is showing is unprecedented, we are in uncharted waters, so we are going to vacuum all the liquidity out of the economy so it makes it harder for the small businessman to get a loan and make an investment.

Mr. PITTS. When we talk about $250,000 adjusted gross income, you're talking about a lot of small businesses who may be what you would call "asset rich but cash poor." They may have assets in building, lands and equipment. But that is where they put their profit. That is where they put a lot of their money. They are just not walking off with $250,000. They are small businesses that are investing in their businesses and creating jobs. So, we should keep in mind that government cannot create wealth. It is the American people. It is the entrepreneur. It is the small businesses that have to do that.

However, government can hinder economic growth. With flawed policies, flawed tax-and-spend policies, borrowing, spending and taxing too much, we can crowd out the private sector. So that is important to remember as we look at the impact of these proposed new taxes. But that kind of rhetoric, on-again off-again tax cuts, tax increases they talk about, creates uncertainty in the market. So you will see people not investing, not risking their capital, and holding back in uncertain times.

Mr. AKIN. Basically there are a bunch of people that are old geezers like I am. I'm a baby boomer. And you have saved money for years and years and years, and all of a sudden half of your money is gone because of the entire economic crisis which is a result of these kinds of socialistic policies which say that we are going to give loans to a whole lot of people that couldn't afford to pay, and we created this entire loan crisis. The loan crisis then spreads to the rest of the economy. So now you have people who are not very eager to be putting money into small businesses because they just lost their life savings on the stock market. So what they are going to be spending money on is gold bricks to stick under their pillow or other kinds of things. But they are not going to want to take those risks.

We have been joined by my good friend from Ohio, Congressman LATTA. Welcome to our discussion.

I yield time.

Mr. LATTA. I thank very much the gentleman for yielding. And I appreciate your having this very important discussion this evening. I have been sitting here listening to the other gentlemen this evening. I have been having what we call "courthouse conferences" in my district. What I have been doing is I have been going around the district. We go to two counties a day when we are not in session. We are there from about 8 o'clock in the morning to about 12:30 in one county, and then 1:30 to 6 in another county, and I meet with constituents almost every 10 minutes.

What you have been talking about is on the minds not only of your constituents, and your constituents in Pennsylvania, but constituents across this country. And I will tell you, the question on their minds is about jobs. And it is about saving that wealth that they tried to accumulate, as you said, in their 401(k)s and their IRAs. They are worried about the Federal spending that is going on out there.

You're absolutely right. The small-business owners are the ones that are creating the jobs in our area right now. A lot of people think it is the big corporations. No. It is not. It is those smaller companies.

I sit across the table from these individuals. They look you in the face and they say, "do you know what? I'm not sure how I am going to keep my doors open. We are having a liquidity problem. We are having a problem where we are losing our orders." But there is one thing that they all say. They all say the same thing: "I feel a responsibility to the people I hire. How am I going to look those people in the face in a few months? I have 20 employees or 30 employees. And I have to start laying these people off. These people not only work for me, but they are part of my family now. They live down the street from me."

You're absolutely right. We are going down that road of ruin. It was not that long ago, back in the Carter administration, when we saw interest rates in this country go up to 21 percent. And what did that do? As you said, Federal Government does not create any wealth. We consume wealth. It is that small entrepreneur out there that creates the wealth for this great country of ours. So when we watch what happened back in the Carter administration, it is not that long ago that you couldn't go down to the local bank and get a mortgage. You couldn't get a loan. I started practicing law back in those days. We had to do what they call "laying contracts," where the seller actually had to do the financing for the buyer because there was no money.

I will tell you, the last thing we want to see in this country is interest rates going back to 21 percent. I remember, though, you could get a money market at that time, you could get a 14 percent return on your money. But if you are paying 21 percent, you're in the hole.

So not only the folks back home in northwest and north central Ohio are scared, but people across this country. They tell us, "here we are in our businesses cutting back. We are trying to scale back in every possible way that we possibly can. But what's the Federal Government doing?"

They just see us with the $700 billion bailout last fall for the financial institutions. And then they find out about AIG and the big pay outs. And they ask how about the stimulus package, how is that going to help me? How is the $75 billion on the mortgage bailout going to help me? What is going to be in it for me with the $410 billion omnibus. And as the gentleman talked about, we might be talking about another stimulus package. Who is going to pay for it? You are absolutely right, the generations to come are going to be paying for it.

Mr. AKIN. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PITTS).

Mr. PITTS. This fourth chart shows the job situation. Above the line is job growth; and below the line is job loss by month. You can see when Reagan or Bush inherited a recession, when they passed these tax cuts, they stimulated tremendous job growth.

For instance, in 1981, the capital gains tax was reduced from 28 to 21 percent, and the revenue rose by 325 percent in 6 years.

In 2003, you remember that under President Bush, when we reduced the capital gains, revenue rose 159 percent in 5 years. So this tax policy stimulates the formation of capital and directly affects job growth or job loss. Our tax policies have real economic consequences.

Finally, the last chart. The President talked about gyrations in the stock market. So I took this last year from February 2008 to March 2009, and here is where the President Obama was inaugurated. I put up several things we considered in the Congress. The rebate checks, the housing bailout of $300 billion, the Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac bailout of $200 billion. You remember the $700 billion bailout we passed, look at how the market dropped after that. Here is election day. Here is the auto bailout. Here is the stimulus bill, a $787 billion stimulus bill, look at the market drop. The $410 billion omnibus bill, look at the market drop; and now the proposed $3.6 trillion budget. What we do here has direct economic consequences on the market and on job formation.

Mr. AKIN. Reclaiming my time, there are two general theories going way back in our past in America about what do we do when we start into a recession. One of the theories was started back in FDR's day back in the 1930s. We started into a recession, and there was a guy, Henry Morgenthau, and he was the Secretary of Treasury under FDR. He had the idea that we will spend a whole lot of government money, which will stimulate demand and get the economy going. People today still talk about stimulating demand by a whole lot of government spending. That guy's name was Henry Morgenthau. So how well did it work? He was joined in that theory by a little fellow by the name of Lord Keynes; a strange fellow. Because of his name, we called it Keynesian economics. And so at the end of 8 years of a tremendous level of government spending, Henry Morgenthau meets in the U.S. Congress in the Ways and Means Committee, and there is a quotation I have which says, "We tried spending. We spent and spent, and it doesn't work." This is a guy whose theory it was you have to spend a whole lot of money. He said, "It didn't work, and unemployment is as bad as it was 8 years ago. And what is more, we are tremendously in debt." The Japanese tried it in the 1970s, and it didn't work for them.

So what is the other theory than this Keynesian idea, the theory you are talking about, sometimes called supply side. JFK, who is obviously a Democrat, did a significant tax cut, and the economy improved. Ronald Reagan, another almost 20 years beyond him, did the same thing. You get this big kick, and then what you are showing there is President Bush. So this has been done a number of times.

The one thing I regret, and you could have assumed from your chart, was that every tax cut is going to produce this improvement to the economy. I think the facts of the matter are it is not every tax cut, but certain specific tax cuts, particularly targeted, as the gentlemen that were guests before were talking about, toward what is going to affect that small business. So the tax cuts that really work are things like dividends, capital gains tax, death tax, and things along those lines because those allow the small businessman to have the liquidity to invest in his own company, and that is what really works.

So it is not like Republicans just say no. It is just what we are saying no to is an absolute runaway train of government spending.

We have been joined by the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. SCALISE).

Mr. SCALISE. I want to thank my friend from Missouri. I think what you have been showing really is something that people around the country have been seeing for the last 2 months. They have realized what this change really means in terms of policy because ultimately what the markets are reacting to, what people are reacting to when they are at the water coolers is not just the rhetoric because the rhetoric during the campaign sounded really good. It was hard to disagree with people saying we need to be fiscally responsible.

But when somebody says we need to be fiscally responsible, which I agree with, and then they present a budget which is $1.7 trillion out of balance, the largest deficit in our country's history, not just spending at record levels, dangerously record levels, but also adding $1.4 billion in new taxes, I think that is at the point where people said, Wait a minute, this wasn't the change that I envisioned. This wasn't what I was promised.

The American people were told that 95 percent of the people in this country won't pay a dime in new taxes. And then they see this energy tax, this cap-and-tax proposal by the President, which literally would increase the taxes that people pay on their electricity bills. Anybody and everybody in this country who has an electricity bill will see at least a $1,300 a year, and the newest reports that are just coming out as they are factoring more of these changes, this budget that just got filed, the revised estimates are showing over $3,000 per family in America in new energy taxes.

When people see this, they are saying, Wait a minute, that's not what you told me. That wasn't the change I was envisioning when you told me only the top 5 percent, people making over $250,000 would pay more. Not that it is a good thing to play class warfare, and I think that is the danger of class warfare that we are seeing. And your charts reflect what is happening because the markets continue to drop each time more of these proposals come out.

We have been having hearings now in committee for the last 3 weeks on this energy tax proposal, and not only will every American in the country see now roughly a $3,000 increase per year once this is effective; and, hopefully, it will not be effective. This bill still hasn't passed. These bills just got filed 2 weeks ago, and the American public is starting to digest it.

I think the AIG scandal that just erupted in the last few days shows people what the fine print really means. When that stimulus bill that the President said that we needed to rush through, didn't want to give anybody in Congress a chance to read the fine print, those of us who voted against it, and I know everybody talking tonight, the reason we are here tonight is because we opposed those bad policies because we knew it was bad policy, not because we want to be against or for.

Mr. AKIN. Reclaiming my time, gentleman, you have moved into a subject that I definitely wanted to get to tonight. I think this is something that our other congressional friends who are joining us tonight, and others, perhaps, would want to understand because this is an extremely exciting juncture really where we are timewise today and tomorrow.

I want to recreate what happened here on the floor less than 2 weeks ago. First of all, we voted for a measure that said when this great big bill, this supposedly stimulus bill, which I somehow call "porkulus" bill, when it comes out, we will have 48 hours to read the thousand-plus pages so we have some idea what is in this bill. And everybody on this floor voted that we would have 48 hours to have time to look at what was in this bill. It was $700-plus billion. We are talking about enough money to buy at the rate of—I think of big things because I am on Armed Services, you could buy at the average cost 250 aircraft carriers with this much money that we don't have. And we only have 11 in our country.

Mr. PITTS. If the gentleman would yield, we have to borrow that money. That is all borrowed money, $787 billion. When you add the interest on that, that amounts to about $1.1 trillion, the price tag of that one bill.

Now President Obama said right before we voted that we are in a crisis and we must pass this stimulus bill immediately or we may suffer a catastrophe. That is the kind of rhetoric that scares the market. We need to stay away from the rhetoric of fear and panic and disaster and catastrophe, a lot of which has been used to pass these bills. That bill you are referring to was 1,174 pages long. It wasn't put on the web until after midnight. The next morning at 9:00 we were debating and voting on that bill. Not one Member had a chance to read that bill. That is legislative malpractice.

Mr. AKIN. Reclaiming my time, so what happens? We vote for 48 hours, the bill comes along and we are supposed to have 48 hours, and we get a copy of it at 11:30 Thursday night; 1,100-plus pages, more than a thousand pages, as you said. So we get a copy of it. And, of course, we have lots of staffers sitting around at 11:30 just waiting for the bill, right. The next day what do we do, we vote on the bill.

Now of course what happened was the Republicans voted "no." There was talk about we are going to have transparency and we are going to have bipartisanship on the floor. Republicans asked, Hey, I thought we had 48 hours? Do we have any way to get our 48 hours?

The answer was: No, we are going to vote on it.

We didn't like that, partly because of the tremendous cost of it, and also because what is hidden in those thousand-plus pages? That brings us up to today.

Where we are today is we find that hidden in this bill in conference, put in according to ABC by Senator DODD, was an amendment that says that the executives from AIG insurance company, and a lot of them live in his district, that those executives can keep their $165 million in bonuses. Now the public is upset about $165 million in bonuses, and I can't say that I blame them. But on the other hand, they should be even more upset. It is not just millions, you have to look at that letter, it is billions or trillions.

I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. PITTS. I have a copy of that press account that occurred yesterday. It was ABC News. Jonathan Karl reported this: "Last month the Senate unanimously approved an amendment to the stimulus bill aimed at restricting bonuses over $100,000 at any company receiving Federal bailout funds. The measure, which was drafted by Senator OLYMPIA SNOWE of Maine and Senator RON WYDEN of Oregon, applied these restrictions retroactively to bonuses received or promised in 2008 and onward." But then the provision was stripped out during the closed-door conference negotiations involving House and Senate leaders and the White House, and a measure by the Senate banking chairman, CHRIS DODD of Connecticut, to limit executive compensation replaced it with an 11-page amendment. DODD's measure explicitly exempted bonuses agreed to prior to the passage of the stimulus bill.

That should be investigated. That is the news story you are talking about.

Mr. LATTA. If the gentleman from Missouri would yield, I think the real question is where is this taking us? As the gentleman mentioned, $1.1 trillion, and the American people and the folks in my district are saying this: $1.1 trillion, what is this all adding up to?

Right now, this country is $10.6 trillion in debt. By the end of this fiscal year, this country is going to be $12.7 trillion in debt; $12.7 trillion.

And it hasn't been very long, when you start looking at the figures, in 1979, the national debt of this country was only $129 million. We went to $2.8 billion in 1989, and it started going up.

But when you start looking at the totals, the thing that really concerns me is not only are we building this debt up, but we have a $1.75 trillion deficit. The real question is: Who is buying this debt? Who is buying this debt?

Right now, we have a $3 trillion debt that we owe to foreign countries and governments, $727 billion is what we owe the Chinese right now—they are our largest debt holders—and that is not counting what they own in Fannie and Freddie, which takes them over $1 trillion of our debt.

What is happening in this country is, we are going to not only have problems in this country trying to pay this back, but we also have a problem in this country, we have a situation where we are trying to say, in our foreign policy, who is going to start dictating it, us or our debt holders? And that scares the living daylights out of me.

Mr. AKIN. Reclaiming my time, when you start talking about debt, the public understands one thing; you have a bunch of executives who have run a company into the ground, and then they're picking up $165 million in bonuses for doing it, and out of the pockets of the U.S. taxpayer. The one thing is if you think people are mad now, if $165 million bothers them, when they start looking at the billions and trillions that are being wasted with no transparency at all, they are really going to be getting mad.

We are also joined, I see, by my friend, Congressman SCALISE from Louisiana. I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. SCALISE. As we complete the thought that we've been talking about, these were all things that didn't just happen by accident. This was in legislation. We are not talking about the previous administration. The word "inherited" seems to be thrown around a lot here. The same people that support the death tax seem to be trying to say they inherited every problem that exists. And there sure is blame to go around from people in years past, but we don't have time to talk about the past. What we do have time to talk about is what is happening today.

In the stimulus bill that everyone here tonight is talking about, these problems and the ramifications throughout the country, throughout our economy, with what is happening with these policies, this was in legislation that was passed by this President. Just 3 weeks ago, he signed that stimulus bill that he himself pushed through Congress, said it had to be pushed through at record speed, didn't want to have the accountability and the oversight. And so Congress literally, in 2 weeks, spent a record amount, $800 billion, that we all voted against because we knew it was bad policy. But the President said we need to act soon, and this is all critical to getting our economy back on track. I mean, look at the details.

Mr. PITTS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCALISE. Yes.

Mr. PITTS. I know the public might sometimes be confused by all these bills we talk about. There was a $700 billion bailout bill; there was a $787 billion stimulus bill; there was a $410 billion omnibus bill—the one that had the 8,500 earmarks that he signed last week that just funds the government for the rest of this year; and then now we have this proposed budget of $3.6 trillion.

Now, the gentleman from Ohio was talking about the Chinese owning $726 billion of our debt. You know, I met with a Chinese delegation last month of officials from China, and the first question they asked me was, Congressman, is America abandoning the free market system? I mean, the world is watching this. And they have expressed some hesitancy about buying more of our debt. I think when we go on the market with $2 or $3 trillion in treasuries this year to fund our budget, we are probably going to have to raise interest rates on those notes, or else we're going to have to print money. We are going to feed inflation. At the end of this year, I am afraid we are going to see inflationary pressures that is going to impact every consumer, just like the energy tax.

Mr. SCALISE. Reclaiming my time, and what you're talking about is something that we are already starting to see; it's problems that happened in the 1930s during the Great Depression. And unfortunately, it seems like history is repeating itself because we are seeing that, now that countries are saying we're concerned about this level of debt that America is going into, families across this country are concerned about this level of debt.

It seems like, in Washington, that this liberal leadership is the only group that wants to go on this wild spending spree. The good news is it hasn't all happened yet. Some of it has. That $800 billion stimulus bill that we talked about that didn't do anything to stimulate our economy that President Obama signed, that bill that had the language that protected AIG's bonuses that we're all outraged about—and it is kind of ironic when you see those people feigning their anger and saying those people are getting these bonuses, $160 million—that I agree is offensive; the problem is, they put the language in. This President signed that bill that protected those bonuses.

The record is clear. You can go back and look at it. And I think my friend from Missouri actually pointed out the chronology of how that got thrown in, airdropped in in that final report.

I yield back.

Mr. PITTS. You said wild spending spree. I really think this is by design.

I think they are exploiting the financial crisis to move their political agenda and tuck into these big spending bills—that they are not permitting anybody to read—all of these issues that we are now reading about, like repealing welfare reform, that worked well, that the Congress passed back in '96. Now there is an incentive from the Federal Government to the States, 80 percent match for every new welfare recipient you add.

Mr. AKIN. Reclaiming my time, I like to get right up because we are talking about something that has been happening today. This is on the news. I think this is a very interesting kind of scenario.

So what happened a couple of weeks ago was, first of all, you had this tremendously expensive bill which was called stimulus—that I call porkulus. It came along. We were promised we would have 48 hours, we did not. It came to the floor. The Republicans voted “no” on the bill because it was way too much money, but also, we didn't even have a chance to know what was in it. But who did know what was in it? Well, certainly, according to ABC, Senator DODD knew that he had allowed these executives from AIG to have this $165 million in bonuses for shipwrecking their company. Now what we have going on is we find out in testimony today that the administration knew that that was in the bill; obviously they would have probably had some people scan it before the President signed it.

So now that the President, the administration, was aware that this was in the bill, that the executives were going to get their $165 million, that it was put in there by a Senator—who, by the way, had a loan for 3 percent on his home, who also got more money from AIG than any other Congressman. AIG gave him over $100,000 in 2008. The only second-place contender was the President. So the President and the Senator both received over $100,000 from AIG. This amendment was slipped into this bill—and we, of course, didn't know it when we voted “no” on the bill.

So, what is going to happen tomorrow? I am going to finish what is going to happen tomorrow, and then I would encourage some discussion, because this is kind of like a little case study. Because now the Democrats have put this amendment in, these executives are getting their $165 million, and the public is going crazy. They are mad. They are ready for somebody's scalp. And so we are going to bring a bill to the floor which is going to say that we are going to tax these executives at a rate of 90 percent. Well, that's interesting, isn't it?

We already knew they were going to get paid, and so now we are trying to somehow put the toothpaste back in the tube. We are going to tax a couple of specialized, specifically named people at 90 percent—which, of course, is unconstitutional. How would you like it if somebody could single you out as the only guy on your block and we are going to tax you at 90 percent, but nobody else? It is completely unconstitutional.

So they are going to bring a bill to tax these guys at a 90 percent tax rate, which will make a lot of Americans on the surface think, oh, this is a pretty good idea. And if we vote no because it's unconstitutional—because we took an oath of office to protect the Constitution—we look like we are defending people getting $165 million for crashing this company. So that's a pretty clever thing to do; it's a good diversion.

I thought it was a brilliant piece of strategy to try to cover the fact that the Democratic Party knew that this thing was in the bill all along, did not take any actions. Now people caught them. Now people are mad. And so what we are going to do is we are going to start this unconstitutional policy of taxing somebody. Now, the question then becomes, what are the Republicans going to do tomorrow morning? That's going to be an interesting question.

I yield to my good friend, the doctor from Atlanta, Georgia, Congressman GINGREY.

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Well, I thank the gentleman from Missouri for yielding. And I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Congressman PITTS, for holding this hour-long discussion, Mr. Speaker, and my colleague, Representative LATTA from Ohio, and others that have spoken. I appreciate the opportunity.

And Representative AKIN just mentioned, my colleagues, that tomorrow we are going to have this bill under suspension that so-called “gets our money back.” It's telling the American public, oh, we are going to get our money back from these absolute scoundrels that got these bonuses—in some cases, $1 million, I think there were a couple of cases where people got $3 million, and in the aggregate, something like $160, $170 million. I will tell you, I would call those bills, the bill tomorrow, the “unrighteous indignation” bill, or maybe the “majority mendacity” bill. Because what this majority party wants to do, Mr. Speaker, is posture themselves like, oh, you know, we are going to go after the bad guys, when, as the Congressman just pointed out, when you connect the dots, when you follow the dots in some of those charts that were presented earlier and you see that we have actually given this insurance company, American International Group, $190 billion, that is over a thousand times as much as these bonuses.

So the real issue, which they are diverting our attention from—they, the majority party—and don't want the American public to realize what they have done—

Mr. AKIN. Reclaiming my time for a second, you just gave us a number thing. It is hard to keep all those zeros straight. You are saying that we just gave—as I recall the number was $173 billion to AIG. How does that compare to $165 million? What was the ratio?

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Well, reclaiming my time, you add three zeros to that. A million is six zeros. A billion, if I am correct, is a thousand million.

Mr. AKIN. So a thousand more than this executive pay thing?

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. This is what we are talking about, literally, the money that was given to this company.

I know, Mr. Speaker, the American people, when you explain that to them, they can understand it. And they say, well, now, wait a minute, this is an insurance company. I've got my life insurance, I've got my health insurance with Prudential or Provident or Aetna or any other. I mean, it's not like it was the only insurance company in the world. And this business of being too big to fail—because what they did is they, in these subsidiaries, they weren't just satisfied with making money off selling life insurance, they had to get into this business of selling these financial products, these credit default swaps and mortgage-backed securities and derivatives, things that the common man doesn't even know what you're talking about. But it's all about greed.

And I am telling you, this business of bailing them out with our money, taxpayer money, Mr. Speaker, people like my constituents in the 11th District of Georgia who are struggling every day, some of them, through no fault of their own, losing their homes, losing their jobs—particularly if they're in the construction business—can't get loans. And here this majority party is continuing to give this company—and I think my figure is right, Mr. AKIN, that $190 billion will be the amount, the bailout money that, in the final analysis, we have given to—and maybe that's not the final analysis. Maybe we are going to say, oh, we are going to get the $170 million in bonuses, but we are going to give another $25 billion to this company.

I yield back to my colleague.

Mr. AKIN. That does raise, though, an interesting question. Because here we are, we are in the middle of this whole situation. We understood that there wasn't time to look at what was in the bill. We know that this prominent Senator, that is in the same home as AIG, who has got that 3 percent loan on his house, he has received more money than any other Member of Congress—House or Senate—from AIG, that he put the amendment in to protect those bonuses. And the administration knew that was in there, and yet there is this sort of a mock sense of, hey, we are really upset about this. So what we are going to do is we are going to just ignore the Constitution and tax these guys at 90 percent. And then that puts us in a trick box as Republicans; do we vote to ignore the U.S. Constitution or do we vote to try to make some claim on these guys' salaries?

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. If the gentleman would yield just for a second on this point, and then I will yield back to my colleague from Pennsylvania, Representative PITTS.

On this particular issue, don't forget, my colleagues, that at that so-called "conference committee" back in the fall when this economic stimulus bill, all the details were being worked out, the majority party was there in the dark of night. I don't know how many conferees from the minority party were there, but the administration was absolutely there when this provision, as my colleague said, was put in by the Senator from Connecticut, Senator DODD, in regard to making those changes so that these employees of AIG could get these bonuses. But a representative of the administration, the new administration, the Barack Obama administration, Mr. Speaker, was in the room and knew exactly what was happening. And the second largest recipient of contributions, when he was in the United States Senate, from AIG was none other than Senator Barack Obama. I think it's very important that the American people understand these things and try to connect the dots.

Mr. PITTS. I just want to say after hearing the gentleman, I can only say one thing: Please, no more bailouts. Look at the market and see what has happened with these big bailout bills.

I would say the message that I'm trying to convey here tonight is that policies matter. And some policies help create an environment in which the economy is able to thrive, and wrong policies have the opposite effect. So let's learn the lessons that we can learn from these charts. Let's get good policies again. Let's get our spending under control. Let's not tax too much. Let's not waste money. Let's not borrow too much. And if we will pursue good policies, then, hopefully, the market will start responding again the way we'd like to see it.

And I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. AKIN. Reclaiming my time, gentleman, when you talk about consequences, just taking a look at that one bill alone, which was the thing they called the "stimulus" bill or the "porkulus" bill at $800 billion, $800 billion that we don't have. We only have a 300-ship Navy. We're talking 250 aircraft carriers as the equivalent cost. But let's talk about what the indebtedness of that is. Just that one bill, what that would mean would be nine new aircraft carriers every year. That's just the cost of the debt that we're getting into.

Mr. LATTA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AKIN. I will yield.

Mr. LATTA. I think the number I'm now seeing is that by the year 2012 we'll be paying a billion dollars in interest on the debt every day, which is absolutely putting our future generations in the hole that they're never going to climb out of. And that worries me with our kids back in Bowling Green and what we're going to do to their future. And I don't think it's right what this Congress is doing.

I think a little earlier I might have misspoken when I was talking about some of the debt numbers. You start throwing around billions and trillions, and I think the numbers I should have been saying were trillions when we talking about the debt in 1989 and 1999 and 2007. But those numbers keep going up. And we can't have that going on because, again, as I've mentioned and as all the gentlemen have mentioned this evening, when you look at what we have been doing to this country and owing foreign governments only $119 billion in 1979 and, as I said a little bit ago, that we now owe over $3 trillion. As the gentleman from Pennsylvania mentioned, the problem we're going to be having is that we're going to have a situation with this debt going up. The President has already said if we can't get people to buy that debt, we're just going to have to raise that interest rate. And as I mentioned a little bit earlier, we're going to be right back where we were in the late 1970s with President Carter when we had 21 percent interest rates, and the problem is going to be that no one is going to be able to get any loans out there and the situation we're going to be in is a dire one because back 30 years ago, this country was on top of the heap. China is now the number one manufacturing country in the world, not the United States. They've passed us this year, and now we are going to be in a situation where how do we climb out of it?

Mr. AKIN. Reclaiming my time, to summarize what we have been talking about in a way, first of all, we're taxing too much; second of all, we're spending too much; and third of all, we're borrowing too much. That's basically the way things are going. We have tried that approach before. We tried it during the Great Depression. It turned a recession into the Great Depression. Henry Morgenthau was the one who made it clear that it hadn't worked.

And take a look at what's going on here in the situation with the jobs that have been lost since the Democrat majority, and you see what's going on is this thing is really going up in terms of jobs lost. Why is that? Well, because small businesses are getting hammered and they're the source of a great number of those jobs. So if we do not have the liquidity and we don't allow the small businessman to keep some of what he earns and to invest in his company, we lose jobs. And this is what's going on. It's predictable. It's happened this way for years, all throughout history. And the solution is straightforward. There is a solution. We don't have to go down this path. But it means that we have to stop spending, we've got to stop taxing, we've got to stop borrowing, and what we have to do is let some liquidity back for the small businessman, and you'll see this job thing turn around.

TARP AND THE AIG-WALL STREET AXIS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SCHRADER). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 2009, the gentleman from California (Mr. SHERMAN) is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I will try not to consume the entire 60 minutes, but I do have much to say about the progress of the so-called TARP, or bailout, program and the treatment of executives as well as general creditors and counter-parties under that bill.

I think that the way this bill has been administered has been a travesty for quite some time, and it is perhaps peculiar that only this last outrage from AIG has generated the kind of public revulsion that is well justified by actions taken prior to the recent AIG giant bonus payments.

But let us look in particular at AIG. They have healthy insurance companies, a healthy savings bank, all owned by a parent company. And that parent company decided to establish a Financial Products division, a casino, in which the rich and powerful from around the world could come to bet. In fact, that is what they did. And they bet that American mortgages would decline in value. These gamblers were right, but they were too smart by half because together, they broke the bank. And now they come to American taxpayers, and they say, "You should make sure that we walk away from the table with our winnings intact."

Now, how does this compare to the way that capitalism is supposed to work? When an insolvent institution has general creditors and that insolvency requires governmental intervention, usually in the form of bankruptcy reorganization or receivership, not just the shareholders, not just the executives, but also the general creditors and the counter-parties take a substantial hit. This is what is, in effect, happening with General Motors today. Now, General Motors is not in a formal bankruptcy, but they are carrying on pre-bankruptcy or in-lieu-of-bankruptcy negotiations. Their workers are seeing their contract changed and modified. The bondholders are seeing that they will get paid only one-third of what the bond contract says they are supposed to be paid in cash. So what kind of country is it when what was once our greatest industrial company, the investors and the bondholders of that company, the workers at that company are told that they have to take a substantial hit, but a giant casino, we are told, those who went and bet at that casino need to get every dollar their winnings entitle them to at the expense of the Federal Government and, oh, by the way, the croupier is supposed to get a $6 million bonus as well?

The difference is that the AIG-Wall Street axis represents the most powerful in the world, and they are not going to sit idly by as people say that just because AIG is insolvent, they should take less than everything they want.

What should have happened to AIG long ago is AIG should have gone into receivership. Now, this would have liberated their insurance subsidiaries and savings bank, which are healthy, to be spun off and to play the role that they need to play in our economy. Now, it is said that these subsidiaries would have been hurt, that the consumers of the insurance company would feel bad and reluctant and uneasy if AIG went into receivership because, after all, that would mean AIG would get a lot of bad press and some of that bad feeling might attach itself to these subsidiaries. Well, my God, is there anything that could have generated more bad press for AIG and every entity associated with it than the events of the last few days?

Had AIG gone into receivership, it would have been a 1-day story. Oh, in the financial press they would have covered it for weeks, but it would have been a 1-day story on the front page of every newspaper in the country. Instead, those affiliated and associated with AIG are being associated with what has got to be referred to as the worst business press any company has received.

The second thing that would have happened with receivership is that the general creditors, the counter-parties, the people who won by placing bets at the AIG casino would have to take less than what the contract provides. This would have been a reasonable outcome because one of the bets you make when you go to the casino is whether the casino is going to be able to pay. And if the house can't afford to pay, the House of Representatives shouldn't be the ones called upon to do so.

Finally, receivership would have voided or forced major modifications of all those bonus contracts that we are told are so sacrosanct that in a society with a rule of law we have got to pay the $6 million bonuses to the people who invented the AIG casino.

Now, we are told, oh, my God, we need these talented people to stay at AIG. We had testimony from the regulators of AIG's healthy subsidiaries, and they indicated to us in committee today that they have on their staffs at salaries between $100,000 and $150,000 people with expertise, substantial, major expertise, in credit default swaps. So if you want somebody with the expertise to deal with the assets that AIG needs to unwind, you may need to pay a salary of $100,000 or $150,000. But if you need not just that expertise but somebody who has the experience of creating a casino that destroyed the AIG Company and has imperiled the economy of the world, if you want somebody with the talent for that level of destruction, then you need to provide them with multi-million dollar bonuses. Clearly, AIG in receivership could have staff being paid reasonable amounts with the expertise necessary to carry on the necessary transactions.

Now, AIG is not the only one of these firms that should be in receivership because how can we make the major bank balance sheet healthy? What we're told is we have to remove the toxic assets. Well, I'm an old CPA. I know what a balance sheet looks like. And you never made a company any stronger by removing any kind of asset from its balance sheet. Now, if you cannot remove an asset from the balance sheet but, rather, trade a bad asset for a lot of taxpayer cash, that can, indeed, enrich the company, and that enrichment is reflected on the balance sheet.

But the way to strengthen these financial institutions isn't by taking assets off their balance sheet; it's by taking liabilities off their balance sheet. And how do you do that? Well, when you have an insolvent financial institution, you go into receivership. The creditors who are uninsured, the big boys, have to take a cut in the amount that's owed to them. That reduces the liabilities on the balance sheet. It increases the amount of net capital on the balance sheet, and that institution is able to emerge healthy and ready to do business and play the role in the economy it should.

Instead, we are told, Treasury is looking to buy the "toxic assets" in a "public-private partnership." When you hear that the Treasury is going to trade cash for trash, that they are going to give large amounts of money in return for the worst assets these banks have, then hold on to your wallets.

But now we are told it will be a partnership between hedge funds and the Treasury, in which the Treasury will put up almost all of the money and the Treasury will take almost all of the risk and the private hedge funds will get almost all of the upside. This is, needless to say, something that's going to be hard to sell to a skeptical American public.

We need to make sure that if there's any public-private partnership, that the terms on which the Treasury invests are identical to those terms of the private investors. They put a dollar on the table, we put a dollar on the table. They make a dime, we make a dime. We lose a dime, they lose a dime.

Instead, what I fear will be created is a system in which we put $9 on the table, they put $1. And if money is to be made, it goes chiefly to the folks that put in only $1 of capital. Beware of any system that is overly complex, because that is a system in which the taxpayers may get shortchanged.

I think we speak from experience, because taxpayers have already invested in the preferred stock of all these big banks, and the official congressional oversight panel says we got shortchanged to the tune of roughly $78 billion, 31 percent of the amount we invested. It got a few headlines for a while, and people have forgotten.

Now we're told that these same companies that shortchanged us, that took in $252 billion of our money but gave us securities worth $78 billion less than the cash we gave them, that they are eligible for further bailouts, that we are ready to do business with them as if they have sinned not at all. We should establish a policy that we are not doing business with these banks that shortchanged us until they give us additional preferred stock to fully compensate for the cash that we have put into the institutions.

I fear that this will not be the policy of the Treasury. We already know, because I asked them at the last hearing, that the major banks are unwilling, on their own, to issue additional preferred stock to the U.S. Treasury in order to make up for the fact that they have shortchanged us.

So we need to compel those additional shares of preferred stock to be issued. We need to be wary of buying toxic assets. We need to be wary of buying any assets on terms under which we put up most of the money and take most of the risk and private interests get most of the upside.

But let me return to the issues of executive compensation which are, after all, what has touched a nerve with the American people. Before I quite go to executive compensation, let's talk a little bit about why that nerve was hit and why the larger rip-offs of the taxpayer have generated less attention. The reason is simply that people understand what it is for somebody who screwed up a company and drove it into the ground and imperiled the American economy to get a $6 million bonus. They understand a $6 million bonus.

In contrast, the fact that the counterparties and general creditors of insolvent institutions are being paid in full when they should take a substantial haircut, that is something outside the experience of the American people. So, recently, we put up $30 billion to AIG. Immediately $20 billion went to the richest and most powerful in the world.

Over the last few months, tens of billions of dollars have gone to foreign banks, as if bailing out American banks wasn't taxing us sufficiently already, those are the multibillion, the $10 billion, the $100 billion transactions. They are complex, and Wall Street is able to use that complexity to say, "Oh, American taxpayers, you just don't understand, but trust us, trust us. The whole world economy will implode if you don't make sure that the credit default swap counterparties are paid in full."

And since so few Americans have much experience with credit default swaps, they have been able to sell that, and that's the big swindle. The small swindle is the $6 million, the $3 million bonus, the $165 million in total bonuses going to this unit of AIG at this time. That is something the American people understand.

So what are we going to do about it? First of all, let's reflect. If AIG had gone into receivership even a few days ago, those bonuses would not have been disbursed and the contracts under which they had been paid would have been modified or discarded. We still need receivership for AIG, but receivership last week would have been better.

But now we have an opportunity to use the Tax Code to make sure that those who receive excess compensation and who work for these big bailed-out banks have to give that money back, either to the employer, or have to give it back through the Tax Code to the American taxpayer.

Now I think that tax bill may reach this floor tomorrow. Let us discuss what should be in it, and I am concerned that a few things that should be in it will not be in it. First, and I think that the bill will be good in this respect, it shouldn't just be an AIG bill. What about the giant bonuses at Merrill Lynch?

What about all those who are getting multimillion-dollar bonuses and working at firms that are insolvent, firms that need to be propped up by this extraordinary and perverse departure from capitalism called the TARP program? We ought to treat all executives at the big bailed-out firms the same.

Now I see a reason to draw a line with those bailed-out firms that received only a few billion dollars in TARP money. They might be viewed separately. But those who have received many billions of taxpayer money, those companies, we ought to look to the executives and say we don't think you should be receiving more than a reasonable amount of compensation.

Now President Obama has drawn that line at half a million dollars of compensation per year. Plus, in his program, and he has several programs, this is the program that's most severe, plus an unlimited amount of restricted stock. That would be a reasonable line. Other people might draw the line differently.

But we need to apply it, not just to bonuses, but to other forms of compensation as well. We got all upset about bonuses, they started calling them retention payments. Now we are going to pass a tax law dealing with bonuses and retention payments.

You know what they are going to do? They are going to increase the salaries from $1 million a month up to $2 million a month. So the first thing we need, in any tax law designed to tax away the ill-gotten excessive compensation of executives with bailed-out firms is we need to deal with all forms of compensation, not just bonuses.

Otherwise we will go back to our constituents for the District Work Period and they will say, fine, Congressman, fine, Congresswoman, you dealt with the bonuses, what about the $1 million-a-month salaries? What about the fact that some of them went up to $2 million a month? Deal with the entire executive compensation. Deal with all of the major bailed-out firms.

Next, it is important that any tax bill provide explicitly what happens if, as we hope, the executive decides to return to the company the excessive portion of the compensation they have received.

So I look forward to working both on this floor and perhaps with a conference committee to have a bill that is comprehensive as to which companies it deals with, that is comprehensive in that it deals with all forms of compensation.

I see we have been joined by the esteemed gentlelady from Texas, and at this point I shall yield to her for whatever comments she would like to make to the House.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. I thank the distinguished gentleman from California, and I thank him for yielding. I have listened to the gentleman. We have participated in a number of caucuses where we have collectively expressed the importance of reinstituting regulation, but, more importantly, letting the people speak.

Our challenges to the actions of AIG are not new. I am reminded of the works that were done in the last administration in 2008. There was a whole litany of prohibition and restrictions, particularly to regulate how that money would be given. No bonuses was one of those that was highlighted.

In addition, to restrain the random use of money, reporting transparency, the idea of set-asides for those involved in mortgage foreclosures or modification, these are the issues we fought for.

And in a lesson that has been bitter, we have seen AIG literally implode the, if you will, sympathy of the American taxpayer.

I believe that the tax bill that's going to be on the floor tomorrow, I happen to support the efforts that are being made by the Judiciary Committee to provide for enforcement against those who would issue such, in essence, retention bonuses and to likewise require penalties and reimbursement.

But let me just indicate why we need to be strong in our regulation on these issues. We take note of the fact that the CEO of AIG came just a few months ago. We thanked him for committing to serving after AIG had reached the brink of collapse.

But I think the concern that I wish to speak to is the need for congressional oversight that was occurring in the Financial Services Committee today. It was occurring in the Judiciary Committee today. We should not be ashamed or shocked of holding the reins on entities that seem to be confused about the importance of congressional oversight.

The points that were most provoking and striking to me today in the Financial Services Committee hearing are two: one, that these retention bonuses were issued on a Saturday night. Sounds to me like something of old, the Saturday Night Massacre. I frankly thought that much of our business is done from 9 to 5 from Monday to Friday, but that was not the case.

But the other part of it that raised concern is the lack of transparency. Some government officials were made aware of this, in particular, the Federal Reserve. But committees that have oversight jurisdiction, either enforcement or regulation, just seem to be lost along the way.

How many times do we have to repeat the fact that these Members do not represent themselves? This House, in fact, is the people's House. The upper body, of course, represents the combination of Congress.

So I think it is important, as we look to the legislative focus, we also need to change minds and mindsets. But now that we are a major stakeholder, we do believe in capitalization, or capitalizing, restoring the markets, but we also think it is important that there be this link of understanding.

My question would be, and I am wearing a lawyer's hat, that if there was a legal premise on which one thought they had to give these bonuses, frankly, I believe, our legal system is strong enough, and the financial system, to have indicated that we are not giving these bonuses at this time and to, in essence, say, let us take it to court. In that instance, we would have had an independent arbiter to address the question of whether these bonuses were, in fact, adequate.

I look forward to the legislation making its way through this House dealing with taxation. I would hope that this would be recognized as not a punitive measure for people's hard work. Don't get the wrong idea. We understand hard work. We understand business hard work, small business hard work. We understand people who work in the financial markets, the hard work they do, the late hours. But we are partners now, and we have to do hard work on behalf of the American public.

We have got to cherish their tax dollars as we look forward to reform the health care system, as we make the markets work again. We have got to restore their confidence, that people will believe it's okay to invest in these large entities to make the market work.

So I would simply ask my colleagues as we begin to debate this, let us not mischaracterize any of our work. We have been fighting against this kind of debacle, if you will. Members have been working on both sides of the aisle. But I think it's honest to say that all of this started way back in the last administration.

The language of the TARP bill of that era, the $350 billion, was not with any restraint, and many of us argued against it, and there were arguments across party lines.

So let us now take the pledge, if you will, take the leap, if you will, in the cold waters to be able to accept the responsibilities—as a Judiciary Committee member, myself on the aspect of enforcement, and certainly I think the regulatory aspect, Mr. SHERMAN, is one that we need to ramp up.

I will simply close by saying we're here tonight—it's about quarter to eight eastern standard time, but it is after a full day of work. I just hope that we can find a better day than late Saturday night, early Sunday morning, or midnight Saturday night and Sunday morning, to make important decisions that are made by the private sector and give the opportunity to the American people to see transparency and let us fix these markets.

I'm prepared to fight the battle so that taxpayers can have a restoration of their confidence in what we are doing here but, more importantly, in what America stands for, and that is equality and justice and opportunity and fairness for all.

I thank the gentleman for yielding to me at this time, and I'd be happy to yield back.

Mr. SHERMAN. I thank the gentleman from Texas. At this point I would want to resume my comments about the tax bill or the latest draft of it that I expect will come before this floor tomorrow.

The bill is retroactive in the sense that it does affect the taxation of monies received in 2008. That is not the best way to pass tax law, but it is not uncommon to act right up until April 15, 2009 or, even later, to affect the tax law applicable to 2008 tax returns.

There have been many occasions when this House has, after the end of a calendar year, modified the tax law for that year. Usually, that takes the form of a tax reduction. But it has sometimes taken the form of a tax increase.

Second, I should point out that the draft that is in circulation now uses the term "capital infusions" so as to apply the bill to executives with companies that have received capital infusions of over $5 billion. The bill, however, does not define the term capital infusions and so it leaves open how it would apply in two different situations.

In one situation, it clearly would apply, and that is if the Federal Government spends $5 billion or more to buy preferred stock from a company, we have made a capital infusion in that company of $5 billion or more.

But it now appears that Treasury is going to buy toxic assets from companies. The authors of the tax legislation should indicate if somebody sells us a big package of bad mortgages for $5 billion or $10 billion, is that company covered by this new tax law—or are the executives covered by this new tax law.

Second, the draft that is coming before us—and this isn't really second, but this is last on my list, rather—deals, perhaps unfairly, with small bonuses.

The draft, for example—say you have an individual, and I will make it simple by assuming this individual is filing a separate tax return, separate from his or her spouse. And say the individual makes $125,000 a year salary and a $10,000 bonus. Under this draft, they face a penalty tax on the $10,000 bonus.

Well, somebody earning $125,000 dollars isn't terribly rich certainly, by Wall Street standards, and a $10,000 dollar bonus may not be excessive.

The bill's laser-like focus on bonuses could subject a $10,000 bonus to a $9,000 tax, notwithstanding the fact that if somebody is getting $1 million a month in salary, and no bonus—if you're getting $1 million a month in salary, I'm not sure you need a bonus—that person will face no additional tax under this tax bill.

So I would hope that the bill would be reconfigured to deal with the total compensation package, including salaries and, in any case, even if it's just going to be targeted at bonuses, should focus not on small bonuses received by people who are earning modest middle-class or even upper middle-class salaries.

The next point I would like to make—I think it's kind of obvious from the tone I'm taking that I voted against the TARP bill on this floor, twice, and hope that we see very substantial changes in the way we are dealing with financial institutions before we are called upon to vote on any financial rescue bill in the future.

One change we need to see, a change I think we can believe in, would be a change of personnel in Treasury as to the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury responsible for the TARP program. I refer to it not by its technical name but the Assistant Secretary for Big Bank Bailouts.

Neel Kashkari is a holdover from the last administration. He is, more than any other person, responsible for the fact that we got shortchanged to the tune of $78 billion worth of securities on our first $252 billion of security purchases. He is still there.

If there's one thing this country wanted change and expected would be changed on January 20 of this year, it would be the person in charge of the TARP program. And I look forward to the day when we get a new assistant secretary into that position. Even a temporary acting assistant secretary drawn from the banks of the bureaucracy would be an improvement over someone who has managed to lose 31 percent, and more, of everything we have invested.

Now I'd like to return to the process by which AIG revealed these bonuses. It is true that everyone paying attention is aware that AIG had a lot of excessively compensated individuals. In fact, when Neel Kashkari, the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, came before our committee, I questioned him about what I knew were $3 million bonuses being paid to AIG executives. I was able to point out to him that the TARP statute mandated that the Secretary of the Treasury provide standards of appropriate executive compensation, and that only because Treasury had deliberately intentionally ignored that general mandate were the—at that point, I only knew of $3 million bonuses being paid at AIG—were they paid.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Kashkari, then speaking for the old administration, but perhaps holding the same views under the new administration, would not opine on whether a $3 million AIG bonus was or was not appropriate executive compensation.

The fact is, Treasury continues to have the power and the duty to issue regulations defining executive compensation—appropriate levels of executive compensation at bailed out firms. They should do that, and do it promptly.

So, in any case, people were aware that there were executives at AIG getting enormous bonuses and huge salaries. But this last weekend, it was revealed to us some particularly painful details. First, that $165 million was about to be disbursed. Second, that the chief beneficiaries were going to be the people that created the most malignant casino in the history of Wall Street, the AIG Financial Products Division.

So all this money, or virtually all of it, was going to the people at the division that had destroyed the AIG company and much of Wall Street besides.

Finally, we learned that some of those bonuses would be in excess of millions of dollars—in one case, over $6 million. Those particulars were revealed just hours before the checks were distributed. And the question is: Did the securities law of the United States require that AIG reveal that much, much earlier.

If the securities laws are not that clear, they should be, because the theme of the securities laws are that a company must reveal on a timely basis material information to its shareholders. Material information is that which would influence the shareholders in a decision to invest.

Well, the American taxpayer invested $30 billion additional into the AIG morass just 2 weeks ago. I submit we definitely would have been influenced by knowing that these particular bonuses were being paid to the executives of the Financial Products Division of AIG.

But, instead, these bonuses were hidden from us. The particulars were hidden from us right up until hours before disbursement. Well, why was that done? Because we could have, as a country, put AIG into receivership before they got the last $30 billion. We could have saved ourselves $30 billion and, in the process, we would also have invalidated or forced a judicial modification of all those obnoxious bonus contracts.

But they didn't tell us about this. They didn't give us the particulars that are so important to the American taxpayer. They may have told one or two people over at the Federal Reserve Board, but securities law does not say that you reveal material facts to one or two people at the Federal Reserve Board. Securities law says material facts need to be revealed to shareholders promptly. And there is nothing that the 300 million shareholders of AIG—the American people—find more significant to them than this obnoxious bonus program.

I suggest that we were not told until the bonuses were distributed, not only to protect the bonuses, but to protect the concept that AIG's general creditors and counterparts should be paid in full with taxpayer dollars, as necessary.

America would be a lot happier today. The subsidiaries of AIG, the insurance companies and the savings bank, would be much stronger today. The likelihood of the administration being able to get this Congress to pass additional legislation if it finds that necessary would be much higher today.

If AIG had revealed these material facts in all of their very significant particulars months ago, or even weeks ago, but somebody at AIG decided not to tell us. Somebody at the Fed may have known these particulars and decided that the American people should not be trusted with such inflammatory information. And that is why we are where we are today.

I look forward to strengthening America's insolvent financial institutions, not by putting in hundreds of billions of dollars more of taxpayer money, not by creating partnerships in which we put up hundreds of billions of dollars but, if there's any upside, it goes to various hedge funds on Wall Street.

I look forward to strengthening these institutions, not by removing assets, even assets that have declined in value, but assets nevertheless, from their balance sheet. I look forward to strengthening these institutions by going into receivership, removing liabilities from their balance sheet, thereby increasing their net worth, their capital, and returning them to the private sector as very, very well-capitalized institutions.

What is standing in our way is the fact that that reduction in liability is a reduction in the amount payable to the most powerful in the world—the largest financial institutions in the world.

One final comment. I thank the House for indulging this lengthy speech. First we were told that AIG was too big to fail. Then the folks on Wall Street came up with a new story. They said AIG was too interconnected with other institutions to fail.

Well, AIG is not too big to fail. It's not too interconnected to fail. It's too well-connected to fail. But receivership is not failure for AIG. Receivership is the road to success for AIG.

It simply will cost these very well-connected general creditors, the ones who went and bet at the AIG casino, the ones who broke the AIG casino bank. It will simply cost them money. And this Congress and this government should have the courage to do just that for the benefit of the American people.

I yield back the balance of my time.

VACATING 5-MINUTE SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, permission for 5-minute special order speeches by the gentleman from California (Mr. SHERMAN) and the gentleman from Texas (Mr. POE) is vacated.

There was no objection.

THE FEAR OF GLOBAL WARMING

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 2009, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. POE) is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. POE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, tonight and today we have been hearing a lot about the economic crisis throughout the globe. Parallel to the concern about the economic crisis is another concern that we have been told about, and that is the fear of global warming. It preoccupies much of what we do here in this House, and it preoccupies much of what is in the media, not only in the United States but throughout the world.

I would like to read a portion of a Newsweek article, Mr. Speaker. It says:

There are ominous signs that the earth's weather patterns have begun to change dramatically, and that these changes may bring a drastic decline in food production with serious political implications for just about every nation on this earth. The drop in food output could begin quite soon, perhaps in only 10 years.

The regions destined to feel its impact are the great wheat-producing lands of Canada and Russia in the north, along with a number of marginally self-sufficient tropical areas, parts of India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Indo-China and Indonesia, where the growing season is dependent upon the rains brought by the monsoons. The evidence in support of these predictions has now begun to accumulate so massively that meteorologists are hard-pressed to keep up with it.

In England, farmers have seen their growing season decline by 2 weeks since 1950, with the result overall loss in grain production estimated up to 100,000 tons every year. During this same time, the average temperature around the equator has arisen by a fraction of a degree, a fraction that in some areas can mean drought and desolation.

Last April, the most devastating outbreak of tornadoes ever recorded, 148 twisters, killed more than 300 people and caused one-half billion dollars worth of damage in 13 States in the United States.

To scientists, these seemingly disparate incidents represent the advanced signs of a fundamental change in the world's weather. The central fact—and you note here, Mr. Speaker, it is a fact. It says: The central fact is that after three-quarters of a century of extraordinarily mild conditions, the earth's climate is beginning to cool down. That is right, Mr. Speaker, this article says the world is cooling down.

Meteorologists disagree about the cause and extent of this cooling trend as well as over its specific impact on local weather conditions, but they are almost unanimous in the view that the trend will produce agricultural productivity for rest of the century. If the climate change is as profound as some of the pessimists fear, the resulting famines could be catastrophic. A major climate change would force economic and social adjustments on a worldwide scale, warns a recent report by the National Academy of Science.

This article goes on and on, Mr. Speaker, to talk about the new Ice Age affecting the world; how we are going to have a new Ice Age that will come to the United States, all parts of the world, how our whole attitude about the world will change because it will be a cold place. Basically, Mr. Speaker, Newsweek in 1975, April 28, said we are all going to freeze in the dark.

Now the people who said this—and I remember all of this taking place back in the seventies, and I believed this nonsense, that we are all going to freeze, that the Earth is getting colder, and that we can't do anything about it and that it will never correct itself. I believed all that, as did a lot of other Americans, because it was based on, as this article says, scientific fact that the earth is getting colder. And these same people in 1975 that predicted that the earth was going to get colder are the same people today, in the year 2009, saying just the opposite: That the earth is getting hot. We are all going to roast. It is the same global warming crowd.

The difference is a few years have passed. And our attention span is so short as Americans, and other people in the world, we forget these predictions that occurred just 33 years ago. And that is unfortunate.

The people in the weather business, meteorologists, for example, who predicted the global warming and some that predicted the earth getting colder are the same people who can't predict tomorrow's weather. You know, these folks are the only people that I know of in our culture that can be consistently wrong and keep their jobs, but they do. They can't predict tomorrow's weather, but they are telling us, we are all going to roast because of global warming. I am not so sure that that is true.

The article goes ahead and points out that the earth is already one-sixth of the way toward the new Ice Age. And, of course, history proved the experts in 1970 wrong; that we did not all freeze. Now, in fact, they are predicting the opposite.

Mr. Speaker, last week we had the global warming crowd here in Washington, D.C., protesting how we provide energy for this building. Now I have nothing against folks who want to peaceably assemble and talk about issues. That is great. That is part of the American way. But it is interesting, they showed up on a day, March 2, where we had 10 inches of snow and one of the coldest days in recorded history in Washington, D.C., 18 degrees, and they were here protesting the way we find energy for this Capitol. And it is how inconsistent the global warming crowd is. They are against everything that produces energy, especially those bad, nasty oil companies.

They were wearing, and I thought this was interesting, green hard hats.

Which is fine. I asked one of the young ladies that was with the group, do you know what that hard hat is made out of? And she said, plastic. And I said, what do you think plastic is made out of? And she said, well, plastic is made out of plastic.

Contrary to what some people believe, plastic is not an element. It is not a mineral. Plastic, like many things that we see every day, is a derivative of crude oil. I told her that, and she didn't understand it or believe it, but whatever. The problem they see is the fact that humans are the problem; that we use energy, and that they wish to, I guess, eliminate humans on this earth because we are the problem, they say, in global warming.

Well, first of all, global warming is not a scientific fact even though some say that it is. There are other scientists who say we are not having global warming. Unfortunately, we have been basically told here in the House of Representatives that global warming is a scientific fact, and all of our legislation is going to be based upon the absolute fact of global warming. That is unfortunate. We should still continue the debate on, first, whether or not global warming is occurring; and, second, and most importantly, is it man's fault that there is a climate change? Scientists certainly disagree.

I think the bottom line in global warming and those that advocate that we are having global warming is it is real basic: It is all about money.

You see, those who advocate that we have global warming want more Federal dollars to study that issue to convince us that there is global warming, and they get those Federal dollars. Those meteorologists and scientists on the other side who say maybe we are not having global warming. Maybe climate change does occur, but man is not the fault; see, there is no money in saying that. There is only Federal dollars in saying, yes, there is global warming. It seems like those people who advocate global warming are just saying that because they are getting paid by the Federal Government.

Of course, the second issue is man, the culprit. I am not so sure man is the culprit. The jury is still out on that, and I think we should not be so fast to rush to judgment.

The last thing I wanted to point out is that, in the name of global warming, it really means more government control over our personal lives. That is what it is about, it is about money and it is about the fact that there is personal control over our lives by the Federal Government.

For example, soon the Federal Government is going to tell us all the type of light bulbs we can have in our homes. We have to go to those Chinese-only-made light bulbs that have mercury in them, because it soon will be the law that you can't buy any light bulbs except these energy-efficient light bulbs. The Federal Government wants to tell us what the kind of cars to use. The Federal Government wants to tell us what kind of energy to use, all in the name of global warming. But it is really control of our personal liberty in the name of global warming.

So the jury is still out on that issue, and I think we have an obligation to the American people to debate the issue of climate change, global warming, whether the earth is getting warmer or hotter, whether there is a climate change, and whether man is the culprit. I think that we should do that.

At this time, Mr. Speaker, I would like to yield such time as he wishes to consume to my good friend, Mr. ROHRABACHER, from California.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Thank you very much. And I will be amplifying on some of the points that you have made.

I would just like to suggest that, as a 20-year veteran of the Science Committee, this issue has been before me, and I have been through many hearings and many actual examinations of this particular issue.

Last week, President Obama pledged that during his administration he would see, and I quote, that scientific data is never distorted or concealed to serve a political agenda, and that we make scientific decisions based on facts, not ideology. End of quote.

Viewing this commitment through the lens of global warming gives us some hope that President Obama will break from the ranks of the lockstep conformity that is demanded of the politicized scientists concerning the issue of global warming. Perhaps now we can get on with discovering the truth through science, not chicken little science, but real science, and leave the political pressure out of it.

Unfortunately, up to today politicians like Vice President Al Gore have done their best to silence the rational voices of scientists who have been skeptical of Mr. Gore's agenda.

Let no one forget, Vice President Al Gore's first act as Vice President was to insist that Dr. William Happer be fired as chief scientist for the Department of Energy. Dr. Happer apparently had uttered words indicating that he was open-minded to the issue of global warming. So: Off with his head. Out the door. They wanted someone who was going to provide grants only to scientists whose would verify this man-made global warming theory. Dr. Happer was relieved in 1993, the first year of the Clinton-Gore administration. So for over a decade all we have heard is a one-sided drumbeat.

Dr. William Gray, now emeritus professor of atmospheric science at the Colorado State University, and a fellow of the American Meteorological Society, verified this. Quote: I had NOAA money for 30 years, Gray recounted. And when the Clinton administration came in and Gore started directing some of that environmental stuff, I was cut off. I couldn't get any money from NOAA. They turned me down 13 straight proposals. End of quote.

This man is one of the most prominent hurricane experts in the world who before received grants for study and scientific grants, but after Clinton-Gore he was turned down 13 straight times.

This gross intimidation of other scientists was done to lay the foundation; because if it could happen to this prominent scientist, it was going to happen to them. But it was done to lay down a foundation for a radical agenda that would change our life. The first thing he had to do was to have hand-picked scientists create fear that the planet was in jeopardy. Then these hand-picked scientists had to lie about everybody agreeing to that type of prediction.

Unfortunately, for all those scientists who went along with this scheme, now over a decade later, there is a big problem. The claim that the science is clear and there is a consensus that humans are directly responsible for global warming is now as clearly wrong as it is dishonest. Why is it clearly wrong? Because it has not been getting warmer for the last 8 years. It is harder for everybody to ignore that fact, especially as more and more scientists are stepping up and pointing it out. It is not getting any warmer. In fact, it hasn't been getting warmer for 8 years.

In January, a U.S. Senate minority report stated over 650 dissenting scientists from around the globe challenged manmade global warming claims made by the United Nations Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change as well as disagreeing with former Vice President Al Gore. The esteemed scientists being referred to come from a wide range of disciplines. Several are Nobel Prize winners. And many work at the most respected scientific institutions in the world. They totally disagree with the theory. They call it into question, this manmade global theory claim.

Finally, just last year the Oregon Institute of Science and Medicine released the names of some 31,478 scientists who signed a petition rejecting the claims of human-caused global warming. Of those 31,000, 9,029 have Ph.D.s. Many currently work in climatology, meteorology, atmospheric, environmental and geophysical studies, as well as astronomical studies, as well as the biological fields that directly relate to the climate change controversy.

So, there is no consensus. Thousands of scientists are disagreeing with what has been foisted upon us. Yet, we are bombarded by radical environmentalists and the media hype with the common refrain, "case closed, the global warming is real." It is repeated over and over again. "Case closed, global warming is real." Well, it is repeated as if it were a mantra by religious zealots. It was pounded into the public consciousness over the airwaves, in print and even in congressional hearings. Case closed. Well, this was obviously a brazen attempt to end open discussion and to silence differing views, dismissing the need to explore legitimate contrary arguments on both sides of the issue.

Again, there are hundreds of prominent scientists and meteorologists and heads of science departments at major universities, Nobel Prize winners and others who are highly skeptical and highly critical of this manmade global warming theory. But case closed. We shouldn't even listen to their arguments. There is Dr. Richard Lindzen, for example, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He has been adamant in his opposition, as has Dr. William Gray, whom I mentioned a moment ago, a world-renowned hurricane expert and fellow at the American Meteorological Society. He recently pointed out that the 15-year prediction by global warming activists that the Earth would by now be suffering many more and much more severe hurricanes, that that prediction was dead wrong. It doesn't come from me. It comes from Dr. William Gray, one of the most renowned hurricane experts in the world, who could not get a research grant during the Clinton-Gore administration.

So, let us note, the planet is not getting warmer. Hurricanes are at a 30-year low. But these views, and the views of so many more prominent scholars and scientists who also agree with these views, their views don't matter. The debate is over. Al Gore has his Nobel Prize, and the film "An Inconvenient Truth" has its Academy Award. So shut up and get your mind in lockstep with the politically correct prevailing wisdom, or at least what the media tells us is the prevailing wisdom. And no questions, please. The case is closed.

We have heard this dozens and dozens of times. Don't people who are advocating global warming, who are honest people, doesn't that cause them reason to pause and think, why are people trying to shut down the discussion? Okay, the science has been skewed by heavy-handed intervention in the awarding of research grants. It is clear now, evidenced by a propaganda barrage that would make George Orwell blush. This propaganda barrage has been aimed at the American people. So what is this theory that is now so accepted that grants were denied, the debate is deliberately stifled and that a barrage of propaganda is aimed at the American people to get them just to accept it? The manmade global warming theory is presented as scientific truism.

So, let's see, is it really? It is, let's say, specifically, it is a disturbing theory that the Earth began warming, a warming cycle 150 years ago. This was a warming cycle that differed greatly from all the other warming and cooling cycles that had gone on on this planet for millenniums. For as long as the Earth has a geologic history, there have been warmings and coolings. But this warming cycle of 150 years ago, we keep being told, is not like all the other cycles. This one is tied directly to mankind's use of fossil fuels, basically coal and oil. These so-called fossil fuels that have powered our industries and made civilization possible are, we have been told, causing a global-warming catastrophe. The weather is changing. It is getting hotter and hotter. After all, former Vice President Al Gore now said that, and I quote, "humanity is sitting on a time bomb. The vast majority of the world's scientists are right. We have just 10 years to avert a major catastrophe that could send our entire planet's climate system into a tailspin of epic destruction, involving extreme weather, floods, droughts, epidemics and killer heat waves beyond anything we have ever experienced, a catastrophe of our own making." Al said that, not acknowledging that when his statement was made, the world temperature had already ceased to climb in the previous 5 years. But he should be excused because he was so sure, really sure, that global warming would come back and then validate his warnings.

Why was he so sure? Because fossil fuels, people like Al tell us, put an ever-increasing level of so-called greenhouse gases into the atmosphere. The most prevalent is carbon dioxide, CO₂. This increase in CO₂, we are told, causes the warming that we are supposedly experiencing. Of course, we know that ended 8 years ago, but supposedly we are still experiencing it. We will just ignore that it hasn't been getting warmer for these last 8 years.

This manmade warming cycle, according to the theory, is rapidly approaching a tipping point, as we have just heard from Al, when the world's temperature will abruptly jump and accelerate with dire and perhaps apocalyptic consequences for the entire planet. If one accepts this as fact, then manmade global warming is overwhelming our planet even as we speak. If we believed that, then we would be expected to accept controls, regulation, taxation, international planning and enforcement, mandated lifestyle changes, lower expectations, limits on consumer choice, as well as personal and family sacrifices. All of this we would be expected to accept as necessary to save our planet from—well, from us.

What are the costs of these controls? According to the Wharton Economic Forecasting report, complying with the Kyoto treaty alone would reduce our country's national output by $300 billion annually and would result in the loss of 2.4 million jobs. The cap-and-trade legislation, now being considered in Washington, would cost American industry $600 billion. This, of course, will simply be passed on to consumers in the price of the goods that we purchase.

By the way, when President Obama said there will be no new taxes for anyone with less than a $250,000 annual income, did he include all of this money that was going to be added to the price of the goods that we are paying by federal regulations that are trying to deal with global warming? I wonder who is going to pay that $600 billion. Is it just the people who make over $250,000 a year? Well, promise or no, this economically oppressive medicine will be shoved down our throats at a time of incredible hardship and economic chaos in our country. We can't afford to lose millions of jobs.

To charge the American taxpayer billions more in the price of the goods they buy, which is little more than a thinly disguised tax, is unconscionable. We can't afford to increase the electric costs as much as 129 percent, which is predicted. And significantly, they would like to raise the price of gasoline once more. They want it to stay at $4 a gallon.

It really takes a lot to frighten people into accepting such economically destructive and personally restrictive mandates that would result from the implementing of a global warming-based agenda. That is why the debate has been stifled. The case is closed. The phony claims of consensus. That is why the proponents of this theory have been so heavy-handed, heavy-handed enough to interfere with the unbiased issuances of research grants. How else, except for dishonest tactics, can they frighten people to accept the huge changes in their lives that they will be required to make by the global warming community? And these are not changes that are being made, changes for the better in their lives, otherwise they would make them gladly and voluntarily. Inexpensive air travel, for example, the global warming alarmists believe that jet aircraft should be considered among the worst CO₂ polluters. Jet travel, therefore, must be restricted. People are expected to give up the freedom to use cheap air fares. So how many people are aware of that? If the global warming fanatics have their way, there will be no more discounted airline tickets, which of course means fewer visits to see our loved ones and fewer visits to explore the world.

Better known, however, is the global warming movement's commitment to severely restrict the use of private automobiles. The rich will still have their limos and of course their private jets. Carbon offsets will see to that.

Certainly Al and the others will be let off the hook because of these carbon offsets which, of course, Al will also profit from by organizing them in the private sector. The rest of us will not be able to travel by plane and will be stuck sitting at home or sitting next to a gang member on public transportation.

If we are just staying at home, what does that leave us? Is that a better life? Outlandish global warming predictions, then, are designed to strike fear into the hearts of those malcontents who just won't be willing to accept giving up those low-priced air fares and will not accept government mandates in their lifestyle. They just won't stay at home. Those changes, we are told, are needed to save the planet. Well, if proponents have their way, people are just going to have to accept things like higher food prices and, importantly, less meat in their diet. That's right. They want to wean us away from meat. A 2006 report entitled "Livestock's Long Shadow" to the United Nations mentions livestock emissions and grazing, and it places part of the blame for global warming squarely on the hind parts of cows. Cows are to be added to the list of greenhouse-emitting machines. So, not only are we going to be forced to cut our personal air travel and our ground transportation, as I say, which keeps us at home, but then when we stay home, we can't even have a barbecue. And heck, they won't even let us have a hamburger.

I point out that before the introduction of cattle to the United States, millions upon millions of buffalo dominated the Great Plains of America. They were so thick you could not see where one herd began and the other ended. One can only assume that the anti-meat manmade global warming crowd must believe that buffalo farts have some redeeming value that is better than the flatulence emitted by cattle.

Underscoring this dishonesty of the global warming fanatics, in my attempt to make light of the argument that cattle production is an evil element of our world, I once suggested, in jest, that perhaps dinosaurs' flatulence changed the climate in those days which may have ended the time of the dinosaurs. Well, it was widely reported that I was serious when I said that. Anyone who could suggest that I was serious and not making light of the other person, and I say respectfully making light of the other person's argument, anybody who reports that I was serious, that I really believed that dinosaurs were extinct because of flatulence is intentionally portraying something that they know not to be true, or they are just ignorant. But I believe we are not talking about ignorant people, we are talking about people who are portraying things that they know not to be true as if it were true.

What we have here is steely-eye fanaticism by those on the other side of the global warming debate; people clearly blinded by fanaticism and, thus, are unable to grasp nuance, unable to grasp a bit of humor added to a debate, and certainly unable to honestly examine an opposing argument.

But let's look at the proof these zealots give us to back up their claim of global warming that is threatening our planet. Let's be honest enough to be open minded to what they are presenting us.

First, let's note that the baseline used to prove global warming is 1850. I have been through hearing after hearing in the Science Committee. And 1850, by the way, is the year in which they judge whether the planet is getting warmer or cooler. And 1850 also marks something else: it marks the end, the bottom end, the final end of a 500-year decline in the Earth's temperatures called the Mini Ice Age. Yes, it was a cycle trending down for about 500 years, and it all got down to about 1850 when it started trending up. So 1850 is the baseline for judging warming of our planet? Does that make any sense? They are making comparisons against a temperature that was the bottom end of a 500-year decline in temperature. I pointed that out at numerous hearing and in numerous debates, and the issue continues to be ignored.

So if anyone out there is listening and is honest, please give us an answer: Isn't 1850 a dishonest date to use as a baseline to prove that the Earth is getting warmer? Isn't the statistical base clearly flawed when you start at a low point?

Then there are, of course, the predictions that we have heard. In testimony before Congress 20 years ago, NASA's James Hansen predicted CO₂ would shoot up and global temperatures would shoot up by more than one-third of a degree Celsius during the 1990s, and the trend would then escalate. A rise in temperature was predicted, and it would lead to what: rising sea levels, cities underwater, droughts and famines and an increase in tropical diseases; yes, tropical diseases.

Sometimes it is difficult for me when radical environmentalists use that as an example considering that tropical diseases, especially malaria, have killed millions of children in the Third World because radical environmentalists have been successful in banning DDT; but that is another issue.

It has been awhile since the apocalyptic predictions by global warming fanatics were made. Were these predictions correct? Mr. Hansen said the temperature would rise by a third of a degree just a little over a decade ago, and the answer is that the predictions turned out to be dramatically wrong. Temperatures during that decade rose only one-third of what was predicted by Mr. Hansen, a modest increase to the point that it would alarm nobody and would be of little difference than any of the other many cycle changes that we have seen on our planet over our planet's millions of years of history.

Again, over the past 8 years there hasn't even been a modest rise of temperature, again as differentiated from what Mr. Hansen predicted.

We shouldn't be surprised. Climate modeling, which is the basis of almost all alarmist predictions, is not an exact science. No weather or climate model has ever been accurate to the point the alarmists would have us believe. This was stunningly clear when Dr. Hansen called for an anti-global warming protest here in Washington 2 weeks ago that the gentleman from Texas (Mr. POE) just talked about. The day the demonstrators arrived coincided with the worst snowstorm in a year and the coldest March 2 in more than a decade.

So let's look at the other predictions. He was dead wrong to try to call a global warming demonstration on the coldest day of the year because he didn't think it would be cold. Numerous and powerful other hurricanes were forecast by the National Hurricane Center for NOAA and others. Okay, that is what we were going to have. The last decade, the global warming people said we would have more and more hurricanes. Well, for the last 8 years it hasn't been getting warmer, and we haven't seen more hurricanes. Yes, as I stated earlier, the number of hurricanes is at a 30-year low.

During the Clinton administration, scientists produced a study and then another study and another study predicting the horrific impact of the unstoppable onslaught of manmade global warming: droughts, fires, polar ice caps melting, mass extinctions, all of this, report after report, what I call Chicken Little science. We were led to believe this nightmare would be overwhelming us by now. Of course, if there was even a hint that the conclusion wouldn't back up this global warming theory, the scientists who applied wouldn't have seen one red cent of Federal research money.

And just recently Tom Knutsen, research meteorologist for NOAA, the ones who ended up not being able to give Dr. Gray any research grants, this gentleman, Mr. Knutsen, now says that he has reviewed the evidence and totally changed his mind and now admits that he was wrong about global warming and the increase of hurricane activities. So here is a scientist with integrity. Such scientific integrity did not always rise to the occasion.

Contrary to what all of those scientists living on their Federal research grants predicted, the world hasn't been getting warmer. In fact, in the last 8 years there has been no warming at all. Global snowfall is at record levels, and there are fewer, not more hurricanes. And yes, there is some melting in the Arctic. We hear about it over and over again. In fact, NBC did a special on the melting of the Arctic and how bad it is, showing penguins sitting on diminished pieces of ice in the Arctic. The problem is that penguins don't live in the Arctic. There are no penguins in the Arctic. They live in the Antarctic. So NBC had it wrong. Somebody must have told them that the penguins from the Arctic were being victimized by global warming.

In fact, the Antarctic where the penguins live, there is a buildup of ice going on. It is getting colder in the Antarctic. In the Arctic, of course, we recognize there has been some rise in temperatures; that due, which many experts tell us, to ocean currents that have changed in the last few years. But emphatically, it is not due to CO₂ that comes from somebody's SUV. The Arctic is in fact returning to the temperature levels of the 1940s.

And what about the disappearing polar bears? Are the polar bears really disappearing? Dr. Mitchell Taylor from the Department of Environmental Studies under the Canadian territory of Nunavut, and other experts suggest that all but two types of polar bears are flourishing. So yes, two types of polar bears out of 13 different types, two of those types are in decline. The rest of the polar bears, the population is expanding. So there are more polar bears. Let me say that again: more polar bears. But here we are, understanding there are more polar bears in the world, we are treated with a spectacle of polar bears being put onto the endangered species list with a caveat that they really aren't endangered now, but with global warming, they are expected to dwindle. Never mind that the global warming trend stopped 8 years ago.

Unfortunately, the debate on this case is not closed. So emerging obvious differences between reality and theory needs to be addressed by people who have been advocating the global warming theory. Even without going outside and checking the thermometer, it is easy to tell that the predictions of manmade global warming were wrong. How can you tell they were wrong? Because they don't even use the words "global warming" anymore. The words "climate change" have now replaced the words "global warming." Get that? Every time you hear the words "climate change," it is evidence of error that they were wrong to begin with, or of deceit on the part of radical environmentalists.

So no matter what happens from now on, climate change has replaced global warming, and whether it is hotter or cooler, it can be presented as further indication that humans have caused the change that is taking place. No, there have been changes in our weather forever. You have always had adjustments up and down, trends and cycles.

We just need to ask ourselves, if a salesman gives a strong pitch and makes claims about something that is later to be found out to be wrong, totally wrong, when do you stop trusting the salesman? Then if he starts playing word games and changing the actual words he is using about the same product, and rather than just admitting that he was wrong, he just changes the words he is using but he is talking about the same product, isn't it reasonable to stop trusting this person?

Yes, Al Gore and company, we have noticed that you are now saying climate change rather than global warming. They tried to slip it in, but we have noticed.

So, why the alteration? Why are they doing that? That is because the world has not been getting warmer in the last 8 years as predicted, and everybody is beginning to notice it. So we actually see a beehive of activity because of this. Those federally funded scientists who were sucked into this are now trying to save themselves some modicum of credibility, this even as more and more scientists speak up and publicly disassociate themselves with the scientific claims of global warming that have been foisted upon us.

To understand all of this nonsense, you have to go back and look at the basic scientific assumptions that are being used by the global warming alarmists. They claim that excessive amounts of manmade CO₂ are being deposited in the air which causes a greenhouse effect that warms the atmosphere. They call this increase in CO₂ mankind's carbon footprint. The global warming analysts want us to judge everything by its carbon footprint. What that means is how much CO₂ is being released as a result of that specific activity is a carbon footprint. They adamantly believe that it is CO₂ that causes our planet to warm and that more CO₂, the hotter it will get, and an increasing CO₂ problem. And why is CO₂ increasing, according to these folks, that is due to us. And although mankind is responsible for significantly less than 10 percent of all CO₂ in the Earth's atmosphere, we are told climate change is our fault.

Can one huge volcano spew more CO₂ into the atmosphere than all of the people of the world? Yes, but that is still our fault.

Can one huge fire, like the one we had recently in Australia, throw just as much CO₂ into the air? Yes, but it is still our fault.

Rotting trees in the Amazon and the by-product of rot and termites may cause even more CO₂ than what people put into the air, all of the people on the planet? Well, yes, but again, it is our fault that CO₂ is rising.

This concept, just like the extrapolations from their computers is wrong, dead wrong. Andrei Kapitsa, a Russian geographer and Antarctic ice core researcher, slammed the U.N. IPCC, and this is the report that has been used to justify all of this monstrous and very dangerous global warming agenda, well this Russian ice core researcher suggests it is "the biggest scientific fraud" in 2008. "The Kyoto theorists have put the cart before the horse. It is global warming that triggers higher levels of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere, not the other way around."

Furthermore, he went on to point out, "A large number of critical documents submitted at the 1995 U.N. Conference in Madrid vanished without a trace. As a result, the discussion was one-sided and heavily biased, and the U.N. declared global warming to be a scientific fact. We found out that the level of CO₂ had fluctuated greatly over the period, but at any given time increases in air temperature preceded higher concentrations of CO₂." This is exactly opposite from what is the basis of the whole global warming argument.

So this is the challenge; many prominent scientists including the head of the Russian Academy of Science—who I recently met with, I might add, talking about this issue—are now confirming that the rise in CO₂ comes after global temperatures increase, not before. This has been observed in ice cores, yet this has been again ignored by those who were screaming their warnings at us.

Please, give us an answer to this challenge. Why ignore it? How can the American people just accept the validity of the argument that's being presented to us when they just ignore challenges to the validity of their argument? If the increase in CO₂ is not the cause of any warming cycle the world may experience, how can there be any validity at all to any of the demands made upon us?

We have had many warming cycles in the past, but what these scientists are telling us is CO₂ increase did not cause those warming cycles. In fact, Dr. Claude Allegre, the scientist who first postulated the theory that CO₂ increase was spiking the world's temperature, has now changed his mind. Officially, he says he was wrong. He told Al Gore he was wrong. Al Gore won't listen.

So what is the cause of the world's warming and cooling cycles? If it's not CO₂, if the global warming crowd refuses to deal with that issue and look at that specifically and deal with that challenge, okay, well, I assume they're wrong. But what is it that we really believe causes these changes that have gone on for millenniums in the Earth's temperature? It's called sun spots. Yes, solar activity. That explains why one sees similar temperature cycles on Mars and Jupiter to the cycles that are happening on this planet. That's why icecaps on those planets, like on ours, expand and contract. It's the sun, stupid.

So take note that the very argument upon which global warming is built has proven to be false, and that manmade global warming activists will not address this issue. This is the most supreme arrogance that I have witnessed in my 30 years in Washington. After all, the case is closed. We don't need to discuss any more details. Yet, expert after expert keep pointing to the flaws in their central argument.

And Mr. Gore's mumbo-jumbo notwithstanding, the predictions have been wrong. And the CO₂ premise is wrong. The methodology that has been used has been wrong. The observations have been wrong. The attempt to shut up those people who disagree with them has been wrong.

Now, I remember when I chaired the Subcommittee on Research and Science in the House back when the Republicans controlled this body. I insisted that both sides be present and that expert witnesses be expected to address each other's points and contentions. This methodology led Al Gore to refer to me as a "Stalinist." I would suggest that the propaganda campaign of the manmade global warming alarmists has much more in common with Stalinism than does insisting that both sides of an issue be heard at a congressional hearing. One has to really believe that he or she has a corner on the truth to make such a complaint that Stalinism is having both sides presented and addressing each other's points.

Of course, Al Gore's documentary, "An Inconvenient Truth," suggests by its title that what he says should be taken as truth. Well, I won't go into the numerous debatable points and outright errors in that film, but there is something far worse in that film. This pseudoscientific documentary—what I call Chicken Little science—presented numerous film segments of climate and environmental incidents similar to those footages that you would see from National Geographic. This added to the credibility of the points being made. Specifically, the film portrays a dramatic cracking and breaking away of a huge portion of the polar icecap. The scene is awesome and somewhat overwhelming, and leaves the audience with the feeling that they have witnessed a massive historic occurrence. Unfortunately, it's all a fake. This is not grand, firsthand photographic evidence. It's not National Geographic footage of a huge breaking away of a portion of the icecap. Instead, what the audience is looking at is a deceptive use of special effects. It's not the icecaps, it's Styrofoam. That's right, Styrofoam special effects trying to fool us into thinking we're observing an occurrence by nature. By the way, isn't Styrofoam an oil-based product or something? Isn't there some sort of carbon footprint with Styrofoam? Well, Mr. Gore has not commented on this depiction. Maybe it is "inconvenient" for him to comment because it may hurt his credibility. After all, it's not getting warmer, as he predicted; so maybe his, let's say, theories that are based on Styrofoam are inaccurate as well.

The first time I met Al Gore was in my first term in Congress back in 1989 and '90. Al Gore was then a United States Senator, and he marched into the science room, followed by a platoon of cameras and reporters. He sat in front of our committee demanding that President Bush—that's George W.'s father—declare an ozone emergency. He waved a report in his hand as evidence that there was an ozone hole opening up right over the northeast of the United States. A few days later, the report touted by Senator Gore was found to have been based on faulty data, data collected by one so-called researcher flying a single-engine Piper cub with limited technology and no experience. The emergency declaration the Senator called for would have had severe negative consequences on the people who live in the northeast part of the United States.

Now, does anybody detect a pattern here? Such a scare tactic—as I say, Chicken Little-ism—based on false information? Well, it isn't new. We have had many examples, not just of Al Gore, but of others playing this sort of tactic in order to get their way.

In 1957, the FDA recalled 3 million pounds of cranberries. A few years later, the FDA admitted it was a total mistake. Sorry. Of course, there was a tremendous price to be paid; a large number of our farmers went out of business. They went broke because nobody had their cranberries for Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Then, of course, there was the scare over cyclamate, used in everyday items like sodas, jams, ice cream. It was very sweet and extremely low in calories. In the early 1970s, the FDA banned cyclamate as a cancer hazard. Well, come to find out, the rats in their study had been force-fed the equivalent of 350 cans of soda a day, and only eight of the 240 rats that they had crammed all this soda in actually got sick. It was a faulty test. And eventually, years later, the truth finally prevailed, and it was officially recognized that cyclamate does not cause cancer. Canada, by the way, never banned cyclamate. Our northern buddies, I guess, just couldn't get themselves to force-feed those rats.

Well, the FDA did take back its negative finding. It came up with the truth, finally. However, great damage was done. This episode had serious consequences. It was the cyclamate ban that led to the introduction of high-fructose corn syrup, with the obesity and health problems that have come with high-fructose corn syrup. So, yes, another scare tactic, another American industry—cyclamate—decimated, another rotten theory with unintended consequences foisted upon us.

The next example of fearmongering with pseudoscience came in February of 1989. On the evening of February 26, Americans tuned in to "60 Minutes" and heard Ed Bradley say, "The most potent cancer-causing agent in our food supply is a substance sprayed on apples to keep them on the tree." He went on to warn that children were being put at risk by eating Alar-dusted apples. The story snowballed out of control, climaxing with actress Meryl Streep's testimony before Congress. Frantic parents tossed apples out the window, schools removed apple sauce from the cafeteria and replaced those apples and that apple sauce with more safe and nutritious substances, like ice cream and pudding. Well, there is only one small problem; Alar, which is what was on the apples, didn't cause cancer. A study later found out that that was wrong. Twenty thousand apple growers in the United States suffered enormous harm.

Then, of course, there was Three Mile Island; another fake, another situation where people were stampeded. And what we ended up with that, no one was hurt at Three Mile Island, but instead, what it did was it created a political momentum that destroyed our ability to utilize nuclear energy in the United States. Instead, we are still dependent on coal and other fuels. We are dependent on oil and other fuels that we now have to buy from people overseas. Jane Fonda's movie, "China Syndrome," helped create the scare. It has had an enormously negative impact. Ironically, today radical environmentalists still make attempts to stop the expansion of nuclear energy for producing electricity, even as we remain dependent on foreign oil and continue to use coal-fired plants.

Then we know about the ozone hole in Latin America, which was supposed to be around for decades, and then mysteriously it just naturally closed up after just a few years. Again, another cycle of nature presented to us as if there was some major problem with human activity.

Of course, what we've got is an example of—and we have already been presented this by my colleague—where people, just a few years ago, were talking about global cooling in the same way that they now talk about global warming.

Then there was, of course, acid rain. Ronald Reagan, thank God, stood firm. Instead of putting controls on our economy to stop so-called "acid rain," he insisted on long-term scientific research. And when that research came out, it verified that acid rain was not caused by people, and it was not the problem that it was being portrayed as. So we have seen these tactics over and over again.

What we should be doing, when we hear people trying to scare us into accepting controls, accepting higher taxes, what we need to do is make sure that their science is challenged, and that we do so with an open mind. Our goal should not be to end global warming because it doesn't exist. We should be focusing on global pollution, not CO₂, but the pollutants that will hurt our people.

One of the great damages that the global warming people are doing to us today is focusing our attention on CO₂ when we should be focusing our attention on the other pollutants that threaten the health of our people. We don't need to save the planet by utilizing certain energy, we need to save the human beings on this planet. And the CO₂ focus of the global warming crowd is causing the great damage to the well-being of our people by focusing us on the wrong enemy.

I would ask that the rest of my statement be made part of the RECORD.

Then there's the so-called nuclear disaster at Three Mile Island. This incident put an end to expanding the use of nuclear energy for the production of America's electricity. It is the prime example of how devastating pseudoscience scare tactics can be. In this case, our country ended up heavily dependent on foreign oil, while France has developed a thriving nuclear infrastructure. The French learned how to reprocess uranium. We learned how to buy more energy from abroad. Three Mile Island also left us dependent on coal fired power plants and their pollution. Was this really better than the "risk" associated with nuclear power?

An operational mishap at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant was portrayed as a deadly accident putting millions of people in jeopardy. Well, no one has yet to show me that one person's life was shortened by the Three Mile Island incident.

Because the media hype was coupled with Jane Fonda's movie called "The China Syndrome," which had just been released, the Three Mile Island incident "became" in the public's mind a major disaster. The only kind of disaster that really happened was a major public relations disaster. The American people were terrified into rejecting nuclear energy as a means of producing clean, reliable, domestically fueled electric energy.

Ironically, nuclear power is probably the most effective means of producing power with no carbon footprint, no CO₂. Yet the radical environmentalists to this day still block attempts to expand the use of nuclear energy, even as we expand our dependency on foreign oil, and continue to use coal fired plants. Again, it was a total con job and has had a horrible impact on our lives.

And what about that ozone hole over the Antarctic? We were told it would continue to grow and grow and it would take decades to get it under control. Boyce Rensberger, director of the Knight Fellowship at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, now points to evidence that the ozone concentration is a cyclical event, expanding and contracting the ozone throughout the eons of time. It's just part of a natural cycle according to this scientist from MIT.

So here is a scientist from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology telling us the current ozone depletion is simply part of a recurring cycle, not the result of chlorofluorocarbons, as we were told. In layman terms, he's telling us that the gigantic expense of shifting away from aerosol was a waste for America. We're talking about billions of dollars here. The ozone hole closed on its own. It was just part of a cycle. If it wasn't, it would be much different than it is today.

Then there is acid rain. Who can forget the frightening threats that acid rain posed to us just 20 years ago? Acid rain was supposed to decimate our forests, destroy fresh water bodies, and erode our buildings and sidewalks. Well, what ever happened to acid rain? Well, that theory, too, proved to be an extreme stretch.

President Reagan was pummeled without mercy for his unwillingness to take monstrously costly action aimed at thwarting acid rain. He insisted on waiting for an in-depth study to be completed, and he was vilified for his insistence on legitimate scientific verification.

Well, a 10-year study by the National Acid Precitation Assessment Project was submitted to Congress in 1990. It minimized the human impact of acidity of water in the northwest and the northeast of the United States. The issue then died quickly and quietly, and no one ever apologized to Ronald Reagan. We haven't heard about acid rain. If they were right, we should have been hearing about it all this time.

Instead, of course we've been hearing about something else which is much easier to scare people with, global warming. And of course, the last one before global warming that I'd like to mention is the most pitiful of all. Yes, an alarmist scheme which made the cover of Time magazine 30 years ago.

Just 3 decades ago, scientists and politicians were frantic about global cooling. We were told the Earth was entering a new ice age. Unfortunately for the scaremongers, the temperature did not plummet and the oceans did not freeze. In fact, it was getting a bit warmer during the 1980s and 1990s. It was part of the Earth's on-going up-and-down cycles, as has always been the case.

Well, some of those people, some of those scientists, and others who were talking about global cooling, changed their words, and, you guessed it, global cooling became global warming. Almost overnight global cooling was rejected, and then global warming was in vogue. And now, of course, global warming is changing to climate change.

So, scare tactics are nothing new; it's a tried and true method. Those pushing an agenda know people can be frightened and stampeded; and then policies can be foisted on a hysterical public. Unfortunately, this time around, the long-term consequences will be very, very damaging for the next generation.

I often ask students visiting from my southern California district whether they think that 45 years ago, when I went to high school in southern California, whether the air was cleaner or dirtier than it is now. A huge percentage believe that the air quality 45 years ago in southern California was dramatically better than it is today. When I tell them that what they believe is 100 percent wrong, that the air is dramatically cleaner today in southern California, you can see the frustration in their eyes; they have been lied to in a big way.

The big lie their generation has been fed is that the environment is going the wrong way and that they have to give up their freedom, and that they have to give up their expectations of certain things in their life because the future is bleak. They are told the lie that we have to give up our national sovereignty, because it's a global crisis—everything about the environment—the air, the water, the land—is all getting worse. In fact, there's been tremendous progress in cleaning up the pollution that not that long ago was found in our air, water and soil.

And let me tip my hat to the environmentalists. This progress has been as a result of government regulations, often pushed by liberal Democrats. For anyone not to admit that would be disingenuous.

But the fact is that our children are now being told that this man-made global warming will devastate our whole planet.

Dr. John Christy, a professor of Atmospheric Science at the University of Alabama at Huntsville, has a different perspective, "I remember as a college student at the first Earth Day being told it was a certainty that by the year 2000 the world would be starving and out of energy." Dr. Christy goes on to say, "Similar pronouncements made today about catastrophes due to human-induced climate change sound all too familiar and are all too exaggerated for me, as someone who actually produces and analyzes climate information."

So, we are told that polar bears are dying, but they aren't. We are told that the polar ice caps are melting, but now we know that in the Antarctic, ice is actually growing.

Hurricane Katrina, we were told would only be the first of many horrendous hurricanes to hit the United States in the next few years but, of course, there has been no significant rise in the number or strength of hurricanes. Recently it was pointed out that a hurricane just as strong as Katrina hit the United States 100 years earlier, long before the effects of "global warming."

Katherine Richardson, one of the organizers of the Copenhagen Conference, an "emergency summit" established to forward the next Kyoto Protocol, advertised the event not as "a regular scientific conference. This is a deliberate attempt to influence policy." It was, she admitted, "Explicitly designed to stoke up the fear of global warming to an unprecedented pitch."

THERE IS NO CONSENSUS

What we have is calculated alarmism at its worst, and the consequences will be very, very severe if we let such fanatics determine policy that will shape the lives of our children. I would submit a list of 650 members of the scientific community, who I mentioned earlier; who do not agree that human activity is causing an unprecedented global warming trend.

People like me have been labeled with the epithet "skeptics." Let me suggest something—science is skepticism. A scientist doesn't "believe" something to be true. Nor does he negotiate a solution with his colleagues. He does not reach consensus. A scientist doubts, tests, verifies, and repeats. A scientist engages in a search for answers by forming a theory and trying to tear it apart. He invites his colleagues to prove him wrong and encourages other points of view. A scientist will do everything he can to prove a theory wrong. Only then, when he and his colleagues are unsuccessful at disproving a concept, will he accept it.

Dr. William M. Briggs, a climate statistician and professor at Cornell, explained that his colleagues described "absolute horror stories of what happened to them when they tried getting papers published that explored non-'consensus' views."

Nobel Prize Winner for Physics in 1973, Ivar Giaever, a fellow of the American Physical Society, declared himself a dissenter in 2008. "I am a skeptic," Giaever announced in June 2008. "Global warming has become a new religion," Giaever added.

UN IPCC award-winning environmental physical chemist Dr. Kiminori Itoh of Yokohama National University, a contributor to the 2007 UN IPCC AR4 (fourth assessment report) as an expert reviewer, publicly rejected man-made climate fears in 2008, calling the promotion of such fears "the worst scientific scandal in the history."

Environmental Scientist Professor Delgado Domingos of Portugal, the founder of the Numerical Weather Forecast group, who has more than 150 published articles said, "Creating an ideology pegged to carbon dioxide is a dangerous nonsense . . . The present alarm on climate change is an instrument of social control, a pretext for major businesses and political battle. It became an ideology, which is concerning."

Dr. William Happer, award-winning Princeton physicist, said that "much of the current warming occurred before the levels of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere were significantly increased by the burning of fossil fuels."

Dr. Takeda Kunihiro, vice-chancellor of the Institute of Science and Technology Research at Chubu University in Japan, said CO₂ emissions make absolutely no difference one way or another. . . . Every scientist knows this, but it doesn't pay to say so . . . Global warming, as a political vehicle, keeps Europeans in the driver's seat and developing nations walking barefoot."

Cleaning our air and water from real pollutants is very important to Americans. It's important to us, to our children and our grandchildren. If we fail to leave a world clean of real pollutants because we were focused on CO₂, then we will have done a major disservice to future generations. Let me emphasize that the issue should be global pollution, not global warming or climate change or any other phrases made up to scare people.

So with this said, we need to ask: what is the negative impact of all of this lack of truthful information? What could possibly happen? What is the big deal if someone is making a claim that global warming exists and it is caused by humankind and in reality it is just the pollution that we are both trying to get at? Well, it just doesn't work that way.

CONCLUSION

The fact is if we accept this theory of man-made global warming, we will be focusing our activities on trying to eliminate CO₂ rather than on eliminating toxic substances from our air, land and water. I am concerned about my children, my three triplets, Christian, Anika and Tristan; I am concerned about their health, which is something that I think I share with every parent. Their health is not in any way threatened by CO₂.

Carbon dioxide is, in fact, like the penguins and the Styrofoam ice caps. It's being falsely pictured. It is being portrayed as a pollutant; in fact, it makes things grow, and it is not toxic to humans. In the distant past the earth had much more CO₂ in the air, perhaps as a result of volcanoes, but at that time we had abundant animal life, dinosaurs and lots of plants for them to eat. CO₂ is today pumped into greenhouses to make tomatoes grow bigger and better.

Nevertheless, we are now presented with ideas like sequestration or carbon credits that serve only to enrich the alarmists and impoverish our people. This is only possible with a public that has been frightened into accepting totally false information about CO₂. Let me state that I do support efforts that reduce pollution, particulates that do have a negative impact on the environment and human health. I support technologies that reduce these materials. If we are to save the environment for the people of the planet, that is what we should be focusing on.

Mr. Speaker, this old world has had many cycles of warming and cooling, influenced by solar activity, volcanoes, even forest fires and many other natural factors. The ice caps on Mars and Jupiter go back and forth, just as glaciers have gone back and forth. But such a powerful and mysterious force as the weather can be frightening. We need not fear the thunder, and we need not fear climate cycles.

We need not be frightened, hoodwinked into giving away our own freedom. Not to our own government, much less the U.N. or a global power—the power to control our lives in the name of man-made global warming, or climate change, or whatever they want to call it. We cannot allow the alarmists to take this country down the wrong path. Let us pass on to the children of this country and the planet, let us give them the freedom and prosperity we enjoyed. We must not allow our future to be stolen by hucksters who would frighten us into giving up our birthright in the name of saving the planet. It sounds good and noble, as most scams do, but it is just a trick, a hoax. Let's not get taken in by the greatest hoax of all.

Mr. POE of Texas. I want to thank the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRBACHER) for his insightful evaluation of the entire global warming concept, and I appreciate the research that he has done.

It is important that we have a debate on this issue because our entire energy policy under this administration is based upon the myth that there is global warming. It has been pointed out that the Earth goes through cycles of different climate changes—it gets cooler, it gets warmer—and whether man is at fault or not, I think not.

I would like to enter into the RECORD the Newsweek article I referred to earlier from April 28, 1975, the article that says we are all going to freeze in the dark.

[From Newsweek, Apr. 28, 1975]

There are ominous signs that the Earth's weather patterns have begun to change dramatically and that these changes may bring a drastic decline in food production—with serious political implications for just about every nation on Earth. The drop in food output could begin quite soon, perhaps only 10 years from now. The regions destined to feel its impact are the great wheat-producing lands of Canada and Russia in the North, along with a number of marginally self-sufficient tropical areas—parts of India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Indochina and Indonesia—where the growing season is dependent upon the rains brought by the monsoon.

The evidence in support of these predictions has now begun to accumulate so massively that meteorologists are hard-pressed to keep up with it. In England, farmers have seen their growing season decline by about two weeks since 1950, with a resultant overall loss in grain production estimated at up to 100,000 tons annually. During the same time, the average temperature around the equator has risen by a fraction of a degree—a fraction that in some areas can mean drought and desolation. Last April, in the most devastating outbreak of tornadoes ever recorded, 148 twisters killed more than 300 people and caused half a billion dollars' worth of damage in 13 U.S. states.

To scientists, these seemingly disparate incidents represent the advance signs of fundamental changes in the world's weather. The central fact is that after three quarters of a century of extraordinarily mild conditions, the earth's climate seems to be cooling down. Meteorologists disagree about the cause and extent of the cooling trend, as well as over its specific impact on local weather conditions. But they are almost unanimous in the view that the trend will reduce agricultural productivity for the rest of the century. If the climatic change is as profound as some of the pessimists fear, the resulting famines could be catastrophic. "A major climatic change would force economic and social adjustments on a worldwide scale," warns a recent report by the National Academy of Sciences, "because the global patterns of food production and population that have evolved are implicitly dependent on the climate of the present century."

A survey completed last year by Dr. Murray Mitchell of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration reveals a drop of half a degree in average ground temperatures in the Northern Hemisphere between 1945 and 1968. According to George Kukla of Columbia University, satellite photos indicated a sudden, large increase in Northern Hemisphere snow cover in the winter of 1971-72. And a study released last month by two NOAA scientists notes that the amount of sunshine reaching the ground in the continental U.S. diminished by 1.3% between 1964 and 1972.

To the layman, the relatively small changes in temperature and sunshine can be highly misleading. Reid Bryson of the University of Wisconsin points out that the Earth's average temperature during the great Ice Ages was only about seven degrees lower than during its warmest eras—and that the present decline has taken the planet about a sixth of the way toward the Ice Age average. Others regard the cooling as a reversion to the "little ice age" conditions that brought bitter winters to much of Europe and northern America between 1600 and 1900—years when the Thames used to freeze so solidly that Londoners roasted oxen on the ice and when iceboats sailed the Hudson River almost as far south as New York City.

Just what causes the onset of major and minor ice ages remains a mystery. "Our knowledge of the mechanisms of climatic change is at least as fragmentary as our data," concedes the National Academy of Sciences report. "Not only are the basic scientific questions largely unanswered, but in many cases we do not yet know enough to pose the key questions."

Meteorologists think that they can forecast the short-term results of the return to the norm of the last century. They begin by noting the slight drop in overall temperature that produces large numbers of pressure centers in the upper atmosphere. These break up the smooth flow of westerly winds over temperate areas. The stagnant air produced in this way causes an increase in extremes of local weather such as droughts, floods, extended dry spells, long freezes, delayed monsoons and even local temperature increases—all of which have a direct impact on food supplies.

"The world's food-producing system," warns Dr. James D. McQuigg of NOAA's Center for Climatic and Environmental Assessment, "is much more sensitive to the weather variable than it was even five years ago." Furthermore, the growth of world population and creation of new national boundaries make it impossible for starving peoples to migrate from their devastated fields, as they did during past famines.

Climatologists are pessimistic that political leaders will take any positive action to compensate for the climatic change, or even to allay its effects. They concede that some of the more spectacular solutions proposed, such as melting the Arctic ice cap by covering it with black soot or diverting arctic rivers, might create problems far greater than those they solve. But the scientists see few signs that government leaders anywhere are even prepared to take the simple measures of stockpiling food or of introducing the variables of climatic uncertainty into economic projections of future food supplies. The longer the planners delay, the more difficult will they find it to cope with climatic change once the results become grim reality.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

MICHAEL D. O'CONNOR

HON. SAM GRAVES

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mr. GRAVES. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor Michael D. O'Connor, a heroic veteran from Blue Springs, Missouri. Michael has an incredible history of service and honor to his country, and it is my pleasure to highlight just a few of his stories.

Michael was born in Oconto, Wisconsin on June 6, 1918. He is a veteran of World War II who was in the 1st Marine Division and served at the Battle of Midway in 1943. He also served in the Battles of Peleliu and Cape Gloucester, serving a total of four Southwest Pacific campaigns, as well as six months of service in Australia. Michael has witnessed many historical moments in his life, including when he was stationed in Honolulu when Martial Law was declared following the attack on Pearl Harbor in 1941. He even served as an MP at President Franklin Roosevelt's funeral.

Michael has received three purple hearts for his sacrifice to his country. Aside from this, he lives quietly in Blue Springs and rarely receives recognition for his service, like so many other veterans across the nation. It is an honor to have someone like Mr. O'Connor in the Sixth Congressional District, who like so many others has dedicated his life to defending our freedom. His courage and dedication should serve as an example to the rest of us on how we can better serve each other and our great nation.

Madam Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join with me in commending Michael D. O'Connor for his dedication to his country. I know Michael's family and friends join with me in congratulating him on his graduation and wishing him best of luck on all of his future endeavors.

IN RECOGNITION OF SOKKA GAKKAI INTERNATIONAL ON THE OCCASION OF ITS FOUNDING COMMEMORATIVE GATHERING IN NEW YORK CITY

HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mrs. MALONEY. Madam Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to the Sokka Gakkai International, whose founding commemorative gathering is being celebrated at its Manhattan Cultural Center this month. Sokka Gakkai International, or SGI, is a worldwide Buddhist organization with 12 million members. SGI is dedicated to the universal principles of peace, culture, and education and thus encourages its members to assert responsibility for their lives to contribute to the building of a world in which people of different faiths and backgrounds can live together in peace and harmony.

Sokka Gakkai International, whose name can be translated as the "Value Creation Society," has expanded its reach around the world since its founding 34 years ago on the island of Guam. Under the influence of its founding and current President, Dr. Daisaku Ikeda, the Buddhist philosopher, educator, writer and poet, SGI has grown to span 192 countries across the globe, and counts 12 million adherents worldwide. More than 10,000 members live in New York City.

On January 26, 2009, more than 500 representatives gathered at SGI's New York Cultural Center, which is located in New York State's 14th Congressional District that I am privileged to represent. They convened in order to celebrate world peace, culture, and the value of education. Through its dedication to tolerance for all citizens of the world, respect for human rights, and the pursuit of peace through strict adherence to the principle of non-violence, Sokka Gakkai International has provided worshipers of the Buddhist faith with an organizational vehicle with transformative potential and a creed of harmony and understanding.

Madam Speaker, I am deeply honored to represent the Sokka Gakkai International's New York Cultural Center. I ask that my distinguished colleagues join me in recognizing the tremendous contributions to our educational and civic life made by the Sokka Gakkai International, its visionary President Dr. Daisaku Ikeda, and its dedicated members.

HONORING SISTER PATRICE COOLICK, C.S.J.

HON. DALE E. KILDEE

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mr. KILDEE. Madam Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Sister Patrice Coolick, Sisters of St. Joseph Carondelet, as she celebrates the Golden Jubilee of taking her vows. Her family and friends will celebrate this anniversary with her on March 21st.

Since taking her vows on March 19, 1959, Sister Patrice moved from Flushing, Michigan to Missouri and attended Fontbonne University. She received her Bachelor Degree in Nursing from the College of St. Catherine in 1967 and one year later began working in Lima, Peru at the Military Hospital. She came back to the United States and completed a physician's assistant program at Saint Louis University. Upon receiving her degree she returned to Peru. In 1983 she became part of a medical team working in refugee camps in Thailand and Sudan.

Sister Patrice returned to the United States and earned a Master's Degree in Marriage and Family Counseling from the Santa Clara University-California. She joined the O'Connor Hospital staff working in the oncology department and she became a member of the staff at Santa Clara Catholic Charities.

Madam Speaker, I ask the House of Representatives to rise with me and applaud the life of Sister Patrice Coolick. Throughout her life she has worked to bring physical and spiritual healing to the destitute, the displaced and the discouraged. She has taken her God-given gifts of nursing and empathy and given back to the disheartened of our world. Above all Sister Patrice demonstrates in small everyday acts of love, her commitment to following the words of Our Lord, Jesus Christ, contained in Matthew 25:40, "Whatsoever you do to the least of my people, that you do unto me." May God continue to bless Sister Patrice and inspire her in her work.

IN RECOGNITION OF THE 1ST BATTALION, 69TH INFANTRY OF THE NEW YORK NATIONAL GUARD

HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mrs. MALONEY. Madam Speaker, I rise to recognize the soldiers of the 1st Battalion, 69th Infantry Regiment of the New York National Guard who are being honored on St. Patrick's Day in New York City. I know that my distinguished colleagues will join me in extending our appreciation and gratitude to all of the brave members of the armed forces serving in the National Guard and the Reserve, who are so courageously and selflessly dedicated to their fellow Americans.

The National Guard is an integral part of a great American military tradition that began during the American Revolution. At that time, our Founding Fathers placed the country's security in the hands of citizen-soldiers who trained and organized into militias in their home colonies. To this day, members of the National Guard must be ready to serve their state and their country, often at a moment's notice.

Headquartered in the historic Armory on Lexington Avenue—one of a dwindling number of armories remaining in our nation's greatest city—the members of the 1st Battalion, 69th Infantry continue to uphold a distinguished tradition in both battle and disaster response. As part of the famous Irish Brigade during the Civil War, the members of the 69th Infantry were renowned for their tenacity on the battlefield, leading Confederate General Robert E. Lee to bestow upon them the nickname of "The Fighting 69th." In acknowledgment of its proud heritage, the Fighting 69th participates each year in New York's world-renowned St. Patrick's Day Parade.

● This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a Member of the Senate on the floor.

Matter set in this typeface indicates words inserted or appended, rather than spoken, by a Member of the House on the floor.

The Fighting 69th are infantry soldiers—the “boots on the ground”—whose mission is to engage and destroy enemy forces in close combat. In addition to the Civil War, its members have also fought in the Spanish-American War, World War I and World War II, when its soldiers served valiantly in the battles of Makin, Saipan and Okinawa. Its members completed a tour of duty in Iraq, returning to the U.S. after serving with distinction. The battalion mobilized more than 300 soldiers to support Task Force Phoenix VII during its deployment to Afghanistan in 2008 and 2009, when four of its members paid the ultimate sacrifice for their country and were killed in action.

During the current conflict in Iraq, 19 members of the Fighting 69th were killed in action, including a member who was one of the New York firefighters who first raised the American flag above Ground Zero, Christian Engledrum. Six members of the 69th Regiment were awarded Purple Hearts in April, 2006 after being wounded by roadside bombs in Iraq. The unit patrolled the infamous road to the Baghdad airport and was stationed primarily in the Sunni Triangle, where many insurgent attacks have taken place.

The members of the Regiment also have mobilized during times of emergency in their home state of New York. The Fighting 69th was the first National Guard unit to arrive on the scene following the devastating terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. In the hours after the attacks, the Battalion assisted medical teams treating the wounded and provided significant assistance to rescue and recovery operations, continuing in this mission for nearly a year. For several months following the attacks, the members of the Fighting 69th guarded the bridges and tunnels that ring New York City.

Madam Speaker, in recognition of its tremendous contributions to civic and public life, I request that my colleagues join me in paying tribute to the Fighting 69th Regiment of the New York State National Guard, whose members are great New Yorkers and great Americans. All patriots should be grateful for the dedication demonstrated every day by the men and women of the Fighting 69th as well as all of the brave individuals serving in National Guard and Reserve units throughout our great country. The Fighting 69th Regiment's service to our country inspires us all.

HONORING TRUMAN ALLEN AND

HON. TIMOTHY V. JOHNSON

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mr. JOHNSON of Illinois. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor Truman Allen and Susan L. Moore for their contributions to the Young Men's Christian Association.

Truman Allen Moore was born to Truman E. and Margaret Allen Moore with three siblings. Truman married the love of his life Susan L. Lacy at the beginning of his post-graduate education on August 19, 1967. They have a daughter and a son, Amanda and Mark. Truman obtained a Bachelor of Science in Business in 1967 and a Master of Science in Education from Eastern Illinois University in 1971.

Truman's first job for the YMCA was an Assistant Physical Director in Danville while in his post-graduate education. From this position, he rose to Program Director in Paris then to Kewanee. Truman was promoted to Executive Director of YMCA Youth and Government at Kewanee in 1974. He then served this position at Knox County from 1978–2001 and Champaign County for two years before becoming President of YMCA Youth and Government.

Lester Y. and Luella C. Lacy had a daughter named Susan L. Moore on October 16, 1944. She grew up with a brother and a sister. Susan graduated from Kansas High School in 1962 as the Valedictorian. She went on to obtain a Bachelor of Arts in Education from DePauw University in Indiana in 1966 and a Master of Science in Education from Eastern Illinois University in 1971.

She began her professional life by becoming a teacher at the grade school level. Susan served Illinois in towns Flossmoor, Danville, and Charleston while pursuing her Master's. HONORING RODOLFO SANTAYANA

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Madam Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to recognize the extraordinary life and work of Rodolfo Santayana, a Cuban refugee turned entrepreneurial pioneer who recently had the intersection of SW 8th St. and SW 122nd Ave. in Miami named in his honor.

Mr. Santayana arrived in the United States after fleeing the despotic Castro regime of his beloved Cuba. He was only seventeen, but managed to help provide for his family by holding two jobs as a paperboy and a gas station attendant.

However, it would not take him long to discover his calling in the family business. His father, Rodolfo Santayana, Sr. sold jewelry door-to-door in Cuba and beseeched Rodolfo Jr. to seek out his old customers in Cuba who also found refuge from the tyranny of Castro in South Florida.

After studying jewelry design at Miami's Lindsey Hopkins Technical Education Center, he took on his father's request, opening his own store on the street that now bears his name.

He was highly regarded in South Florida not only for the beauty of his work but also for his ability to honor the Cuban heritage with his jewelry. He incorporated some of the symbols of his lost, but far from forgotten, Cuba: palm trees, ox pulled carts full of sugar cane and Cuban silver coins.

It is a testament to the greatness of our country that a man driven from his home to America with only a suitcase full of hopes could use his talent and drive to forge a remarkable life for himself. Now, he is remembered as one of Miami's most prominent businessman and jewelry artisans, even after his death.

May he be remembered, not only on his street in Miami, but by the entire nation for his beautiful portrayals of a free Cuba.

IN HONOR OF JIM WINESTOCK

HON. SANFORD D. BISHOP, JR.

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mr. BISHOP of Georgia. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor Jim Winestock, an outstanding Atlanta, GA, citizen who in February retired from a 40-year career with the United Parcel Service (UPS). In his most recent role as the Senior Vice President of U.S. Operations, Mr. Winestock was responsible for all package operations in the United States, including the pick up and delivery of more than 15.8 million packages each day. Mr. Winestock leaves a tremendous legacy of leadership, not only within the UPS organization, but in the business world in general.

A Greenville, SC, native, Mr. Winestock joined UPS in 1969 as a part-time package loader while attending Massey College in Jacksonville, FL. After graduation, he was promoted into management and worked in a broad range of jobs with increasing responsibility across Florida and Georgia. In 1992, he was promoted to vice president and Chief Operating Officer of the Northeast Texas District, then in 1996 he assumed responsibility for the Missouri District. Mr. Winestock was promoted again in 1998 to president of the Midwest Region, then became president of the North Central Region in 2000. In 2004, he was named Senior Vice President of U.S. Operations, the position he would hold for the duration of his UPS career.

Today I honor Mr. Winestock not only for his distinguished career, but also for his service that extends far beyond the meaning of his title. In addition to his responsibilities as Senior Vice President of U.S. Operations, Mr. Winestock served as the coordinator of UPS Corporate Schools, the company's management training program, and participated in the UPS Community Internship Program at the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga. In addition to his numerous career accomplishments, Mr. Winestock sits on the Board of Directors of the National Urban League and also is a trustee of the MARCH Foundation.

I am truly honored to be able to call Mr. Winestock a fellow Georgian. His hard work and dedication are rare traits. I thank him for his years of service and I wish him luck and Godspeed in the next phase of his life.

Esposito led his unit into a hostile compound, hoping to neutralize the threat from within. Working to secure the facility, Sgt. Esposito cleared three rooms, exposing himself to incredible danger by leading from the front of his team. Despite the presence of hostile fire, Michael approached a previously unidentified area, remaining ahead of his men. Sadly, the enemy engaged as he advanced, inflicting a mortal wound on Michael, and a grievous injury on all who knew him.

Sgt. Esposito's team—inspired by his courage and leadership—achieved their objective in the wake of tragedy. Assuming the lead position, as he so often did, Michael displayed the heroism that remains an inspiration to his fellow platoon members. On that day, and always, Michael displayed a willingness to put the welfare of others before his own. Through selfless acts of leadership, he provided an example to which all of us should aspire.

For Michael's bravery, sacrifice, and service, I am deeply thankful. For his enduring commitment to defending our safety and ideals, we are all deeply indebted.

On this, the five-year anniversary of Michael's tragic passing, the words of a brother in arms speak volumes about his character. His platoon leader, 1st Lieutenant James Howell, said of Sgt. Esposito "[he] was one of the most selfless leaders I have ever known . . . The platoon, and especially all of his men, took his loss hard. It is impossible to forget a leader like Michael Esposito."

A soldier, a friend, and a man of immense integrity, Michael will always retain a firm grasp on our memories. Today, our nation remembers the tragic loss of a cherished citizen, fallen hero, beloved brother, and adored son. Dedicated in his commitment to country and lasting in his impact on those blessed to have called him friend, Michael is and will forever be, sorely missed.

Founded in 1996, WIN works on behalf of the Cypriot-American community to pave the way to success for future generations of Hellenic Americans and to promote Cypriot culture. WIN sponsors numerous cultural, health and educational programs, including breast and cervical cancer screenings for uninsured women. Additionally, WIN is committed to ending the decades-long Turkish occupation of Cyprus. —This year, WIN honors the distinguished international entrepreneur Joanna Savvides. Born in Cyprus, Joanna immigrated with her family to America in 1980. She has served as President of the World Trade Center of Greater Philadelphia since its foundation in October 2002. Under her leadership, the non-profit helped 400 small and medium-sized companies expand on the international level, contributing to a surge in the volume of goods exported by businesses in New Jersey and Pennsylvania. She also serves as an adjunct professor at St. Joseph's University in Philadelphia. Renowned for her cross cultural and international business expertise, she is frequently sought after as a lecturer. Joanna serves as the President of the Cyprus Society of Greater Philadelphia and was a founder and director of the Cypriot Dancers of Greater Philadelphia. The Philadelphia Business Journal recognized her with the Women of Distinction Award. She has also been honored with the Global Business Award from the United Nations Association of Greater Philadelphia, the Global Leadership Award from the Consular Corps Association of Philadelphia, the Heritage Preservation Award from the Cyprus Society of Greater Philadelphia, and the Artemis Award from the European American Business Council. More than these many honors, however, Joanna cherishes her husband, George, and her children, Andreas and Renos.

WIN honors Evi Rafti as its Member of the Year for her efforts to further knowledge, understanding, and appreciation of Cypriot culture. Born the youngest of six children in Mosfiloti, Larnaca, she studied at Academia Thileon in Nicosia. Shortly after marrying her husband Christos, they immigrated to New York in 1969. Evi has retained a strong commitment to Cypriot culture as an active member of the vibrant Cypriot-American community in our nation's greatest city. During her years of volunteering, she has helped plan numerous special events such as parades, charity and non-profit fundraisers, and demonstrations. Over the past ten years, she has also served as a dedicated member of the Board of Directors of the Pancyprian Dance Group. The mother of three children, Panayiota, Tatiana, and Stavro, she has instilled in them a love of Cypriot culture by inspiring their participation in the Pancyprian Dance Group and youth groups, and the Eleftheria soccer team.

WIN honors Eleftheria Saittis as Member of the Year for her dedication to the Cypriot community. Born in the village of Agios Theodoros Karpasias (now under Turkish occupation), she graduated with a diploma in fashion design from the Professional School New Horizon in Famagusta. To continue her education, Eleftheria immigrated to New York. Her family joined her after the Turkish invasion of Cyprus in 1974. Eleftheria is a dedicated and generous member of the Cyprian community. She devotes much of her time and energy to serving on the Pancyprian Dance Group's Board of Directors. She also works as a teacher's aide for the New York City Department of Education. She is devoted to her husband, Michalis, and her children, Prodromos, Konstantine and Konstantina. One of her proudest moments occurred when she graduated from the City University of New York with her granddaughter Evangelia in attendance.

Madam Speaker, I request that my esteemed colleagues join me in paying tribute to the Women's Issues Network of the Pancyprian Association of America and its distinguished honorees, Joanna Savvides, Evi Rafti, and Eleftheria Saittis.

HONORING MRS. MARY ELLEN MENDELSON

HON. CAROLYN MCCARTHY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mrs. MCCARTHY of New York. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize and honor my friend and colleague, Mrs. Mary Ellen Mendelsohn, upon her retirement from the Federal Government. Public service is one of the most honorable and important professions an individual can choose. Mrs. Mendelsohn is at the top of her profession, working on campaigns and in government offices for more than 25 years.

Mrs. Mendelsohn earned her degree at Boston University and later went on to become District Director to former US Congressman Robert Mrazek. She later worked as Mr. Mrazek's Deputy Campaign Director during his bid for the United States Senate.

Mrs. Mendelsohn later became the President, MC Communications, a Public Relations and Intergovernmental Affairs Firm, assisting clients like the Town of Huntington, Child Abuse Prevention Services of Long Island, Housing All Americans, and the Columbia University Department of Oral History obtain grants from the public and private sector. All the while, she simultaneously and effectively managed campaigns for Hynes for New York State Attorney General and raised funds for New York State Assemblyman Thomas DiNapoli.

After successfully assisting Brooklyn DA Charles J. Hynes, Mrs. Mendelsohn was appointed the Director, Government and Community Affairs, Office of the District Attorney, Kings County, New York. She remained in this position until deciding to move on to private consulting for such clients as Cancer Cured Kids, John Bryant for Senate, Coalition for Peoples Choice and last but not least a Campaign Consultant for "McCarthy for Congress."

Mary Ellen came to work for me and the US House of Representatives as my District Director and Political Advisor in January 1997. I came to depend on Mary Ellen's breadth of knowledge to brief me and my Washington Staff on issues that directly affect my district. Her reputation has surpassed the confines of the Long Island office. My staff and I enjoyed a wonderful relationship with Mary Ellen, who is a pleasure and a delight to work with.

You only have to meet Mary Ellen once to realize that she is smart, funny and above all else, genuine. She is a daughter, sister, wife, mother, grandmother and friend. She is the best kind of friend. She laughs at your jokes, sings and dances spontaneously, listens to your tales of glee or woe with the same intensity. She helps you feel strong when you feel weak and found when you feel lost. She is the friend everyone should have. We are blessed.

Madam Speaker it is with great admiration, pride and respect that I acknowledge and thank Mary Ellen for her work in public service and friendship.

On Monday, March 16, 2009 I missed Rollcall votes 125, 126, and 127. Had I been present, I would have voted "aye" on rollcall votes 125, 126, and 127.

EARMARK DECLARATION

HON. BRIAN P. BILBRAY

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mr. BILBRAY. Madam Speaker, I submit the following:

Requesting Member: Congressman BRIAN BILBRAY

Bill Number: H.R. 1105, the FY2009 Omnibus Appropriations bill

Account: Department of Transportation, Federal Highway Administration, Interstate Maintenance

Address of Requesting Entity: 505 S. Vulcan Avenue, Encinitas, CA 92034

Description of Request: I secured $285,000 in the FY 2009 Omnibus Appropriations bill for the Encinitas Boulevard/Interstate 5 Interchange Project Study Report, Project Report, and Environmental Review. The City of Encinitas is contracting with an engineering consultant to prepare a Project Study Report, Project Report and Environmental Document for the Encinitas Blvd/I-5 Interchange. The consulting firm (Dokken Engineering) is working with CALTRANS and the City of Encinitas staff to study and develop viable alternatives for four Interstate 5 interchanges, including the Encinitas Boulevard interchange. Unless the City can fund this study, Caltrans will move ahead with an environmental review and design on their "minimum build" alternative for this interchange, which assumes no under crossing widening and some roadway improvements, while maintaining the existing diamond interchange configuration. Encinitas Boulevard must be widened as part of the North Coast Interstate 5 Corridor (widening) Project or the City will suffer significant traffic congestion at this location by 2030 and probably much sooner. If the City is to have any hope of later integrating its alternative, we need to keep pace with the Interstate 5 widening project.

Requesting Member: Congressman BRIAN BILBRAY

Account: Department of Transportation, Federal Highway Administration, Interstate Maintenance

Address of Requesting Entity: 202 C Street, San Diego, CA 92101

Description of Request: I secured $475,000 to fund relocation of fiber optic cable that is obstructing a major interstate highway interchange improvement project to connect I-5 with S.R. 56 in San Diego. The I-5 corridor is the primary link between Southern California—San Diego, Los Angeles, Orange County—and Mexico. The route experiences extensive traffic congestion, with average daily counts at the interchange site of 261,000 vehicles, including 10,000 trucks, projected to reach 430,000 daily vehicles within 20 years. The project is consistent with the authorized purpose of the Department of Transportation Interstate Maintenance account, which includes funding for the addition of new interchanges. Local and State matching funds will provide at least 20% cost share.

EMORY UNIVERSITY

OF GEORGIA

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mr. LEWIS of Georgia. Madam Speaker, people are hurting right now, in Atlanta and across the country. It is in times like this that we need to help our neighbor. Volunteerism in these tough times is critical; that is why I want to highlight the work Emory University, in my district, is doing. Emory University has a strong history of reaching out to the community and engaging in projects to help people in need. Emory students completed nearly 150,000 hours of service in 2008, partnering with more than 200 community partners on projects related to poverty, homelessness, medical services and environmental conservation. The University's dedication to service reflects the desire in many of our students across the nation to get involved in and give back to their communities. America's young people have always been an integral part of the success of our country, and I am especially proud of Emory University's dedication to service.

Each year, the Corporation for National and Community Service recognizes institutions of higher education for exemplary efforts to engage students in service learning, community partnerships, and volunteer service by publishing The President's Higher Education Community Service Honor Roll. At the top of the Honor Roll is a small group of institutions of higher education who are given the Presidential Award for General Community Service. I am proud to announce that Emory has been awarded the 2008 Presidential Award. This is the highest award possible for a college or university with respect to community service and student engagement. I want to recognize and thank Emory University for its commitment to giving back to the community and fostering a sense of service among its students.

Congratulations to Emory University on being honored as a recipient of the 2008 Presidential Award for General Community Service.

HONORING THE SERVICE AND SACRIFICE OF UNITED STATES AIR FORCE STAFF SERGEANT TIMOTHY BOWLES

HON. GABRIELLE GIFFORDS

OF ARIZONA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Ms. GIFFORDS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor United States Air Force Staff Sergeant Timothy Bowles, who was killed in action with three fellow Airmen when his armored vehicle struck a buried IED near Kot, Afghanistan on March 15, 2009. He leaves behind his father, Louis, a Retired Airman, his mother, Lisa, and a sister, Heather.

Born in Anchorage, Alaska, Timothy grew up on Davis-Monthan Air Force Base and lived much of his life in Tucson, where his father was stationed. Timothy graduated from Tucson High School in 2002 and attended Pima Community College before joining the Air Force in 2007. Staff Sergeant Bowles was assigned to the 3rd Logistics Readiness Squadron at Elmendorf Air Force Base back in Alaska, where he was trained to be a fire truck mechanic. But on this day, he volunteered to stand in for a fellow airman who was not feeling well.

Timothy's Provincial Reconstruction Team was headed out to Jalalabad to check on a local schoolhouse when a pressure-plate IED ended his life. He was only twenty-four years old.

Born to and raised among the United States Air Force, Staff Sergeant Bowles knew well the costs of war. He volunteered for the nine-month deployment that took him to Bagram Air Base in November 2008. He volunteered for this dangerous duty. Tying humanitarian support to local security, Timothy and his PRT teammates stood between civilians and insurgents as Afghans seek to rebuild their long-oppressed country.

We remember Sergeant Bowles and offer our deepest condolences and sincerest prayers to his family. My words cannot effectively convey the feeling of great loss nor can they offer adequate consolation. However, it is my hope that in future days, his family may take some comfort in knowing that Timothy's legacy reaches beyond the desolate landscape of Afghanistan and into the hearts of a grateful nation.

This body and this country owe Timothy and his family a debt of gratitude and it is vital that we remember him and his fellow servicemembers who have paid the ultimate price.

Timothy is a hero both to his country and to his wonderful family. We salute his selfless service, sacrifice and bravery. May he not be forgotten and may his mission continue in the work of this body and the hearts of all Americans.

TRIBUTE TO BERNARD CATCHER

HON. ANTHONY D. WEINER

OF NEW YORK

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mr. WEINER. Madam Speaker, I rise today to join the many residents of my district in recognizing the works and accomplishments of Bernard Catcher who will be honored for his service on March 20th as a "Good Friend and Temple Benefactor" at Temple Shalom's Shabbat Across America Dinner. Bernard Catcher is a man known to me for his hard work and dedication to Brooklyn residents and his sound advice and counsel to those seeking political or community insight. Bernard Catcher's service and reach is legendary. He is the Democratic District Leader of the 59th Assembly District, the head of the Thomas Jefferson Democratic Club, advisor to the Thomas Jefferson Young Democrats and has served as a delegate to the Democratic National Convention. His concern for our communities knows no bounds and stretches over many years. He has served as District Manager of Planning Board 18, serves as the Government Liaison to Coney Island Hospital, and is an accountant by trade. He is active in, and has been recognized by, many local civic organizations from Marine Park to Canarsie and has been honored as "Man of the Year" by the Mill Island Civic Association, among others, for his service. Even with all his other activities Bernard Catcher always finds time and energy to dedicate to Jewish causes and take pride in his Jewish roots. He has served as an officer in the local Bnai Brith and serves as a member of the Board of Trustees of Temple Shalom of Flatbush. Always one to shy away from recognition preferring to do his work behind the scenes, I am honored and privileged to have this opportunity to publicly acknowledge the force of nature that is Bernard Catcher and offer my best wishes on his being named "Good Friend and Benefactor" at the Shabbat Across America Dinner at Temple Shalom on March 20th, 2009.

TRIBUTE TO LIEUTENANT GENERAL WILLIAM F. PITTS

HON. KEN CALVERT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mr. CALVERT. Madam Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to a hero from my congressional district, Lieutenant General William F. Pitts. Today, I ask that the House of Representatives honor and remember this incredible man who dedicated his life in service to our country. On Tuesday, December 30, 2008, Lt. Gen. Pitts passed away at the age of 89.

Lt. Gen. Pitts' father was a career military officer, and Lt. Gen. Pitts was born at March Field Hospital, located in Riverside, California, on Thanksgiving Day 1919. When he was 10 years old, Lt. Gen. Pitts took his first airplane ride and vowed to become an Air Force pilot. In 1943, he graduated from West Point and flew 25 World War II missions against Japan in a B-29 Superfortress. In his last mission in the bomber, he was shot down off the coast of Japan but was able to parachute out of the plane and was rescued by a submarine.

After Lt. Gen. Pitts' heroic service during World War II, he was steadily promoted and earned three stars. He served as a NATO commander in Turkey, four tours at the Pentagon and also as a diplomat in Cuba, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, England and Taiwan. In 1972, Lt. Gen. Pitts returned to March Air Force Base as the Commander of the 15th Air Force. His military decorations and awards include the Distinguished Service Medal, Legion of Merit with an oak leaf cluster, Distinguished Flying Cross with one oak leaf cluster, Air Medal with three oak leaf clusters, Air Force Commendation Medal with one oak leaf cluster, the Distinguished Unit Citation Emblem with one oak leaf cluster and the Purple Heart.

In 1975, Lt. Gen. Pitts retired from the Air Force and he and his wife, Doris, made Riverside their permanent home in the 1990s. He was active in the March community during his retirement, helping to keep the base open during the Base Realignment and Closure process. In honor of his efforts, March erected a stone post at the parade grounds on the base. He was also a board member of the March Field Museum.

On December 22, 2008, Lt. Gen. Pitts celebrated his 60th anniversary with his wife Doris. He is survived by his wife; daughters Cowgill, Alisha and Linda; sister Nanetta Atkinson; and four grandchildren.

As we look at the incredibly rich military history of our country we realize that this history is comprised of men like Lt. Gen. Pitts who bravely fought for the ideals of freedom and democracy. Each story is unique and humbling for those of us who, far from the dangers they have faced, live our lives in relative comfort and ease. Lt. Gen. Pitts was a dear friend and above all, he was a patriot. He will be sorely missed but his legacy and service to our great nation will always be remembered.

RESOLUTION REGARDING GIRLS' ACCESS TO EDUCATION IN PAKISTAN

HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mrs. MALONEY. Madam Speaker, I rise today to introduce a resolution expressing the strong concern of the House of Representatives about the actions of the Taliban in Swat, Pakistan to restrict girls' access to education. In the past year, the deliberate destruction of hundreds of schools for girls has forced more than 40,000 young women to forego schooling. This resolution would urge the Government of Pakistan to act swiftly to halt and reverse the Taliban's unconstitutional ban on education for girls. It also encourages the Secretary of State to review and report on Pakistan's progress in protecting the rights of women, as well as on the actions of the United States Government in providing support for this goal.

In the past few weeks there have been negotiations between the Pakistani government and the Taliban in an effort to broker a peace deal. At the heart of the ceasefire agreement is a pledge to impose Islamic law in the area. Government officials have said that this law will be in accordance with Pakistan's constitution, and will restore security and justice in the region. However, the accord makes no mention of the future of girls' education. Women and girls are a great resource for promoting development, prosperity, and peace. The United States must ensure that explicit measures are taken to protect women's rights in Pakistan, in order to uphold internationally recognized human rights while supporting regional peace and stability.

IN COMMEMORATION OF WOMEN'S HISTORY MONTH

HON. AL GREEN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mr. AL GREEN of Texas. Madam Speaker, I wish to commemorate the month of March 2009 as Women's History Month in honor of the female trailblazers and unsung heroes in American history.

H. Res. 211, Supporting the goals and ideals of National Women's History Month, is intended to increase awareness and knowledge of women's involvement in history, as well as recognize and honor the women and organizations in the United States that have fought for and continue to promote the teaching of women's history.

In the United States, Women's History Month has been celebrated during the month of March since 1987. The National Women's History Project petitioned Congress to increase awareness and knowledge of women's contributions to our great society, because women's history was a practically unknown topic in schools and public awareness.

Women from all different backgrounds, races, social classes, and ethnicities have contributed significantly to the greatness of our nation, and have transformed and revolutionized politics, law, business, social service, civil rights, education, music, athletics, science and technology, as well as the military. Women have been leaders in numerous movements throughout history, such as the abolitionist movement, the emancipation movement, the industrial labor movement, the civil rights movement, the peace movement, and the women's movement in the struggle to obtain suffrage and equal rights. The contributions of notable women such as Susan B. Anthony, Clara Barton, Harriet Tubman, Dorothy Height, Coretta Scott King, Sally Ride and numerous others have sparked an unstoppable momentum for women's rights and others. Their dedication, perseverance and courage have generated a wave of opportunities for entire generations of women.

It is essential that all Americans continue to learn about the many ways women have assisted in the progress of our nation, and acknowledge and celebrate the contributions of women throughout history.

Therefore, I urge my colleagues and all Americans to commemorate women for their significant involvement and participation in our nation's history, by recognizing and supporting March as Women's History Month.

TRIBUTE TO ELDER DAVID J. YOUNG

HON. DENNIS MOORE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mr. MOORE of Kansas. Madam Speaker, I am pleased to have this opportunity to pay tribute before the House of Representatives to Elder David J. Young of the Church of God in Christ, who formed the first church of this denomination in the state of Kansas and served as an important, early spiritual leader in our community.

The first Church of God in Christ in the state of Kansas was organized in Kansas City, Kansas, on September 23, 1916, at 409 Oakland by Elder David J. Young, with a charter membership of some twenty members. Less than two years later, in the early summer of 1918, it was destroyed by a fire set by an arsonist. Undaunted by this act of violence, Elder Young pushed forward, holding services under a nearby large shade tree, and later in the homes of charter members and other buildings until a new structure was built.

Later, in 1960, a new church was constructed at 2401 North 9th Street, erected to the glory of the Lord as a "Living Monument for which Holiness Stands", and in honor of Elder Young. On October 9-11, 2008, the D.J. Young Heritage Foundation hosted a revival, paying tribute to Elder Young and other pioneers of the Church of God in Christ. I am pleased to have this opportunity to share my support for this tribute by placing into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a biographical sketch of Elder David J. Young, which was provided by the D.J. Young Heritage Foundation.

DAVID JOHNSON YOUNG

David Johnson Young was born in approximately 1861, in Chester, South Carolina. Raised in the war-ravaged South, young David ascended to unimaginable heights amid a climate of severe racism and oppression of African Americans. Early on, his parents perceived that young David was exceptionally gifted and determined to use their meager means to afford him the education that would prove invaluable for his life and the countless lives he would impact through teaching and ministry.

He initially attended a country school with his siblings but went on to graduate from Brainard Institute and Morehouse College. David then set out to bring hope to his fellowman through education. With illiteracy one of the most devastating problems in the aftermath of slavery, David Johnson Young brought access to a better future for many during his career as an educator. Even later in his life as a preacher, he would come to be recognized for his emphasis on formal education in ministerial service.

Still more remarkable was the life changing message of hope brought by his fiery preaching of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Beginning as a young preacher in the AME Zion Church, Elder Young grew to be a widely known and sought after minister in the South. He was also an editor of the official organ of the AME Zion Church, the Star of Zion. Elder Young met his call to preach with great fervor, evangelizing and serving as pastor in various states including North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Mississippi, Indiana, Illinois, Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee.

In 1897, he was joined with Priscilla Louise Jones in marriage, another stalwart of the faith. Mother Young served as a true helpmate, covering and supporting D. J. with much prayer and fasting. At times she even supported the family with the small wages she earned as a music teacher while he was out working on the evangelistic field. To their union were born Harold, Melvin, Ceolya, Valleda, Russel, William, and Rosette. As with other great leaders of the faith, their ministry began in the home, where Mother Young taught each of their children how to play two instruments. For example, their eldest son, Harold, played the piano and guitar while the second oldest, Melvin, was skilled in the piano and violin. In fact, when they were yet small boys, Elder Young often carried them with him on evangelistic crusades where they would draw crowds in public areas, such as parks, with their Holy Ghost filled praise and testimony services prior to their father's sermon. With their father as their teacher in the faith, they soon acquired the name, "little boy preachers." After D. J. Young's demise, Mother Young and their children would take upon them the mantle once carried by D. J. Young with the various ministries he began during his latter years.

Despite his many successes, David perceived the need to ascend to the "higher life" and grew increasingly troubled until he submitted to God's divine purpose for him to be sanctified. With his background in Methodism he had received teaching on the sanctifying power of the Holy Ghost and God's command for all His children to live holy. However, it was during his pastorate in Chicago, IL, around the turn of the century, that he became associated with a holiness group known as the Burning Bush people and received the divine, life changing experience of sanctification. Sanctification is the work of the Holy Spirit in cleansing the believer from all inbred sin, purifying their heart and filling them with love for God and all people. Having thus been "sanctified and meet for the Master's use," 2 Timothy 2:21, Young set out to share his testimony and declare God's wonderful plan. David better understood that God made a way for men to be justified by faith in Jesus Christ. Yet, He didn't stop there. For God also provided the means for His children to live holy, separated unto Him, and freed from the very power or slavery of sin. In truth, His will is for man to be restored to the glorious image of God (Col. 3:10, Eph. 4:24, 2 Cor. 3:18—note the active role of the believer).

Indeed the message of sanctification, also called perfection or holiness, had already started to sweep the nation, reaching into nearly every mainstream denomination. As a result scores of 'Saints' left their denominations to form new religious bodies. Such was the case with Elder Young who, in approximately 1902, after graduating from the Burning Bush Holiness Bible School, left the AME Zion Church and became a mighty trail-blazer in the Holiness Crusade. He carried this new message far and near, preaching conversion and sanctification.

His path ultimately met with that of Charles Harrison Mason, a former Baptist preacher, who also joined the ranks of ministers who preached sanctification. Their bond grew as D. J. Young joined the group of holiness preachers with which Mason was affiliated. This group of Saints, led by Charles Price Jones, was a leading force in the rapid spread of the Holiness Movement in the South.

In 1907, Mason and Young, along with one of their brethren, J. A. Jeter, started out on a spiritual journey that would impact the world when the Lord led them to the famed Azusa Street Revival, in Los Angeles, California. Led by Bishop William J. Seymour, the small mission was a holiness group who had taken a grand leap of faith in believing God for a Pentecostal outpouring as recorded in Acts 2:4, "And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance." Faithful to His promise, God poured out His Spirit and the once small group grew in number at a miraculous rate. Believers left various states and even foreign lands to take the pilgrimage to Azusa where they were "Baptized with the Holy Ghost," and experienced the only Bible evidence, speaking in unknown tongues. In addition to this gift, the Lord poured out His Spirit, with signs such as miraculous healings. One of the most remarkable features of this wonderful move of God, however, was the presence of unity in the Spirit as believers cast away racism, sexism, classism, and various other sins that find no place in the Body of Christ.

One glorious day during this historic move of God David Johnson Young was also graced with the precious Baptism of the Holy Ghost. Having all received the new gift, the three men journeyed back to Memphis leaving a blazing trail along their way as they preached conversion, sanctification, and the Baptism of the Holy Ghost. However, they were met with severe disapproval. Ultimately, Jones and the official body of believers he led, withdrew the right hand of fellowship from them. Undaunted by this rejection by men and thoroughly convinced of their commission by God, Charles Harrison Mason and David Johnson Young called an assembly that same year, gathering all those who believed as they. At this meeting, the brethren considered who would oversee the new Holy Ghost led Group and Young was one who many considered worthy of this awesome task. According to oral tradition, after three days of fasting and praying, God spoke through that same servant, D. J. Young, who yet spoke in tongues and was given the interpretation: "God has given us Brother Mason to be our leader." This gathering was the first national Holy Convocation of the Church of God in Christ.

After receiving this word from God, the fledgling denomination was planted in Memphis, TN, but quickly spread its roots throughout the country. D. J. Young served as a leading instrument through his apostolic church building. He was known and referred to as one of Mason's ablest assistants during these formative years. With building churches as his passion, Young was appointed the first Overseer, or Prelate, of Arkansas, Texas, and Kansas. In 1910, while engaged in apostolic work for the Kingdom, the Lord blessed D. J. Young with an invention, "The Young Musical Attachment for Automobiles," which was patented first in Canada and later the US. This tool proved invaluable as it complemented his gifting as a musician during his evangelistic travels, allowing him to "produce harmonious chords" as he played music from his very own automobile. He also served as the pioneer publisher of the Church of God in Christ with the founding of the D. J. Young Publishing Company when the Lord burdened him with the call to spread the full gospel in print via "The Whole Truth."

In 1916, elder Young made his way to his final earthly dwelling in Kansas City, Kansas. Here he founded the first Church of God in Christ, Young Memorial Church of God in Christ, in the state, and immediately began working to publish the first Sunday School literature for the still young denomination. He continued this task, supplying many of the early Saints with Spirit filled teaching, until his demise. Before the time of his going from his labor to his reward, in 1927, David Johnson Young, was successful in building the D. J. Young Publishing Company into a much honored source of gospel literature and established more than twenty-five churches in Kansas. His works, however, live on as evidenced by the thousands of souls he led to Christ, the incredible growth of the Church of God in Christ, which he was instrumental in building, and the phenomenal leaders he helped nurture in the Christian Church at large.—Ladrian Brown.

HONORING THE SERVICE AND SACRIFICE OF UNITED STATES ARMY SERGEANT JEFFREY A. REED

HON. GABRIELLE GIFFORDS

OF ARIZONA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Ms. GIFFORDS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor United States Army Sergeant Jeffrey A. Reed, who was killed in action near Taji, Iraq on March 2, 2009.

Sergeant Reed was assigned to the 411th Military Police Company, 89th Military Police Brigade, from Fort Hood, Texas. His mission in Iraq was to mentor Iraqi Police units so that they could effectively maintain the peace as we withdraw our forces in the coming months.

Jeffrey was just 15 days from completing his second tour in Iraq and returning to Tucson, where he and his wife Ashley reside. A Chesterfield, Virginia native, Jeffrey joined the Army shortly after he graduated from high school in 2004, following the example of his older brother, who left college to sign up with the Army after the Sept. 11 attacks.

He was part of a routine patrol just north of Baghdad when a grenade ended his life. Jeffrey was just 23 years old.

We remember Sergeant Jeffrey Reed and offer our deepest condolences and sincerest prayers to his parents and young wife. My words cannot effectively convey the feeling of great loss nor can they offer adequate consolation, but it is my hope that in future days, his family may take some comfort in knowing that Jeffrey's legacy reaches beyond the desolate landscape of Iraq and into the hearts of a grateful nation.

This body and this country owe Jeffrey and his family a debt of gratitude and it is vital that we remember him and his fellow servicemembers who have paid the ultimate price.

Jeffrey is a hero both to his country and to his wonderful family. We salute his selfless service, sacrifice and bravery. May he not be forgotten and may his mission continue in the work of this body and the hearts of all Americans.

INTRODUCTION OF THE TAKE BACK ACT

HON. GWEN MOORE

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Ms. MOORE of Wisconsin. Madam Speaker, my constituents have been rightfully outraged to hear that the very unit at AIG that was at the center of that company's failure is being showered with $165 million in bonuses, with some individual bonuses to executives there being upwards of $1 million. Considering that the taxpayers have made a commitment of significant funds to AIG as part of the federal government's efforts to rescue credit markets, extravagant bonuses to these individuals are simply unconscionable.

This afternoon I am introducing The AIG Key Executives Bonus Accountability and Capture Act (TAKE BACK Act) that will tax 100 percent of the bonuses paid out to AIG executives. The tax, which would apply to bonuses paid by TARP money, is being introduced in an effort to ensure taxpayers' dollars are not utilized to fund enormous bonuses paid to companies that receive TARP funding.

The fact that some on Wall Street have sought to exploit the public tax dollars is not only outrageous but is an egregious violation of the public's trust. If the leadership of companies that receive TARP funds are determined to waste taxpayer dollars on extravagant bonuses then I believe we as taxpayers—who significantly subsidize these same companies—have the right to recoup those funds.

Under the TAKE BACK Act, any entity that received assistance under the Emergency Economic Stabilization Act of 2008 would find its bonuses subject to a tax rate of 100 percent.

There are so many people in my community who have lost their jobs and are facing extremely tough times. For taxpayer dollars to go towards bonuses for individuals who have played a key role in our economic downturn is simply unacceptable.

HONORING THE DAMAS DE
BLANCO (THE LADIES IN WHITE)

HON. MARIO DIAZ-BALART

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mr. MARIO DIAZ-BALART of Florida. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the Damas de Blanco (the Ladies in White) a peaceful pro-democracy group of women in Cuba dedicated to creating awareness of the political realities, human rights violations and lack of basic freedoms on the island.

Today marks the 6th anniversary of the Black Spring in Cuba, in which 75 human rights activists, independent journalists, librarians, economists and pro-democracy leaders were jailed for simply expressing their opposition to the lack of political freedoms on the island. All were unfairly sentenced to an average of 25 years in Castro's gulag and 55 still languish there today.

The Damas de Blanco consists of the wives, mothers, daughters, sisters and nieces of these 75 dissidents. The group came together soon after the crackdown. Each day, these courageous women protest the imprisonment of their loved ones, call for their immediate release and the release of all political prisoners in Cuba, and seek to draw international attention to the lack of basic freedoms on the island. They wear white to symbolize innocence and purity, attend mass each Sunday, and walk through the streets of Cuba in peaceful protest.

The group has been internationally recognized and in 2005 was awarded the Sakharov

Prize for Freedom of Thought, alongside Reporters Without Borders and human rights lawyer Hauwa Ibrahim, by the European Parliament. Members of Damas de Blanco were banned from attending the award ceremony in France by the Cuban regime.

The Damas de Blanco are a voice for the hundreds of political prisoners in Cuba and those who live in the shadows of oppression. With unprecedented courage and bravery, they take to the streets each day and risk their own lives in order to draw attention to the harsh realities in Cuba. As we celebrate Women's History Month, I ask you to join me in honoring the Damas de Blanco, remembering the 75 jailed dissidents of the Black Spring in Cuba and all of Cuba's political prisoners, and standing in solidarity with the Cuban people.

Cypriot Emigrants Cultural Association. Under her leadership, it mounted live performances relating to Cypriot folklore, culture, theater, dance, and music. She is an accomplished journalist, having served on the main production team of ABC News for more than twenty years. After volunteering her time as a host of radio programs pertaining to Cyprus and Greece for five years, she founded AKTINA Productions, a non-profit cultural and educational organization dedicated to the promotion and preservation of the Hellenic cultural heritage through radio, television, live performances, and other media. It sponsors AKTINA FM, a bilingual radio show, and AKTINA TV, an English language show, which reach audiences of hundreds of thousands. Both programs focus on Hellenes' rich cultural heritage as well as news and current events in Cyprus, Greece, and America. In 2002, Ms. Maroulleti was awarded the "Women of Achievement Pace Setter Award" by the New York City Council Speaker Peter F. Vallone, Sr. She is the founder and President of the Ethnic Broadcasters Action Committee, which represents all ethnic broadcaster-produced programs on WNYE, New York City's publicly owned television station. She is happily married to Tom Stouras and devoted to Caroline Ioannou, her daughter from a previous marriage.

The Member of the Year Award will be given to Mr. Nicos Paphitis, who was born in Morfou, Cyprus. While serving as an officer in the Cyprian military police, he played professional soccer with the team Keravnos Strovolou. He came to the U.S. in 1983, earned a Bachelor of Science degree in accounting from the City University of New York, and returned to Cyprus to work for Laiki Bank until 1998, when he was returned to New York to become the Bank's chief representative. Currently a Business Development Manager with Piraeus Bank and a 2nd Vice-President of the Cyprus Federation, he is devoted to the Hellenic American community and institutions like Saint Demetrios School and the American Hellenic Educational Progressive Association, as well as his wife, Evie, and his children, Andreas and Marilena.

Madam Speaker, I ask that my distinguished colleagues rise to join me in paying tribute to the PanPaphian Association of America and its 2009 honorees.

CELEBRATING PROCTER & GAMBLE
MANUFACTURING COM-PANY'S 40TH BIRTHDAY IN CEN-TRAL LOUISIANA

HON. RODNEY ALEXANDER

OF LOUISIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mr. ALEXANDER. Madam Speaker, I am proud to honor the Procter & Gamble Manufacturing Company in Pineville as it celebrates its 40th birthday in Central Louisiana.

In July 1969, Procter & Gamble Manufacturing Co. first began operations in the area on a 112 acre site about seven miles north of Alexandria/Pineville. Originally built to supply synthetic dry powder detergents, the Procter &

Gamble Alexandria plant was just one of 12 plants in operation in the United States at the time.

Through the years, the Procter & Gamble Manufacturing Co. has consolidated their business down to two dry laundry sites, and is now shipping to more than half of the U.S. from the Louisiana location.

In 2005, the company announced the expansion of this particular plant site to manufacture both dry and liquid detergents, essentially doubling the size of the facility. This dynamic growth required an investment of over $220 million and added more than 185 permanent employees.

Today the plant retains approximately 400 direct contract employees, in addition to an average of 1,200 indirect staff. The company credits these individuals as its greatest asset.

The Procter & Gamble Manufacturing Co. has an impressive track record of success in Central Louisiana. I am confident the remarkable progression of this plant will continue to provide great opportunities for the residents of this area.

It is with deep appreciation for this plant's many contributions to the 5th Congressional District that I commend the Procter & Gamble Manufacturing Co.

I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring the 40th birthday of the Procter & Gamble Manufacturing Co. in Pineville as it continues its faithful commitment to building not only a stronger Louisiana, but a stronger national economy.

The demonstration project involves the purchase of application software, installation and training as well as the purchase of handheld devices for the physician and other clinician users of the system. The project is a critical element of the overall Information Services plan for BayCare Health System. This particular patient care clinical information system will significantly assist in accomplishing improvements in the following areas: (1) Real time communication between physicians, hospitals and pharmacies regarding medication orders which will result in the improvements of prescription legibility, dispensing time and a reduction in drug errors; (2) A decrease in adverse events by improved electronic communication and the use of standard formularies; (3) An increase in the efficiency of operations by reducing the costs of consolidating redundant functions and reducing duplicate orders or inappropriate testing; (4) Knowledge at the point of care will improve the patient care experience. Previous funding for BayCare's electronic health record initiative is as follows: FY 2002-$1,000,000, FY 2003-$1,000,000, FY 2004-$1,000,000, FY 2005-$1,000,000, FY 2008-$341,000.

Bayfront Baby Place will feature a dedicated entrance for birthing mothers and their families, as well as a skywalk connecting Baby Place with Bayfront's main hospital building. Bayfront delivers more than 3,400 babies annually. Some of those babies need special care after they are born. Currently, they are taken from the hospital's joint team of specialists, through a tunnel that connects the two hospital campuses, to specialized neonatal care at All Children's Hospital. Moving the birthing team and unit on the All Children's campus will put the patient at the middle of this process, enabling families to stay together throughout their time in the hospital. These are the first federal funds provided for this project. Bayfront Hospital will contribute $8,000,000 toward the cost of this project.

The island and the fortifications on that island have played an important role in the history of Tampa Bay. Tidal action from Tampa Bay waters is threatening the historic fort and gun emplacements located on the western shore. The purpose of the feasibility study is to determine a long-term strategy for protecting the beach and restoring the shoreline. Previous funding in the amount of $916,900 has been provided for this project through FY 2008.

INTRACOASTAL WATERWAY OPERATION AND
RIVER TO ANCLOTE RIVER

Myers, and the Anclote River, north of Tampa. The channel runs through six counties (Pinellas, Hillsborough, Manatee, Sarasota, Charlotte, and Lee) and links natural deep-water sections of bays through a series of man-made channels, thereby providing for the safe passage of commercial goods and access to commercial fishing grounds. Dredging of the Intracoastal Waterway commenced in 1960 and was completed in 1967, at which time the West Coast Inland Navigation District began maintenance activities. This funding will support maintenance dredging for Longboat Pass (Manatee County), Venice Inlet (Sarasota County), mouth of Caloosahatchee River (Miserable Mile in Lee County), the Boca Grande Bayou area (Miller's Marina in Lee County), and a section of the Intracoastal Waterway in Pinellas County just north of the Tampa Bay port shipping channel. Previous funding totaling $1,400,000 was included in FY 2004 and FY 2005 for the design, engineering, and permitting for this project and $1,215,000 was included in FY 2008 for the initial dredging of this waterway.

NATIONAL CLEARING HOUSE FOR SCIENCE, TECHNOLOGY, AND THE LAW AT STETSON UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF LAW

Account: Department of Justice, Office of Justice Programs, Byrne Discretionary Grants.

Legal name and address of requesting entity: Stetson University College of Law, 1401 61st Street South, Gulfport, FL 33707.

Description of request: $400,000 is included in the bill for the National Clearing House for Science, Technology, and the Law at Stetson University College of Law to build and maintain the world's only searchable comprehensive bibliography on law, science, and technology. This database contains court decisions and commentary, scholarly publications, commercial applications, professional associations and institutions, and other resources about traditional and new forensic topics, such as Identity Theft, Intra and Interstate Tracking of Sexual Predators, Canine Sniff Detection, and Less Lethal Technologies. It contains 18 resource categories for each of 33 topics in science and technology. At present, it contains more than 65,000 records, and more than 1,500 entries a month are added. Visitors from more than 110 countries have visited the site. In addition, comprehensive Cold Case and Identifying the Missing resources have recently been added to the site. No other such national resource exists. The online database also includes a quarterly newsletter which focuses on the latest topics such as Methamphetamine, Shaken Baby Syndrome, Cyber Forensics, Post-Conviction DNA Testing, Bioterror and the Physician, and Virtual Autopsies. Funding will also enable Stetson to continue building an important reference collection of law, science, and technology material to meet the needs of law enforcement personnel, legal professionals, crime lab personnel, national security professionals, medical examiners, and public health professionals. These professions face challenges due to a lack of access to information regarding new areas of science and technology. The Clearinghouse reference collection allows access via interlibrary loan to physical materials not readily available at local libraries. Important forensic science collections are being donated to the clearinghouse on a regular basis for use by these professionals. Stetson will use this funding for two new initiatives. The first is the development of training modules and primers to be made available through distance education technology. These cross-disciplinary modules will focus on training scientists in the complex workings of the legal system. They also provide lawyers with much needed education in various scientific and technological disciplines. Law 101 will focus on testimony skills for expert witnesses, scientists and law enforcement personnel. The primers, written by lawyers, scientists, and educators, will cover the basic elements of a science or technology and principles of law. They will provide practical advice regarding motions in limine, locating and qualifying an expert, direct and cross-examination of the expert, and legal issues that arise in such cases. The second initiative will be to support the federal DNA initiative. The goal of this project is to provide training about the applications and limitations of DNA evidence to defense counsel handling cases involving biological evidence, as stated in the President's DNA Initiative. To achieve this goal, the Clearinghouse is working closely with the National Institute of Justice (NIJ) and an expert Advisory Group to develop training that will provide defense attorneys with the general knowledge of the uses of DNA evidence in judicial proceedings as it pertains to discovery and ethics, proper closing arguments, case assessment, etc. The training will complement other forensic DNA evidence resources developed by NIJ, such as the "Officers of the Court" CD-ROM, which provides a foundational understanding of the science, technology, statistics, and other non-advocacy topics. Training will occur across the country and will incorporate "Train the Trainer" sessions to further broaden outreach efforts. Previous funding has been provided to Stetson for the National Clearinghouse in the following amounts: FY 2003-$1,768,430, FY 2004-$2,968,432, FY 2005-$2,959,930, FY 06-$1,682,119.

TAMPA PORT PLANNING, ENGINEERING AND DESIGN FOR FUTURE REQUIREMENTS

Account: Army Corps of Engineers, Construction.

Legal name and address of requesting entity: Tampa Port Authority, P.O. Box 2192, Tampa, FL 33601.

Description of request: $478,000 is included in the bill for the continued planning, engineering, and design for a project to widen and deepen the Tampa shipping channel to allow for the safer passage of shipping traffic and to accommodate larger ships requiring a deeper draft. The Army Corps of Engineers completed a draft General Reevaluation Report (GRR) in 2008 which focuses on traffic congestion in the main Tampa Harbor channel where extensive delays occur due to lack of adequate channel width. The 40 mile main federal channel handles traffic in and out of the entire Tampa Bay federal port system for the Ports of Tampa, Manatee and St. Petersburg. The ship channel is too narrow to allow for safe two way vessel traffic due to the introduction of new longer and broader cruise ships. The impacts associated with having a restriction of this nature include vessels waiting at berth or at the sea buoy while large cruise ships transit the channel. The GRR concurs with the Tampa Port Authority and the port community that the resulting congestion causes safety hazards and economic inefficiencies and recommends widening select portions of the main channel. The GRR finds that vessel operation costs would be reduced, resulting in transportation cost savings, increased harbor safety and reduced cargo delivery delays. In addition, the continued reevaluation of the needs in the Tampa Harbor is necessary, to include deepening, in order to facilitate anticipated growth in trade as the Port of Tampa continues its steady growth and diversification. As Florida's largest cargo port, the Port of Tampa handles approximately 50 million tons of cargo per year. The Port of Tampa is also the largest economic engine in West Central Florida and the nation's 14th largest port in terms of short tons. The Port of Tampa generates an annual economic impact of almost $8 billion on the region which includes the contribution of over $570 million annually in state and local taxes. This project is authorized by three separate federal statutes: The Energy and Water Development Appropriations Act, 2004 (P.L. 108-137); The Energy and Water Development Appropriations Act, 2005 (P.L. 108-447); and the Water Resources Development Act of 2007 (P.L. 110-114). Previous funding for this project has been provided as follows: FY 2008-$133,000, FY 2004-$2,500,000, FY 2003-$200,000, FY 2002-$500,000, FY 2001-$300,000.

With these funds, the city will purchase an emergency generator and pump motor controls. The city will also reline water pipes and repair manholes. Failure to complete these necessary wastewater infrastructure upgrades in a timely manner will expose the Gulf of Mexico and Boca Ciega Bay waters to undesirable pollutants and threaten the economic viability of this resort area. Previous appropriations for this project total $1,250,000.

TROPICAL AND SUBTROPICAL AGRICULTURE RESEARCH (T-STAR)

Account: Department of Agriculture, Cooperative State Research, Education, and Extension Service, Research and Education Activities.

Legal name and address of requesting entity: The University of Florida, 226 Tigert Hall, Gainesville, FL 32611.

Description of request: $6,677,000 is included in the bill for Tropical and Sub-Tropical Agriculture Research (T-STAR) at the Universities of Florida and Hawaii to address the problem of exotic pests and other tropical and subtropical problems in America's Caribbean and Pacific Basins. The major goal of the T-STAR program is to develop strategies and tactics to stem the invasion of exotic diseases, insects, and weeds into the United States. The recent introduction of asian soybean rust into the United States, along with the increasing threat of avian influenza and foot-and-mouth disease entering the country, heightens the possibility of a terrorist-induced attack on the nation's food supply. There is an urgent need to identify exotic pests in other countries with which the United States maintains frequent and extensive trade and travel in order to: (1) determine potential avenues for the introduction of these pests into the United States, (2) develop technologies for the early detection of these pests, (3) find effective and environmentally acceptable methods for the eradication and containment of these pests if they enter the United States. Under the T-STAR program, scientists aggressively protect the nation against the growing environmental and economic threat of invasive exotic pests. The Universities of Florida and Hawaii represent important agricultural states which are prime locations for the introduction of exotic pests from other parts of the world. Previous funding has been provided by the Department of Agriculture for T-STAR in the following amounts: FY 2001-$3,800,000, FY 2002-$3,800,000, FY 2003-$9,000,000, FY 2004-$9,000,000, FY 2005-$9,400,000, FY 2006-$9,500,000, FY 2008-$7,400,000.

Once complete, there will be 11.2 miles of controlled access, with no traffic signals, between 118th Avenue in mid-Pinellas County north to State Road 580 in north Pinellas County. U.S. 19 is a Regional Emergency Evacuation Route used by an average of 90,000 vehicles per day. Previous federal funding, provided in FY 2001 in the amount of $4,000,000, was used for preliminary engineering and grade separated design. The Florida Department of Transportation will provide $17 million toward the completion of this project.

WORKNET PINELLAS EMPLOYED WORKER RETRAINING PROGRAM

Account: Department of Labor, Employment and Training Administration, Training & Employment Services.

Legal name and address of requesting entity: WorkNet Pinellas, 13805 58th Street North, Suite 2140, Clearwater, FL 33760.

WorkNet will solicit technological training shortfalls from Pinellas County manufacturers. Through consultation with the employers and the local Economic Development Council, WorkNet will certify the validity of the training needs and prepare a training plan based on the employers' technology usage. Through its training partners, Pinellas Technical Education Centers and St. Petersburg College, WorkNet will identify the training resources available and submit the plan to the employer for approval and agreement. The employer will be expected to contribute at least half of the cost of the training program and consent to meeting the training goals within a specified timeline. This project will be based firmly on the skill needs of the employer and will result in a more highly skilled workforce whose members can continue to progress in their careers. Another clear objective of this program will be to allow the employers to remain competitive in the global economic market without having to relocate or farm-out any of their production. The goal of the program is to training 1,200 workers from at least 15 employers. This is the first federal funding provided for this project.

IN CELEBRATION OF THE RETIREMENT OF REVEREND ISAAC SINGLETON

HON. DEBORAH L. HALVORSON

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mrs. HALVORSON. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize Reverend Isaac Singleton's retirement after 47 years with the Mount Zion Baptist Church in Joliet, Illinois. Reverend Singleton earned his recognition as a south suburban icon many years ago. After working on a plantation in Louisiana with his father, he joined the Army Air Force during World War II. He later settled in Joliet, where he has enjoyed a 60 year marriage with his wife Pearl. He is known locally as a symbol of the civil rights movement for marching alongside the great Martin Luther King, Jr. in Montgomery, Alabama and is featured in both "Who's Who Among Black Americans" and the Joliet Will County Hall of Pride.

As pastor at Mount Zion Baptist Church, Reverend Singleton saw the congregation grow from an intimate 100 members to the ever faithful, flourishing parish of 2,000 members it is currently. Reverend Singleton's influence is seen all over Joliet, from the 28,000 square foot presence of Mount Zion Baptist church to the street named after him to the Family Life Center he founded. He is respected internationally as well, having preached in five different continents and having built churches in Africa.

Reverend Singleton retires this month after a fulfilling, impressive, and inspirational career. He is truly an asset to Joliet as well as the global faith community. It is with great pride that I celebrate the career of Reverend Isaac Singleton. May his retirement be fruitful and joyous.

HONORING THE LIFE AND CAREER OF BILL POST

HON. ED PASTOR

OF ARIZONA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mr. PASTOR of Arizona. Madam Speaker, I would like to take a few minutes to praise and reflect upon the career of an outstanding CEO and an even better friend, Bill Post. I first met Bill in the early 1970s when he was financial officer for the Arizona Public Service, also referred to as APS, and I was a Maricopa County Supervisor. He impressed me as a smart, young executive.

Bill Post is the Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Arizona Public Service—my home state's largest electric company. Bill recently announced his retirement from APS and its parent company, Pinnacle West Capital Corporation, after 37 distinguished years with the companies.

Starting his career as a Draftsman after finishing college at Arizona State University, Bill quickly climbed the ranks at APS. He became an officer in 1982, then ascended to President and CEO of APS and President of Pinnacle West in 1997. He earned the title of Chairman of the Board for both companies in 2001.

Of course what he accomplished and the relationships he built were always far more important to Bill than any title. He guided APS through a period of incredible growth for our state. In the last decade alone, APS added more than 300,000 customers, yet the company has been a model of efficiency. Despite its rapid growth, APS continued to meet Arizona's expanding energy needs while also improving customer satisfaction, setting new standards of electric reliability and keeping employee numbers essentially flat.

Revered for his business acumen, Bill is also ubiquitous in the community—continually lending his guidance, energy and financial resources to non-profit organizations such as Greater Phoenix Leadership, Valley of the Sun United Way, the Arizona Business Coalition, and the Children's Action Alliance. His dedication to our community and state led me to often refer to Bill as the "Big Dog in Town." Bill's own generosity has always set the tone for his company—APS and its employees are known across Arizona as leaders in the communities they serve.

Bill Post embodies the character and uniqueness of my home state. A lifelong Arizonan, Bill is as at home driving his Jeep through dusty desert trails as he is guiding strategy in a corporate boardroom. In his retirement from APS, I know he will probably be providing leadership to the people of Arizona.

COMMEMORATING BRAIN AWARENESS WEEK

HON. JOE SESTAK

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mr. SESTAK. Madam Speaker, today I rise to commemorate Brain Awareness Week (BAW) and the benefits of this informative week in educating students on brain science in my congressional district and across the country. Brain Awareness Week, launched in 1996, brings together the Society for Neuroscience, Dana Alliance for Brain Initiatives and 1200 other organizations worldwide who share a common interest in improving public awareness of brain and nervous system research. During Brain Awareness Week, neuroscientists around the globe educate K-12 students, senior citizens and the public at large on the wonders of the human brain. These activities include tours of neuroscience laboratories, museum exhibitions and classroom discussions on the elements of the human brain.

This year, the Philadelphia area members of the Society for Neuroscience will host their annual Brain Awareness event at the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia on March 19-20. Many of my constituents will be exposed to the exciting world of neuroscience, hopefully become inspired to become the next generation of scientists, and learn about the connection between increased support for biomedical research and benefits to public health. Today, in recognition of Brain Awareness Week, I would like to highlight a serious brain condition that affects many of our men and women in uniform returning home from combat in Iraq and Afghanistan: Traumatic Brain Injury (TBI).

Madam Speaker, as a member of the House Armed Services Committee and a former Naval officer, I know firsthand the reality of war and how it affects our soldiers. Many of our brave men and women experience severe trauma from land mines, road side bombs and other powerful explosives, which result in what are now recognized to be the signature wounds of these recent conflicts: TBI, the loss of limbs, and post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD). In part, these wounds can be attributed to advanced body armor that shield soldiers' torsos from bullets, shrapnel, and injury and prevents them from being killed in attacks. Yet their bodies remain relatively exposed to the concussive effect of blasts that can raise atmospheric pressure by 1,000 times, rattling the brain against the skull. Neuroscience research has contributed significantly to the current standard of neurological and mental health care in the field and at military health facilities across the country.

The numbers associated with these signature wounds, including TBI, are staggering and illustrate the need for additional research. During a Pentagon news conference on March 5, 2009, Department of Defense doctors reported as many as 360,000 U.S. Service members have experienced brain injuries, mostly concussions, representing about 20 percent of the 1.8 million soldiers who have served in combat in Iraq and Afghanistan. The head of the Defense Centers of Excellence for Psychological Health and Traumatic Brain Injury noted that while the overwhelming majority heal—and heal without treatment—an estimated 45,000 to 90,000 troops have suffered more severe and lasting symptoms, which overall cost the U.S. Army $242 million last year for staff, facilities and programs to serve troops with brain injuries. Additionally, an unprecedented 36 percent of the veterans treated thus far have been diagnosed with a mental health condition. According to 2003 data analyzed by the Defense and Veterans Brain Injury Center and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, about 60 percent of returning U.S. soldiers who had been exposed to blasts showed signs of brain injury, and face a lifetime of disability at an estimated cost of $60 billion annually.

Madam Speaker, new research is exploring improved methods of treatment of TBI. The Defense and Veterans Brain Injury Center and Department of Veterans Affairs research facilities across the country are testing the antidepressant sertraline as a treatment for symptoms of TBI, including irritability, depression, frustration, and anxiety. Neuroscientists are trying to understand how these explosives disrupt the function of the nervous system in order to develop specific recovery strategies. Activity-based therapy, which takes advantage of the brain's plasticity or ability to review and recover, is proving to be one of the most effective approaches in treating head injuries. Even when certain functions are lost, repeatedly practicing a movement seems to encourage the brain to reestablish the connections that support that function. Research in laboratory animals suggests that activity itself can increase the secretion of some nerve growth factors known to play an important role in the brain plasticity and learning.

I would like to recognize that the enhancement of research for soldiers and others suffering from TBI continues to be a Congressional priority, as evidenced by the passage of the Traumatic Brain Injury Reauthorization Act, which I was proud to cosponsor. This legislation reauthorized many essential programs including the Traumatic Brain Injury Research Program at the National Institutes of Health, which conducts TBI research at laboratories on the NIH campus and also supports it through grants to major medical institutions across the country. The pursuit of cutting-edge brain injury research will remain on the nation's healthcare and neuroscience agendas for decades to come in hopes of developing innovative medical treatments that will enhance the quality of life for our veterans from Iraq and Afghanistan.

Madam Speaker, today I ask my colleagues to join me in recognizing Brain Awareness Week, which exposes our young citizens to the wonders of the brain. I also ask that you join me in continuing to support basic research that provides a foundation for new treatments that have an enormous impact on the lives of our brave men and women returning home from combat with TBI and other brain injuries and disorders.

CELEBRATING MARCH AS RED CROSS MONTH

HON. PETER T. KING

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mr. KING of New York. Madam Speaker, the American Red Cross has been on the front lines of disaster prevention and response for more than a century. This elite humanitarian society is among the most effective and recognized disaster relief organizations in the world. We have an opportunity this month to recognize the essential role the Red Cross plays in our communities. Since President Franklin Delano Roosevelt served in office, every President of the United States has proclaimed March to be "Red Cross Month."

The Red Cross responds to more than 70,000 natural and manmade disasters each year, caring for victims of fires, floods, hurricanes, hazardous materials spills, explosions, and many other kinds of incidents. Volunteers provide food, shelter, and health services to meet the most basic human needs of victims and first responders. The Red Cross also provides critical blood supplies to hospitals, first aid classes to the public, and disaster aid to the international community.

In responding to disasters small or large, the Red Cross has proven its incomparable worth time and again for over 127 years. Just this month in my district in New York, fire destroyed a North Massapequa home, and Nassau County's Red Cross arrived on the scene to offer assistance. Timely response to such daily but devastating small-scale disasters is one of the Red Cross' most important humanitarian services.

Large-scale disasters also demonstrate major successes. Immediately following the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, relief workers rushed to the World Trade Center, to the Pentagon, and to the fields of Shanksville, Pennsylvania. The Red Cross played an invaluable role in assisting over 59,000 individuals and families affected by those horrific acts of terror.

No matter the response, volunteers are the key to Red Cross efforts, representing 96 percent of the organization's workforce. They cannot do what they do without the support of donated manpower, finding, and supplies. The Red Cross, the dedicated individuals who serve in the organization, and the thousands of citizens who fund relief efforts epitomize the humanitarian spirit of the American people.

I join with my colleagues today to recognize the Red Cross, and thank the organization's staff and volunteers for all of their continued assistance to American communities.

THE BULLYING AND GANG REDUCTION FOR IMPROVED EDUCATION ACT

HON. LINDA T. SÁNCHEZ

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Ms. LINDA T. SÁNCHEZ of California. Madam Speaker, today, Mr. EHLERS and I are introducing the Bullying and Gang Reduction for Improved Education Act. It is time that we recognize bullying and gangs as serious problems that impede student achievement.

Bullying, harassment, and gang-related activity have serious consequences for schools and students. Nearly 40% of middle-school and high-school students report that they do not feel safe at school. Children who are bullied miss more school, have lower self-esteem, and are more likely to commit suicide than those who are not.

According to young people themselves, one reason they get involved in gang activity is to seek protection from bullying. We cannot address one without addressing the other.

Contrary to popular belief, bullying is neither a minor nuisance, something to be laughed at or ignored. It is not a rite of passage, but instead interferes with a child's right to attend school and learn. Although any child may be bullied, some children face much greater risks than others. Children who are obese and those whom others perceive to be gay or lesbian are especially at risk.

Violence in our schools caused by gang activity and bullying can cause childhood trauma, depression, anxiety, and post-traumatic stress disorder. These conditions are not conducive to learning. Youth involved in gang activity also have lower expectations about their educational attainment.

The Bullying and Gang Reduction for Improved Education Act would take important steps to address these issues by allowing states and localities to use Safe Schools funds for comprehensive bullying and gang prevention programs.

I urge my colleagues to take a stand. All children, especially societies most vulnerable, deserve their support of the Bullying and Gang Prevention for Improved Education Act.

HONORING MARKET STREET MISSION

HON. RODNEY P. FRELINGHUYSEN

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the Market Street Mission in Morristown, Morris County, New Jersey, a vibrant community I am proud to represent. On March 18, 2009, the good citizens of New Jersey will celebrate the Market Street Mission's 120th Anniversary.

The aim of the Market Street Mission is to assist those who are "homeless, helpless and hopeless" in northern New Jersey, through physical, emotional, and spiritual support that will guide them toward responsible and productive lives. The Market Street Mission is an experienced organization with a proven method of helping to fight alcoholism, drug abuse, and homelessness in the Northern New Jersey Area. We need the Market Street Mission and more places like it.

The Market Street Mission was established in 1889 by the Reverend Dr. F.W. Owen and his wife, Mrs. Louisa Graves Owen, as a residential program for alcoholic husbands in the Morristown area. With support from the South Street Presbyterian Church, the Mission provided meals, lodging, clothing, and temporary employment for homeless men. Over the years, the Market Street Mission has grown in scope and size.

During the Great Depression, the Market Street Mission ended its affiliation with the Presbyterian Church and added the "Industrial Department," a self-supporting thrift store that provided jobs during difficult economic times. Today, residents of the Mission work at the Industrial Department as part of the successful "New Reality of Recovery" program. The Market Street Mission also has an Emergency Assistance program that provides meals and lodging for disadvantaged men, women, and children.

Led by Executive Director G. David Scott, the Market Street Mission continues to offer indispensable support and rehabilitation to those in need.

Madam Speaker, I urge you and my colleagues to join me in congratulating the Market Street Mission, as well as G. David Scott, on the celebration of 120 years serving the people of Northern New Jersey.

TRIBUTE TO COLONEL NICHOLAS GEORGE "NICK" PSAKI, JR.

HON. BILL SHUSTER

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mr. SHUSTER. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the life and report the passing of an American patriot and a neighbor, Colonel Nicholas George "Nick" Psaki, Jr., of Hollidaysburg, Pennsylvania. Colonel Psaki passed away on the afternoon of March 14th at the age of 89.

The passing of Colonel Psaki is yet another reminder for all of us that we are losing a generation of great Americans who served their country in the wars that shaped the world we live in today. The lives and the stories of these Americans, the members of the Greatest Generation, must never be forgotten.

Colonel Psaki was truly a part of that Greatest Generation. He fought with distinction in three wars, seeing combat in World War II, the Korean War and Vietnam. Colonel Psaki made his mark on the golden age of Army aviation and retired from the Army a veteran pilot with over 5,000 hours in flight time spent in fixed and rotary wing aircraft.

Throughout his distinguished military career, Colonel Psaki received numerous medals and commendations for his service to his nation. Among those decorations are the Distinguished Service Medal, the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Purple Heart, the Silver Star, the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star with 1st Oak Leaf Cluster, the Combat Infantry Badge Second Award, the Master Army Aviator Wings, as well as numerous campaign ribbons and service merit badges.

In addition to his combat service, Colonel Psaki was a graduate of the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, as well as the Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, Virginia, and the U.S. Army War College in Carlisle, Pennsylvania. Preceding these military degrees, Colonel Psaki attended Kings College in New York and received a bachelor's degree in history from the University of Southern California. He is survived by his wife Cindy, his son Nicholas, daughters Diane, Denise, Regina, and Alexandra, three grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren.

Colonel Nick Psaki was a patriot, a family man and an active civic member. For all who came in contact with him, Nicholas Psaki will be remembered as a gentleman who exemplified quiet dignity, thoughtfulness and generosity. Colonel Psaki was a class act in and out of uniform and his absence will be noticeably felt by a grateful nation and by all who knew him.

My thoughts and prayers and those of my constituents are with the members of the Psaki family as they grieve over their loss. Colonel Psaki was a great American. He will be missed and he will be remembered.

HONORING THE URBAN LEAGUE OF GREATER RICHMOND,
VIRGINIA, FOR 95 YEARS OF EXEM-PLARY COMMUNITY SERVICE

HON. ROBERT C. "BOBBY" SCOTT

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 18, 2009

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor and pay tribute to the Urban League of Greater Richmond, which has served the communities of Richmond, Chesterfield, Henrico, Petersburg, Colonial Heights and Chester, Virginia for 95 years.

One of the oldest of 102 affiliates of the National Urban League, the Urban League of Greater Richmond has enabled many African-Americans and other minorities in the Commonwealth of Virginia to secure economic self-reliance, parity, power, and civil rights.

The Urban League of Greater Richmond has always been committed to assisting those it serves in their professional and personal lives, and to promoting lifelong learning and educational achievement at all levels of education. The Urban League of Greater Richmond provides vital services to the Richmond community. These services include providing access to housing counseling, employment services, a full computer center, credit services, and health services in partnership with the MCV/VCU Hospital Quality Care Unit program.

On Friday, March 20, 2009, the Urban League of Greater Richmond will celebrate its 95th anniversary with music legend Chuck Brown. This event will not only celebrate and honor 95 years of service to the Richmond community, but it will also raise money for college scholarships for underserved students.

I have had the opportunity to work alongside the Urban League of Greater Richmond to better the Richmond community for many years. Whether it's civil rights, crime policy, or welfare reform, the Urban League has always been out there leading the charge and making sure the urban agenda and those issues important to minority communities are a part of the local, state and national conversation.

While today I honor their first 95 years of service of the Urban League of Greater Richmond, I look forward to many, many more years of dedicated service, commitment and passion for the welfare of the people of Greater Richmond. I commend their many volunteers, their hard working staff, their board of directors and their President and CEO Thomas Victory, and I thank the Urban League of Greater Richmond for 95 years of outstanding leadership on issues that directly affect our urban community.

SENATE—Thursday, March 19, 2009

The Senate met at 9:31 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable EDWARD E. KAUFMAN, a Senator from the State of Delaware.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Almighty God, in whose keeping are the destinies of people and nations, endure with Your wisdom our fallible minds that we may do Your will. Lord, give our Senators the greatness of soul that they will use the keys of their power to open doors of peace and righteousness for our Nation and world. As they seek to make good decisions, strengthen them with the assurance that in life's supreme tests, You will guide them. Give them the grace of quietness and confidence that in simple trust and deeper reference they may reap a bountiful harvest. May they be found steadfast, abounding in Your work, knowing that because of You their labor is not in vain.

We pray in the Name that is above every name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable EDWARD E. KAUFMAN led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. BYRD.)

The bill clerk read the following letter:

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, DC, March 19, 2009.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable EDWARD E. KAUFMAN, a Senator from the State of Delaware, to perform the duties of the Chair.

ROBERT C. BYRD,
President pro tempore.

Mr. KAUFMAN thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. REID. Mr. President, following leader remarks the Senate will be in a period of morning business for 1 hour. Senators will be permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each up to that period of time. The majority will control the first 30 minutes, and Republicans will control the final 30 minutes.

Upon the conclusion of morning business, the Senate will resume consideration of H.R. 146. We will vote in relation to the remaining three Coburn amendments around 11 a.m. today and on passage of the bill shortly thereafter.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon, the Senate will turn to executive session to consider the nomination of Elena Kagan to be Solicitor General of the United States. The agreement reached last night provides for up to 6 hours for debate prior to a vote on her confirmation. We anticipate the vote could occur in the 4:30 to 6 p.m. range. It is doubtful that all 6 hours will be needed for debate on the Solicitor General.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Republican leader is recognized.

AIG

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, Americans want answers about how bonuses were handed out at AIG, how it happened, and how to make sure it never happens again.

The President said last night that he wants to make sure we don't find ourselves in this situation again, and I couldn't agree more. He pledged to do everything possible to fix the situation, and certainly we all appreciate that. He has said his administration will ensure that if they provide further assistance, they will renegotiate these types of preexisting contracts. That is good.

I was encouraged to read this morning that some senior executive officers at AIG have agreed to return their bonuses to the taxpayers, including the largest bonus. That is the right thing to do, and it is a clear sign that the taxpayers' voices have been heard. But for now, taxpayers are still looking for an answer to the question of how all of this happened so we can make sure their hard-earned pay isn't wasted in the future.

THE BUDGET

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, Americans are focused on a number of important issues at the moment relating to the economy and to the administration's response to it, but it would be a mistake in the midst of all of these immediate concerns to take our eye off the administration's long-term economic plan as outlined in its budget. The American people already have an idea that this budget spends too much, it taxes too much, and it borrows too much, particularly in the midst of a severe recession. They are also concerned about the staggering number of things the administration is trying to do. Still, it is important to look closely at the details of the administration's long-term budget plan so people have an idea of what is coming.

Over the past 2 weeks, Republicans have discussed the spending side of the budget and some of the massive new taxes the budget calls for on energy use and on small businesses. Today, I wish to briefly discuss another element of the tax plan, and that is the proposal to limit the benefit taxpayers receive for making charitable donations to nonprofits and charitable organizations.

Let's be clear about something from the outset. This is not something only Republicans oppose. This proposal has been met with wide bipartisan opposition in Congress and widespread criticism from the many thousands of organizations that would be adversely affected by it. With a challenged economy already causing endowments at colleges and universities, charities, museums, and other nonprofits to shrivel up, the last thing America's nonprofit organizations expected was for the administration to introduce yet another disincentive to charitable giving, and many of them, including many of them from the opposite ends of the political spectrum, are uniting in strong opposition to the administration's proposal. One reason: According to a February survey in the Chronicle of Higher Education, college and university endowments lost more than 20 percent of their value in a recent 5-month period, largely as a result of the plunging stock market. The administration's proposal is a bad one, frankly, at any time, but now is the worst time of all.

Earlier this week, I received a letter on this very proposal from the president of Western Kentucky University in Bowling Green. He said the university has worked hard over the past year to increase its support from charitable gifts and that they have had a lot of success doing that. He also noted that WKU is in the middle of a major annual fundraising campaign to increase opportunities for students and that 95 percent of the total will come from the generosity of fewer than 500 donors.

The message was clear: The importance of major gifts to Western Kentucky University and to thousands of other colleges and universities across the country is impossible to overstate, and disincentivizing those gifts would strike a serious blow to every one of these institutions—every single one of them.

There is another important aspect of this issue, and it is one President Ransdell at WKU pointed out in his letter. Americans are known the world over for their generosity. That generosity was encouraged by the creation of the charitable gift deduction in the early part of the last century, and that deduction is one of the reasons that last year Americans gave more than $300 billion to charitable causes—that was back in 2007—and roughly 75 percent of those donations—or $229 billion—came from individuals. I will say that again: 75 percent of the $300 billion given to charitable causes in 2007, which is $229 billion, came from individuals. One of the things Americans are most proud of is that no other industrialized nation in the world gives more to charity than the United States. It is not even close. As a share of our GDP, Americans give more than twice as much as Britain and 10 times more than France. Seven out of ten American households donate to charities, supporting a wide range of religious, educational, cultural, health care, and environmental goals. This is something to be proud of. It is uniquely American. It is not something we want to discourage.

So Americans from all walks of life and both political parties are worried about this proposal. They don't understand why charitable organizations and the people they serve should suffer in order to pay for new or expanded Government programs. According to one study, this proposal could lead to $9 billion less in charitable giving each year. That is less money for places such as Western Kentucky University, the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation, hospitals, churches, food pantries, and countless other causes that are quite worthy of our support. These organizations are hurting enough. The administration doesn't need to hit them up for more tax revenue while they are down, and it doesn't need to blunt one of the things Americans are most proud of; that is, of course, our generosity.

The following quote attributed to President Kennedy sums up the way most Americans feel about this issue, and it captures my own sentiments as well. This is what he had to say:

The raising of extraordinarily large sums of money, given voluntarily and freely by millions of our fellow Americans, is a unique American tradition . . . Philanthropy, charity, giving voluntarily and freely . . . call it what you like, but it is truly a jewel of an American tradition.

Charities provide a valuable public service to society's most vulnerable citizens. Now more than ever, these organizations need our help. This plan to disincentivize charitable giving is absolutely wrong. Many of us on both sides of the aisle will be working hard to make sure it doesn't become law. Congress should preserve the full deduction for charitable donations and actually look for additional ways to encourage charitable giving, not discourage it.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be a period of morning business for up to 1 hour, with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each, with the time equally divided and controlled between the two leaders, or their designees, with the majority controlling the first half and the Republicans controlling the second half.

The Senator from Washington is recognized.

(The remarks of Mrs. MURRAY pertaining to the introduction of S. 638 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mrs. MURRAY. I yield the floor, and I reserve the remainder of the time on our side.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wyoming is recognized.

THE BUDGET

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, this morning I want to address the budget a little bit, and to all Americans, I want to be clear: I want to work with the President to get our economy back on track. I want to fix housing, reform the financial markets, and help every citizen get access to high-quality, affordable health care. I want our President to succeed in leading our Nation out of this economic crisis.

But I draw the line with President Obama's idea of raising taxes. He may think it is a great idea to raise taxes in the midst of a recession, but I surely don't. The President's proposed tax increase is a whopper—$1.4 trillion in new taxes, which is equal to the annual economic output of all of Spain.

Despite the White House rhetoric, these taxes will hit all Americans. No one is spared. This budget raises taxes on energy. If you drive a car or heat your home, your taxes are going to go up.

This budget raises taxes on small business. More than half of small businesses that employ between 20 and 500 employees—that is the Federal definition of "small business," 20 and 500 employees—will see their tax bills rise and jobs eliminated.

This budget raises taxes on senior citizens who are dependent on dividend and capital gains income for retirement income.

This budget raises taxes on charitable contributions. Just the announcement that it will happen, we have already seen decreasing charitable contributions. Of course, a lot of those charitable contributions are ones that come from these small business employers who have single proprietorships or small business corporations where they have to pay their taxes right away, even though they have to put all that money back into the company. I will talk about that later.

This budget reinstates the death tax, making it harder to keep the family farm, the family ranch, or the family business in the family.

This budget simply taxes too much. I heard lots of complaints from Wyoming ranchers about the President's tax increase. Many of our ranches and farms are structured as S corporations or limited liability corporations, and this tax hike would hurt them.

The President will say his proposal to let some 2001 tax cuts expire will affect only 3 percent of all taxpayers, but this statistic obscures the fact that these taxpayers employ the most number of workers and generate the most economic activity of all small business entities.

According to a 2007 Treasury Department report, over 30 percent of all business income comes from passthrough entities, such as S corporations, partnerships, and limited liability companies. That means it goes right back in to take care of the business.

Last weekend, I was in Wyoming. I visited Sanford's restaurant in Gillette, WY. They started with one restaurant and now they have eight different locations. At the location I went to, one of the owners happened to be there. He said proudly, and he should: We started this business on $2,000. Now we have eight stores, and we still only have $2,000. That is because everything has been plowed back into the business, which results in more jobs for more people.

That is what we are talking about. We want this economy to grow. Small businesses are the ones making this grow. It is the guys and women with an idea they can take their last $2,000 and put it into something productive and they can grow it. The problem is, when they grow it, they pay the taxes on it immediately. They pay the taxes as though it actually flowed into their pocket. But it doesn't. As a result, some of these people who have been successful who are creating all these jobs make more than $250,000 a year. They don't get to keep it. That is the important part. They don't get to keep it. They have to pay taxes on it right away. That puts them into this new higher tax bracket.

It is going to have a devastating effect. Suddenly, the house they own—they are not going to have the same kind of house deduction, as if they didn't have a business at all.

Charitable contributions—it is the small businesses that keep the towns going. It isn't the big corporations that buy the ads in the yearbooks. It isn't the big corporations that make a donation when somebody comes around because there has been a fire. It is those little businesses that want to grow. They are growing, but they have to put everything they have back into it. I know small businessmen who have been able to pay everybody who works for them but not themselves.

We are not talking about the big corporations with the big bonuses. We are talking about the little corporations that are family. By "family" I mean every employee who works for them understands how difficult the business is, how close to not succeeding the business is, and because they want their job, they help the business to succeed. As a result, they are included in "the family." All of those people are going to suffer.

Because 30 percent of all business income that comes through these pass-through entities, such as S corporations, partnerships, and limited liability companies, these small businesses that are hiring people—they are hiring people; they are not laying them off. The unemployment would be tremendously higher if it were not for this 30 percent of all business income that gets passed through and back into the business.

Over 70 percent of that income is concentrated in the top two marginal income-tax rates. They pay the highest rate we have because they did business and because the business is making money. But it isn't money they get to put in their pockets; it is money they put back into the business. So nearly a quarter of all business income would be subject to higher taxes under this budget.

Let me repeat that. Nearly a quarter of all business income would be subject to these higher taxes under this budget. According to a 2007 survey completed by Gallup for the National Federation of Independent Businesses, 50 percent of all businesses that employ between 20 and 499 workers will face higher taxes if the 2001 rate reduction in the top two rates is allowed to expire. Fifty percent of all businesses that employ between 20 and 499 workers will face higher taxes if we do not change that, if we allow it to expire. And the plan, according to the budget, is to let it expire, to shove these taxes off on these small businesses, the ones that are still doing well, the ones that have not succumb to the greed, the ones that have been doing the right thing, particularly with their community. Raising taxes on our Nation's job creation engine at any point in the business cycle is just bad economic policy.

The key to our Nation's economic growth and our ability to recover from a crisis such as this one is the flexibility and the vibrancy of our non-corporate sector. Small business is the incubator for entrepreneurship, and we should protect it and nurture it, not tax it.

For example, many in the companies that fueled the economic growth of the 1990s and beyond started as pass-through entities: For example Yahoo and Microsoft, just to mention a few that the President mentioned earlier in the week when he was talking about the importance of helping out small business and said all the right things about small business.

I am encouraged by what he said. I am encouraged by the differences he is going to make in the way the Small Business Administration works. But it is going to come back again in the way of higher taxes for those same people. We need to encourage, not discourage, those people.

When I was in Wyoming, I had a procurement conference. That is where the Federal Government comes to Wyoming and talks to my businessmen to see if small business can't provide for some of the Government contracts. Every year it is a huge success. People from all over the Nation, not just Wyoming, are able to take advantage of that sort of thing.

At that conference, a guy in Montana was talking about the need for some liquidity so he could get a loan—a loan, not a bailout—a loan so he could grow his business. As we learned at the White House summit on Monday, the banks do not have a secondary market for their loans. That means when they make the loan, they cannot turn around and sell the loan to free up the capital to make another loan. When that happens, these small businesses cannot get loans, and a lot of them need short-term credit.

You have to order your inventory a year ahead of time often. When it gets there, you have to pay for it, and then you sell it. A lot of them need just a kind of cashflow loan, one that will pull them through that time when all the inventory hits and gets paid off and the time the inventory gets sold.

A guy in Montana talked to a guy in Wyoming who talked to me and proposed several different ways that I have passed on to the White House and to Secretary Geithner that money could be freed up for these businesses to grow. I am encouraged and hope that will happen. I hope it is not reversed by these new taxes.

I will fight to preserve low taxes for our Nation's small business, and I am prepared to offer an amendment to any legislation that attempts to raise taxes on small business income.

I have pledged to work with the White House to fix housing, to reform our financial markets, and to help every citizen get access to high-quality, affordable health care. My question today is: Will the White House work with me to protect small business from the harmful effects of this budget's tax increase?

This budget taxes too much, spends too much, and borrows too much.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PRYOR). The Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I ask the Chair to let me know when 9 minutes has elapsed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will so notify the Senator.

IT'S THE ECONOMY

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, we have an impressive new President of the United States. He has proven without a shadow of a doubt that he is capable of doing many things at once.

I was privileged to go to one of the summits he had. That one was on health care. He had another one on entitlements. He has been to a wind turbine factory. He was in California yesterday. He has overruled some of President Bush's environmental decisions. And yesterday he did what many Americans are doing: he picked his bracket in the NCAA basketball tournament, and he picked North Carolina, which predictably caused their rival, the coach of Duke, Coach "K," to say the following:

Somebody said we're not in President Obama's final four, and as much as I respect what he is doing, really, the economy is something that he should focus on, probably more than the brackets.

That was our U.S. Olympic coach yesterday. There is some truth to that. The President is very impressive and is capable of doing many things at once. But, we don't need a lot of things done at once right now. We have one big issue—it's the economy, Mr. President.

While all of us have our role to play in this—Senators, businesspeople, all of us across the country—there is only one person who can do what the President of the United States can do. He is the agenda setter. He is the mobilizer. If the President of the United States focuses on one single big issue and throws everything he has into it for as long as he can, he will wear everybody else out and he will solve the problem, if it can be solved. I am confident in this country the problem can be solved.

He has been there for 4½ months now. We still have a big economic problem. It was going on before he came in, correct. Some people say Americans don't pay attention to history, but I am not so sure about that. In October of 1952, General Eisenhower was running for President and said: I shall go to Korea. He was elected. The Korean war was a big problem then.

On November 29, he went to Korea, and said he would concentrate his attention on the job of ending the Korean war until it is honorably ended. There were a lot of other things going on in 1952 and 1953 that needed to be solved. But President Eisenhower focused on the Korean war, ended it, and the country was grateful.

It is time for President Obama to focus on fixing the banks and getting the economy moving again. He can do that. The country needs for him to do that, and the country would be grateful if he did.

There are other issues, but we only have one President; we have one big issue. Mr. President, it's the economy. That is where the focus needs to be.

We are currently debating the President's budget, and we have some differences of opinion. As the Senator from Wyoming said, we believe on the Republican side it spends too much, it taxes too much, and it borrows too much. It is a blueprint for a different kind of country. It is an honest blueprint, in my opinion. It is a 10-year picture of where America would go under the President's proposed budget. It will bring much more Government, add much more debt, and it will be turning over to our children a country that they will have a hard time affording and in which they will have fewer choices. It is not the kind of country I want to see.

The new higher tax rates would raise taxes by $1.4 trillion over 10 years. It is the largest tax increase in history.

Going back to history a little bit, we can learn lessons from history. President Hoover in 1932, as we were entering a recession, raised taxes. He raised taxes on the wealthy people. The top tax rate rose from 25 percent to 63 percent. What were the effects of the 1932 tax increase? Tax revenue decreased, the Federal deficit increased, and the Great Depression continued for a number of years. The middle of a deep recession is no time to be raising taxes on anyone. I know the President is saying: Well, this only goes into effect later. But everybody makes plans today based on what happens tomorrow. We also know that if they say we are only going to tax the rich people, we have heard that said before. In 1969, everybody became concerned because there were 155 people in America who didn't pay any taxes. So we had what was called the millionaire's tax to catch them. We put in a new tax rate 40 years ago. If Congress had not acted, that tax rate that was set to capture 155 people who didn't pay taxes 40 years ago would have captured 28 million Americans this year.

In this country, you rise. You make more money and you rise into the higher tax rates. So if you put a high tax rate to capture 155 people, what we find 40 years later is that you capture 28 million Americans who are paying higher taxes, and many of those individuals are making incomes of $60,000, $70,000, and $80,000 a year.

President Kennedy and President Reagan both lowered taxes when they became President and were in economic slowdowns. When President Reagan came in, we had a serious economic slowdown. I was Governor of Tennessee at the time, and unemployment was higher then than it is today. Inflation was a lot more then than it is today. Interest rates were terrifically high then. President Kennedy and President Reagan decided to lower taxes during the economic slowdowns. President Obama is proposing the largest tax increase in history, and the tax especially goes on the engine that creates the most new jobs.

In America, all businesses are important for creating jobs. In my home State, we have Federal Express. It employs almost 300,000 people around the world. On the Republican side of things, we would like to have immediate expensing of all the big airplanes Federal Express buys, or the software Microsoft buys—which is not based in my State. Because if these companies can deduct those expenses in the first year, they will make more money, they will hire more people, and Tennessee will do better. Jobs are what we are talking about. But most of the new businesses come from small businesses.

Secretary Geithner, the Treasury Secretary, says this tax they want to impose only affects the rich people, and only 2 or 3 percent of the small businesses are affected. Well, I checked into that a little bit. If you work for a company with 20 or more employees—up to 500 employees is a small business—chances are 50–50 that you are working for somebody whose taxes are going to be raised by this proposed tax increase in the President's budget. If those taxes go up in the half of the small businesses that create most of the new jobs, then there is no money to buy new equipment, there is no money to hire a new person, there is no money to raise salaries, there is no money to pay health care benefits and there might not be enough money to pay employees and jobs may be at risk. Raising taxes on owners of small businesses in the middle of a recession is not the way to create new jobs.

Then there is the national sales tax on electric bills and energy. Clean air and climate change is an important issue with me, especially clean air. I live at the edge of the Great Smoky Mountains, where we have unhealthy air that's polluted with nitrogen, sulfur, and other pollutants. I have introduced legislation to have higher clean air standards. I have also, every Congress since I have been here, introduced legislation to have caps on carbon that comes out of the coal-fired powerplants. Not caps on the whole economy, just the powerplants, which produce about 40 percent of the carbon. Some other Senators would like to have what is called a cap-and-trade tax on the entire American economy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has used 9 minutes.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I thank the Chair very much.

Mr. President, the recession is no time to impose a $600-plus billion tax on everybody's electric bill. This is not the time to do that, if the time is ever right to do that. MIT suggests a bill such as the one the President has proposed would cost each American family $3,100 a year. In the middle of a recession, that is not a good idea.

In conclusion, I think Coach K's advice to our impressive new President is good advice. We know he can have summits, make trips, and deal with a lot of different things. He has smart people dealing with him. But we have a tough economic problem, and it is the economy, Mr. President. We need the President to focus on the economy and concentrate on it, until the banks are fixed and the credit is flowing. We need a budget that doesn't spend so much, tax so much, and raise debt so much. Otherwise, we will deliver a country to our children and grandchildren that they can't afford.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. GILLIBRAND). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to speak for up to 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. WYDEN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to speak after Senator CORNYN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there an objection to the request as modified?

Mr. CORNYN. No.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Texas is recognized.

AIG

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, I rise to speak about the public's outrage over the revelations that senior executives at AIG have received bailout bonuses. This company received $173 billion in taxpayer money, including tens of billions of dollars through the Troubled Asset Relief Program. The American people do deserve to know where their money is going.

I confess that last year I supported the first round of TARP money based on the representation from what I thought were the smartest people in the country that it was absolutely necessary to unfreeze the frozen credit markets in our country. But I did not support additional money for the TARP funding when it was requested—the second tranche, so to speak—because the accountability and the transparency we were promised by the Treasury Department the first time around never materialized. We were told this money was necessary to prevent a crisis in our country. Now, we do have a crisis, but that crisis is a crisis of confidence in this administration and in the leaders of this Congress.

The American people have legitimate and urgent questions about these bailout bonuses, and these questions demand answers. First of all, they want to know how this happened. A lot of people are pointing fingers over these bailout bonuses, and right now there is a lot we do not know.

I appreciate the fact that President Obama said: You know what, people are trying to find fault. I accept the blame.

I appreciate the gesture, but that is simply not good enough. We do not know when the administration became aware of these bonuses. Secretary Geithner says he learned of the bonuses last Tuesday. President Obama said he learned about them on Thursday. Yet the Federal Reserve Bank of New York says it notified Treasury in February. And Edward Liddy, the CEO of AIG, testified that everyone knew about these bonuses for months and that he and Secretary Geithner spoke about the bailout bonuses 2 weeks ago. What is clear is that the administration should have known about these bonuses a lot earlier and they should have taken action before they sent AIG another $30 billion this month.

We also know how these bailout bonuses got legal protection in the stimulus bill. I voted against the stimulus bill for reasons too numerous to mention here. Yet the bill that passed out of this Chamber had two amendments that addressed bailout bonuses: One amendment, sponsored by Senator WYDEN and Senator SNOWE, would have taxed these bonuses; another, sponsored by Senator DODD, the Senator from Connecticut, would have banned the bailout bonuses altogether. These amendments were in the bill that passed out of the Senate, but something happened in the conference. The Snowe-Wyden amendment disappeared completely and the Dodd amendment was changed so that it grandfathered in all the bailout bonuses in place on or before February 11. No one admits to knowing how this happened. None of the conferees admit to knowing. There have been conflicting reports about who knew what when. But the American people need to know who protected these bailout bonuses in a law that was signed by President Obama—one among those who claim outrage at the revelation that now these bonuses are going to be received. He signed the law into effect that actually protected these bonuses in the stimulus plan.

The American people deserve to know who proposed these changes in the stimulus bill, who knew about these changes, and who approved these changes. The American people deserve to know who is responsible and how they intend to fix this problem and get the bailout bonus money back in a constitutional and legal way.

How do we assure this does not happen again? As those responsible scramble to come up with an explanation, we must also understand what we must do to ensure this type of thing never happens again. I would like to offer a few suggestions.

First, Congress needs to stop passing bills without reading them, finding out what is in them, and preparing for their implementation. During the transition, the then-incoming administration said they didn't want to waste a crisis, and Congress complied. Yet their leadership has taught us a different lesson: Treating everything like a crisis actually leads to waste.

Second, it is clear the administration needs to get its team in place. Better oversight by the Treasury Department could have avoided this problem. Yet, as Paul Volcker observed, Secretary Geithner "is sitting there without a deputy, without any under secretaries, with no assistant secretary responsible in substantive areas at a time of obviously very severe crisis." I appreciate that President Obama has completed his March Madness tournament bracket. Yet the organization chart for this administration still has far too many open slots.

Third, the President needs to shelve his plans to grow the size of Government. His plans to raise more taxes can wait until the administration proves they can be good stewards of the tax dollars we are already spending. His plans to nationalize health care, energy, and education can also wait until he addresses the problem of toxic assets in our financial system and gets our economy moving again.

Fourth, the President needs to fulfill his pledge to promote transparency and accountability and bipartisanship in Washington—something I agree with. The President won the support of the American people because he promised to be a different kind of leader. Yet we see that the more things change, the more they seem to be the same here in Washington. Lack of transparency in Congress helped protect these bailout bonuses in law—passed by the Senate without my vote and signed by the President of the United States. Lack of accountability at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue speeded this money out the door.

If the President's efforts at bipartisanship had been substantive—more than photo ops and press releases—then we might have delivered a better stimulus bill and not squandered the trust of the American people.

I yield the floor.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Morning business is closed.

REVOLUTIONARY WAR AND WAR OF 1812 BATTLEFIELD PROTECTION ACT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume consideration of H.R. 146, which the clerk will report by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 146) to establish a battlefield acquisition grant program for the acquisition and protection of nationally significant battlefields and associated sites of the Revolutionary War and the War of 1812, and for other purposes.

Pending:

Bingaman amendment No. 684, in the nature of a substitute.

Coburn amendment No. 682 (to amendment No. 684), to protect scientists and visitors to Federal lands from unfair penalties for collecting insignificant rocks.

Coburn amendment No. 677 (to amendment No. 684), to require Federal agencies to determine on an annual basis the quantity of land that is owned by each Federal agency and the cost to taxpayers of the ownership of the land.

Coburn amendment No. 683 (to amendment No. 684), to prohibit funding for congressional earmarks for wasteful and parochial pork projects.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon is recognized.

Mr. WYDEN. Madam President, I rise today to urge colleagues to support Chairman BINGAMAN on the upcoming amendments and to speak in favor of this extraordinarily important public lands package.

This legislation would designate over 2 million acres of our great country as wilderness, surpassing the wilderness acreage designated by the last three sessions combined. The wilderness protected in this bill spans nine States, including my home State of Oregon. In addition, it adds close to 1,100 miles to the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System in seven States—again including Oregon.

It is going to allow for much needed upgrades to national trails, monuments, national conservation areas, oceans, the National Landscape Conservation System, forest landscape restoration, and water resources. Most significantly, the bills contained in this legislation would serve to protect our public lands from encroachment and preserve them for future generations to cherish and enjoy.

The legislation includes provisions that are very near and dear to our country but especially to Oregonians. It includes the Lewis and Clark Mount Hood Wilderness Act of 2007, the Copper Salmon Wilderness Act, the Cascade-Siskiyou National Monument Voluntary and Equitable Grazing Conflict Resolution Act, the Oregon Badlands Wilderness Act of 2008, and the Spring Basin Wilderness Act of 2008.

Today, I also wish to say that it is important to protect these special places because it will also be good for our economy to go forward with this legislation. This is legislation that is important to do whether we are in good times or in bad times—whether the economy is weak or strong. Because the nation's public lands of course, have enduring benefits, benefits we are going to pass on to our children long after these challenging days become a footnote in our country's history. So protecting public lands is a smart thing to do, and it is especially important given the significant economic benefits you will see generated by this legislation. And there are many that know, this is also a smart thing to be doing in a recession because our public lands—accessible to all for free or for a small fee—are where America's families turn for affordable recreation. And that recreation in turn, fuels the economy in many communities that rely on our nation's public lands.

Appreciating the outdoors is not just a passion for Oregonians and the people of our country, it is also an economic engine, which is more urgently needed than ever in these challenging economic times. It is certainly an economic engine in my State, where the unemployment rate is over 10 percent. So passing this legislation isn't just the right thing to do morally—it is the right thing to do economically.

In these times, folks have been losing their jobs. They do not know where their next job is going to come from. The fact is, there are significant economic benefits through recreation generated by this legislation. The Outdoor Industry Association, which closely tracks American's use of the outdoors and all the economic engine that encourages, has found recently that American's participation in outdoor activities increased in 2007 to 50 percent.

They found that the national active outdoor recreation economy contributes $730 billion annually to our Nation's economy; it supports nearly 6.5 million jobs; it generates $49 billion in annual national tax revenue; and produces almost $300 billion annually in retail sales and services across the country. In Oregon, it contributes more than $5.8 billion annually to Oregon's economy.

So outdoor recreation, what this legislation is going to promote, is a huge economic bonanza for our Nation. I can tell you, because colleagues have asked about Oregon, one of the national treasures this bill would protect, Mt. Hood, has had a banner skiing season. The Forest Service estimates visitation to the Mt. Hood National Forest is more than 2 million visitors a year, making it one of the most popular in our country.

Some other areas that we protect in this bill, the Badlands and Spring Basin are near Central Oregon—a region that has a well-earned reputation as a hub for diverse outdoor recreation. They are also on Bureau of Land Management Lands, "BLM." The BLM estimated that in Oregon alone, BLM lands had 8.3 million recreation visits. Those visits brought people, jobs and investment to the surrounding towns.

The same is true in the other two areas this legislation would protect—the Cascade Siskiyou National Monument, where we would create a new 23,000 acre Soda Mountain Wilderness and Copper Salmon, where fishermen from all over the country journey to fish in one of the last intact watersheds on the southwestern Oregon Coast.

A number of Senators have worked hard to make this legislation possible. I wish to thank them. And certainly Michele Miranda in our office, Mary Gautreaux, and my chief of staff, Josh Kardon, who has tried for years and years to bring together community leaders, all deserve special credit.

We have gems in this legislation that are going to make for recreational industry meccas. I hope that all colleagues will support Chairman BINGAMAN when the amendments come up and ultimately support this legislation. We ought to pass this legislation. It is time to do it for millions of Americans and for future generations enjoying these great treasures, and we ought to do it because this legislation will also help stoke the economic engine for our country.

I know colleagues are waiting too. I wish to thank Chairman BINGAMAN for this opportunity to speak. I urge all colleagues to support Chairman BINGAMAN with respect to these amendments and get this bill passed in the Senate today.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Madam President, how much time remains in opposition to this first amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is 10 minutes remaining. The Senator from New Mexico has 4 minutes and the Senator from Oklahoma has 10 minutes.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Let me take 2 of the 4 minutes because I know my colleague from Alaska was hoping to speak also. If she arrives, I will yield that time to her. If she does not, I will reclaim it.

Mr. MARTINEZ. Madam President, I was under the impression that I would be allowed to speak in opposition to amendment No. 683 as well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That amendment is not the first amendment to be voted on.

Mr. COBURN. Madam President, since I am controlling the remaining 10 minutes, I would be happy to yield to the Senator from Florida 2 minutes of that time.

Mr. MARTINEZ. I understand it is not the first amendment. Will there be an opportunity to speak in opposition to the amendment prior to that vote?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There will be 4 minutes of debate evenly divided.

Mr. MARTINEZ. If I might suggest, through the chair, that the Senator from New Mexico go on and take his time. I will yield time to the Senator from Florida.

AMENDMENT NO. 677

Mr. BINGAMAN. Madam President, let me go ahead and briefly describe my reasons for urging we not support this first amendment. This first amendment is an amendment Senator COBURN offered and is very nearly identical to an amendment he offered to the Consolidated Natural Resources Act of 2008. That was the package of public land bills the House sent us that year.

Most of the Senate voted against the amendment. I hope they will again. The amendment required the Director of the Office of Management and Budget to post an annual report on the Internet detailing a great deal of information about lands owned by the Government: buildings, structures on those lands, extensive information on which are used, which are not used, the cost of operation of those lands, and those structures estimated backlog for maintenance of various structures of the agencies.

The issue the Senator is trying to get at was dealt with in the previous administration, when President Bush issued Executive Order 13327. Therein, he set up the Federal Real Property Council, a Federal real property council, that has, as its job, tracking asset management, inventory of assets, setting up systems to do that, working under the auspices of the General Services Administration; the Government Accountability Office or the General Services Administration.

I believe that is a much better thought-through way to proceed with this. The cost of this amendment would be fairly extensive. We do not have an exact estimate, but we have been told there are 1.2 billion pieces of real property or real property assets worldwide, over 636 million acres of land we are talking about here, that would have to be inventoried and reported on in an updated fashion every year. So this is an extensive undertaking.

Madam President, how much time remains on my side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico has 1 minute remaining.

Mr. BINGAMAN. I withhold my time until the Senator from Alaska can have a chance to get her thoughts together.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized.

Mr. COBURN. Madam President, I yield 3 minutes to the Senator from Florida.

AMENDMENT NO. 683

Mr. MARTINEZ. I thank the Senator from Oklahoma for yielding.

I rise in opposition to his very amendment, which shows why I often find myself in agreement with the Senator from Oklahoma, because of his kind nature to allow me to do this in opposition to his very amendment.

While I often find myself in agreement with him, in this instance I must depart and not concur. The amendment is not well founded. It is trying to strike the authorization for the St. Augustine 450th Commemoration Commission Act. This is a commemoration of 450 years of the first European settlement on the North American Continent, the first in the continental United States.

St. Augustine was founded by the Spanish a full 50 years before Jamestown. We created, in the year 2000, a commission to commemorate that event, the 400th anniversary of Jamestown. Likewise, this one is identically patterned to that. It is the same thing. But here is the significance and importance of it. Our Hispanic heritage in this country, which necessarily is of more and more importance to many of us, is something we ought to recognize and celebrate.

How many young Hispanic children do not have the heritage or the foundational heritage to understand their culture and their proud heritage, and how many of them would benefit by understanding that this celebration is about them. It is about their heritage and their heritage in this very country of ours.

It is the oldest permanent settlement in the United States, St. Augustine, FL. It is the birthplace of Christianity. It is in St. Augustine, FL, that the first Christian Catholic mass took place. It is the first blending of cultures. It was a place that was at times Spanish, it was then English, it was then French. It has Native American influence as well as African-American influences as well. The first free Black settlement in North American was in St. Augustine.

Nearly a century before the founding of Jamestown, Spanish explorer Juan Ponce de Leon landed on the coast of St. Augustine looking for the fabled Fountain of Youth, but instead he founded a colony known as La Florida.

Because of St. Augustine's location along strategic trade routes, Spain constructed the Castillo de San Marco in 1672 to protect the capital of La Florida from the French and the British interests. That castle, which was later rebuilt, still stands today and is a terrific tourist attraction.

Florida is not only going to celebrate this for Florida's sake, but this is a national celebration. There are over 70 million visitors to our State of Florida every year. Many of them will find their way to St. Augustine, and, of course, countless others throughout and around our country will celebrate this anniversary by seeing the celebrations on television and in other ways.

It is an important linkage to our Hispanic heritage, and so I urge my colleagues to vote in opposition to this amendment and support the bill.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Madam President, I wish to rebut some of what the Senator from New Mexico said in terms of the real property reform.

What you heard in his statements is a profound admission that we do not have the information right now. We do not have it. We have over 650 million acres of land, we have over 21,000 empty buildings now that we know of. That is just a guess.

How, in a time when we are going to run a $2.2 trillion deficit this year, can we say we do not want the tools to manage the real property in this country. The Executive order has not done it. It was basically about buildings, Federal buildings.

I worked with the OMB on that 3 years ago to set that up. Much to the avail, we now know we have the 21,000 buildings, but the Senate continues to block any real property reform so we cannot get some of the $18 billion we are wasting every year on those 21,000 buildings. We cannot get any of them sold; we cannot dispose of any of them; we cannot even raze any of the ones that need to be razed.

The very fact that we would oppose having the information we need to make real decisions, frugal financial decisions with America's taxpayer dollars, at a time when we are in an economic malaise, and have a deficit that is going to be $6,000 to $7,000 per every individual in this country is amazing to me.

This requires 1 year of hard work and requires very little work anyway after that. So it is not an onerous task. But even if it were an onerous task, the thing we ought to be doing is getting the information with which to make good management decisions, which we continue to not want to have, so it can be an excuse so we can do what we want to do without knowing what the facts are.

Nobody would run any organization without trying to know about their assets. Yet we are going to refuse to list out and know what we own, where it is, where we are behind, what needs to get fixed, and what does not need to get fixed.

Common sense would dictate that if, in fact, you have a large number of assets and a limited budget, and it is going to get more limited as the years progress given the tremendous borrowing, the tremendous taxing that is getting ready to come about in this country, common sense would suggest we know what we are doing and that we have the information with which to make good decisions.

To defeat this amendment says we want to continue to go on blindly; we do not want to have the information at our fingertips with which to make good, informed decisions about where to put taxpayer dollars. The very fact that the GAO now says we have between a $13 and $19 billion backlog just on structures in national parks and that the Department of the Interior is so far behind and is growing about $400 million every 6 months in terms of its backlog and for us to not know what is there and what should be prioritized to me is the height of foolishness.

So we can defeat this amendment, and we can continue to go on blindly, making poor decisions because we are not making them within the perspective of the complete knowledge of what we own, what is important, and what should be prioritized. The Senate continues to refuse to prioritize its spending. The whole purpose behind this amendment is to give us the knowledge with which to make those decisions. But our political nature tells us we want an excuse so we do not have to make those good decisions. We do not want to have the information.

Consequently, we put the credit card in, we spend money not wisely, not fiscally responsibly, and we charge it to our grandkids. At some point in time it has to stop. Now, it is probably not going to stop with this amendment. But you would not run your personal household this way. If you had your own business, you would never run it this way. You would never want your city government to not know what it owned and what its backlogs were, you would have an accounting.

States do not do that. But we do that, and we do it at our own convenience, which I think is a shame. It belies our responsibility to future generations. It also belies the fact that we need the capability to make the tough choices. Not having this information means we will continue to make choices that are politically expedient but are policy poor and policy foolish.

So I understand—actually I do not understand. Let me correct that. I do not understand why somebody would not want this information, and why—even though it is hard to get the first year, why we would not want it.

Now, 100 percent of the Senators agreed we ought to have the Federal Financial and Transparency Act where we put online where we are spending the money, 100 percent of us. We thought that was a good deal. Here is another step toward transparency we can make that will give us information, give the American people the information to judge us.

If we are going to put X money on a certain project, they ought to be able to see it in relationship to everything else we are doing. We are going to refuse to do that. I don't understand why. I don't have a clue to understand why we would not want factual information with which to make priority decisions in terms of the Department of Interior and in terms of national parks and forestland. It belies any sense of reality and any connection with common sense that we would refuse to do that.

I retain the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska is recognized.

Ms. MURKOWSKI. Madam President, I do not disagree with my colleague from Oklahoma that we should, as the Federal Government, know more about our assets, know more about our land and buildings, what it costs to manage and maintain them, to operate these properties. It is a reasonable request. Where he is going with this is something we should be working together to develop and perhaps refine the concept of what he is asking for through a free-standing bill. My concern with the amendment, as it is now, is that we have to make sure as we gain this information, we have a way to protect it. Right now it would be the Office of Management and Budget that has sole responsibility for making decisions in terms of military intelligence, Department of Energy facilities, and what gets included within public reports. That concerns me and, therefore, I will be objecting to the amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 677

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 4 minutes of debate equally divided prior to a vote on amendment No. 677 offered by the Senator from Oklahoma, Mr. COBURN.

The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Let me answer my colleague. There is an exception in this bill for anything of national intelligence or confidence, that it should not be related to the general public. It is already in there. So there is no problem where we would expose things we should not. It has been covered in the amendment. If Members truly believe we need to have the information, they need to be voting for the amendment. This is a wise approach to give us information we need to make cogent decisions.

I retain the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Madam President, I yield myself 1 minute.

Let me speak on that one issue. I think my colleague from Alaska is correct, this does involve a change in current law. It says that the decision as to what affects national security will be made by OMB for purposes of this inventory and display. It will not be made by agencies such as the Department of Defense, CIA, Department of Energy, and others that currently make those decisions. That is a mistake. It also specifies that items can be left out for national security reasons. The Executive order made clear that items could also be left out or should be left out if they involved foreign policy issues or safety issues for the public.

The amendment is not consistent with what I believe we ought to be doing in this area. I urge colleagues to oppose it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

Ms. MURKOWSKI. To follow up with the Senator from New Mexico, we do recognize there is political sensitivity when we are asking for information regarding the military, our intelligence and security information. We want to make sure there are protections there. The Senator from Oklahoma is correct that there is that provision in the bill. But what it does is, it gives the Office of Management and Budget the authority to make the determination as to what will be included in this public report. I would be far more comfortable if it were the Department of Defense that made that determination, not the Office of Management and Budget. Again, the Senator from Oklahoma is correct in pushing us to look to make sure that we know where our assets are and how much it costs to operate and maintain and manage them. We should be looking to that in the future.

I will be opposing the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Madam President, that argument rings hollow. The two of you sitting right there have the power to amend and change this and fix it with what your concerns are. It hasn't been offered once. You say you are for it. You have the power to change it to meet what you think are problems with the amendment. Yet there has been no offer to do that. That says one of two things: Either you don't want us to have this information or you are claiming a false claim that there is a defect with the amendment. You have every ability to change this, offer an amendment, modify it with my consent to meet your needs, but it has never been offered. The real fact is, we don't want the information. We can't manage 650-plus million acres; we can't manage millions of facilities without the information. We are going to sit here in the dark of night and continue to throw darts, missing the dart board all the time with what we do when we don't have this information.

I yield back the balance of my time and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is not a sufficient second at this time.

Mr. BINGAMAN. I move to table the amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be.

The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) and the Senator from Minnesota (Ms. KLOBUCHAR) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

AMENDMENT NO. 682

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 4 minutes of debate equally divided prior to a vote on amendment No. 682 offered by the Senator from Oklahoma, Mr. COBURN.

The Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Madam President, this amendment No. 682 is one I have advised the Senator from Oklahoma is acceptable to Senators on this side of the aisle.

Let me briefly describe what it does. It would modify the underlying provisions of the substitute amendment dealing with the protection of fossil resources on Federal land by making three changes. First, the underlying bill says the Secretary of the Interior or the Secretary of Agriculture may allow casual collecting of common fossils without a permit for personal use. That is consistent with the management policies of the Federal land in question. The Coburn amendment says it requires that the two Secretaries allow that casual collecting for personal use. Secondly, the Coburn amendment would remove a provision that would have authorized agencies under some circumstances to acquire new lands. Finally, the amendment removes a provision in the underlying bill that would have authorized forfeiture of any vehicle or equipment used by someone illegally removing fossil resources.

I think all three of these changes improve the bill and I support the amendment. I believe we can act on this with a voice vote, but I will leave it to the Senator from Oklahoma to make his statement.

Mr. COBURN. Madam President, the chairman is correct. I will gladly accept a voice vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment?

If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 682) was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 683

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 4 minutes of debate equally divided prior to a vote on amendment No. 683 offered by the Senator from Oklahoma, Mr. COBURN.

Who yields time?

Mr. BINGAMAN. Madam President, we yield 2 minutes in opposition to this amendment to Senator FEINSTEIN from California.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Madam President, I thank the manager of the bill.

The Coburn amendment would destroy a court-approved settlement of an 18-year legal battle involving the release of water from the Friant Dam, from which 15,000 farmers get their water over the restoration of salmon in the San Joaquin Valley. The agreement is agreed upon by the Governor of California, the Department of the Interior, the Bureau of Reclamation, the water contractors. It has a broad consensus. The reason is because the belief is—and my belief is—that the Federal Government has lost the case and, therefore, the judge would order a huge release of water from this dam which would provide a lack of certainty for the farmers and would not provide for the salmon restoration.

The distinguished Senator from Oklahoma has argued against the settlement agreement—court approved—by saying its goal is 500 fish. Its goal is not 500 fish; it is 30,000. It is to restore a historic salmon fishery.

Secondly, under the settlement, the State of California relieves the Federal Government of a number of payments: $200 million from the State, and the water contractors pick up another $200 million, equaling $400 million, which the Federal Government would have had to have paid.

So this is a court settlement. It should stand. It is the right thing. I urge a no vote on the Coburn amendment.

Mr. KYL. Madam President, I rise in support of the Coburn amendment because it would eliminate the authorizations for a number of questionable projects. Given the exploding Federal budget deficits, we ought to forgo the millions of taxpayer dollars for such things as the 450th birthday celebration for St. Augustine, FL; a study to determine whether Alexander Hamilton's boyhood estate in St. Croix, Virgin Islands, should be designated as a new part of the National Park System; the maintenance of tropical botanical gardens in Hawaii and Florida; and a shipwreck exploration program. These authorizations are not urgent, have a tenuous Federal nexus, and could divert scarce Federal funds from more important safety and health programs.

Because the amendment eliminates authorizations for such programs, I am compelled to support it even though it would also eliminate a relatively more credible provision in the bill relating to the San Joaquin River Restoration Settlement Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Madam President, I won't spend the time to refute all of what the distinguished Senator from California said, other than to note that in 1924 the salmon were gone from that river; before any of the water canals or anything else was built. We are going to spend $30,000 a fish based on the 300,000 salmon.

More importantly, this amendment talks about five total different earmarks in this bill. My office had a conversation with the mayor of St. Augustine, FL, this morning. Here are his words: I am really worried about the fiscal nature of this country. I am really worried that we are in real trouble, but I still want my money.

Well, the way a republic dies is when the constituency learns they can vote themselves money from the public Treasury regardless of what the overall financial situation of the country is. These are the main earmarks in this bill. The President has said he doesn't want a bill full of earmarks. This strips them all out. We can either do what the American people want—we can act fiscally responsibly—or we can continue the age-old process of putting our positions ahead of those of the constituents we represent.

With that, I yield the floor and ask for the yeas and nays.

Klobuchar

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Madam President, I move to reconsider the vote, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there is now 30 minutes of debate on the bill, equally divided between the Senator from New Mexico and the Senator from Alaska.

The Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Madam President, let me take 5 of the 15 minutes we have. If you will advise me when that time is used.

In just a few minutes, the Senate will vote on final passage of H.R. 146, the Omnibus Public Lands Act. I believe our actions this week will make it more likely that the House of Representatives will be able to consider and approve the Senate amendments expeditiously.

Today's vote will culminate many years of work on more than 160 bills that are included in this package and represents a major achievement for the protection of our Nation's cultural, natural, and historic resources. As I have observed before, when you take all of these bills together, I believe they represent the most significant conservation legislation passed by the Senate, at least in the last 15 years.

In addition, the bill will finally resolve three very important and complex water rights settlements in three different States and literally decades of litigation and controversy about that water. The wilderness and other conservation areas designated in the bill represent years and years of efforts by local citizens, through countless public meetings, in an effort to find a way to protect some of the most important scenic areas in their States, while balancing wilderness designations against other uses. In my opinion, the sponsors of these provisions have gone to great lengths to find that balance.

Some contend that the wilderness, national parks, wild and scenic rivers, and other conservation designations will frustrate our Nation's ability to develop new domestic energy supplies. I strongly disagree. We have gone to great lengths to assess the energy potential of the new areas, and in almost all cases the Bureau of Land Management has concluded that the wilderness areas do not have significant energy development potential.

The Energy and Natural Resources Committee which I am privileged to chair and of which Senator MURKOWSKI is ranking member is assembling a comprehensive energy bill. We hope to bring it to the Senate floor for consideration soon. That bill will provide an opportunity to promote programs to expand the development of domestic energy resources.

I believe the question of whether we should protect our Nation's natural and cultural heritage or instead develop our energy and other resources is a false choice. They are mutually exclusive goals. We can accomplish them both.

A former Senator from my State, who also chaired the then-Interior Committee in the Senate, once said the following:

Wilderness is an anchor to windward. Knowing it is there, we can also know that we are still a rich Nation, tending our resources as we should—not a people in despair searching every last nook and cranny of our land for a board of lumber, a barrel of oil, a blade of grass, or a tank of water.

Let me also indicate that there are many provisions in this bill that are of particular importance to my State: the Navajo Nation Indian Water Rights Settlement; the Eastern New Mexico Rural Water Project; the Rio Grande Pueblo Irrigation Infrastructure legislation; the SECURE Water Act, which has national implications but is important to my State as well; Prehistoric Trackways National Monument; Fort Stanton-Snowy River Cave National Conservation Area; Sabinoso Wilderness, which Senator UDALL has spearheaded; Rio Puerco Watershed Act; and also the Forest Landscape Restoration Act.

This bill will have a far-reaching and positive impact on New Mexico's precious and scarce water resources. The most significant provision is the settlement of the Navajo Nation's water rights claims in the San Juan River basin.

This settlement will avoid conflicts, risks, and costs that would be borne by the Navajo Nation, individual water users, municipalities, the State of New Mexico, and the Federal Government if the Navajo claims were litigated in full. Instead, defining the Navajo Nation's water rights by agreement will improve water management in the basin and ensure that future water demands can be addressed through an efficient administrative process.

Most important, however, is that the settlement will provide a sustainable water supply to Navajo communities in the eastern portion of the Navajo Reservation. Currently, 40 percent of the population on the reservation—approximately 70,000 people—must haul water for use in their homes. This situation has resulted in serious health, education, and economic consequences for the Navajo people. This legislation will begin to address these issues, as well as the United States' obligations to the Navajo Nation.

On the opposite side of the State, several communities are facing an uncertain water future due to falling levels of groundwater in the Ogallala aquifer. To address this problem, the bill authorizes the Bureau of Reclamation to help develop the Eastern New Mexico Rural Water System. This project will use an available water supply in Ute Reservoir to provide communities in eastern New Mexico with a renewable water supply and the long-term security that is critical to the region's future. As a measure of its importance, the State of New Mexico already has provided about $8 million to develop the project. Enacting this legislation will help communities in Curry and Roosevelt Counties secure the water needed to sustain current economic activity and support future development in the region.

In the heart of New Mexico is the Rio Grande. Over the past decade, there have been many conflicts over this magnificent, but limited resource. Conserving water and improving inefficient infrastructure has been a key factor in minimizing these conflicts. Unfortunately, Native Americans residing in the Rio Grande basin have not benefited greatly from these improvements. This bill will change that situation by directing the Bureau of Reclamation to work with the Rio Grande Pueblos to assess irrigation infrastructure and initiate projects to rehabilitate and repair such infrastructure on Pueblo lands.

By focusing Federal resources and expertise on this problem now, the Federal Government, as part of its trust responsibility, will help prevent further deterioration of Pueblo irrigation systems and avoid additional rehabilitation costs in the future. The Pueblos will benefit markedly from increased agricultural productivity, increased water conservation, and safer facilities. More importantly, however, these improvements will help the Pueblos to sustain their historical way of life, both economically and culturally. Finally, the overall health of the Rio Grande basin will likely benefit through increased efficiency in water use.

The final water provision I want to mention is one that will benefit New Mexico and many other States. The SECURE Water Act is based on the view that effectively addressing water issues requires a better understanding of the resource, and increasing the efficiency of its use. For that reason, the bill seeks to strengthen the national streamflow program, improve ground water monitoring efforts, enhance our understanding of water uses and availability, and provide grants to implement water conservation and efficiency projects.

It also will improve our understanding of the impacts of climate change on water and ensure that adaptation strategies are formulated and implemented. This is particularly important in New Mexico, where one recent study by researchers at the University of New Mexico and New Mexico State predicts that surface water in the Rio Grande basin could decline by as much as 12 percent by 2030 and 33 percent by 2080.

New Mexico will also benefit from a number of important public land provisions, including the designation of a new national monument.

The Prehistoric Trackways National Monument in Doña Ana County, New Mexico, will protect a remarkable "megatracksite" of 290 million-year-old fossils. This site of worldwide scientific significance has preserved the trackways of some of the earliest creatures to make their way out of the ocean, which will help fill in the gaps left from studying only their fossilized bones.

Las Cruces resident Jerry MacDonald first brought the find to light in 1988, and thanks to a more recent discovery by MacDonald, we now know that the National Monument also will protect a well-preserved 290 million-year-old petrified forest where three new species of trees already have been discovered. The local curation of these specimens should provide unique scientific and educational opportunities for the surrounding community and visitors to the region.

The Fort Stanton-Snowy River Cave National Conservation Area in Lincoln County, NM, will permanently protect the cave system, including a passageway containing a more than 4-mile-long continuous calcite-crystal river bed, a unique formation that is believed to be the longest one of its kind in the world.

While exploration of this cave began centuries ago, it was not until 2001 that volunteers with the Fort Stanton Cave Study Group discovered the Snowy River passageway, which defied their wildest expectations. This discovery already has yielded valuable scientific research in hydrology, geology, and microbiology, the last of which may even have applications in interplanetary exploration. We will be proud to include the Fort Stanton-Snowy River Cave on New Mexico's prestigious list of world-class sites.

The bill also includes legislation spearheaded by Senator TOM UDALL—the designation of the 16,000 acre Sabinoso Wilderness in San Miguel County, NM. The Sabinoso Wilderness will protect a rugged and beautiful landscape that provides important wildlife habitat and represents an important watershed to our State.

New Mexico is the home of the first congressionally designated wilderness area, and the Sabinoso Wilderness represents a well-deserved addition to the National Wilderness Preservation System. I hope our efforts to permanently protect this area will ensure that future generations can enjoy this outstanding public resource.

This bill also will reauthorize the Río Puerco Watershed Act, which formalized the Río Puerco Management Committee in New Mexico. The committee has become one of the most effective collaborative land management efforts in the Southwest. And for more than 10 years, it has helped facilitate the restoration of the highly degraded Río Puerco Watershed, the largest tributary to the Río Grande. There is much more work to be done to restore this watershed, and this legislation will assist the committee in that effort.

Title IV of the bill—the Forest Landscape Restoration Act—holds great promise for our fire-dependant forests and communities in New Mexico and across the country. Wildfire activity and suppression costs have grown dramatically in recent years. The affects of global warming are increasingly impacting forest and watershed health. And communities across the country are struggling economically.

This legislation will establish a program to select and fund collaborative landscape-scale forest restoration projects that will improve forest health, reduce wildfire management costs, and benefit local economies. The positive response that we have seen from Members of Congress, State and local officials, and communities across the country speaks to the importance of these issues and the promise of this approach. I hope we can quickly provide funding to implement the legislation, as we cannot afford to wait to begin this critical work.

It is past time for us to enact these measures to provide water to our communities, to protect our natural wonders, and to restore our natural resources. Many New Mexicans have worked for years to see these provisions enacted into law, and I am pleased the Senate is taking the important steps toward achieving that goal.

I yield the remainder of my time to the Senator from Alaska.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska is recognized.

Ms. MURKOWSKI. Madam President, as we conclude the debate on this public lands package, I think it is important to remind colleagues of perhaps a few facts—a little bit of the history as to how we got here.

As the chairman of the Energy Committee indicated, this omnibus public lands package consists of 160 bills and what they represent in terms of the legislation and efforts of communities, of individuals, of groups, of legislators, to come to a point where they may finally be seeing a resolution on the issues they have been working on, and I think it is important to put this into context.

One of the measures in this public lands package that relates to my State is an issue we have been working on—a land exchange—for almost two decades now in an effort to try to resolve it. Through a great deal of compromise with agencies, with public interest groups, and with policymakers, we have legislation that we believe works.

My colleague from Utah, Senator BENNETT, has been working on a provision that he, too, acknowledges has been over 10 years in the making. My colleague, Senator CRAPO, from Idaho, has been working on legislation that has been 8 years in the process. We on the Energy Committee have been working with Members to try to advance good projects and legislation that work in their respective States.

Our public lands States are a little different from what we see on the East Coast. When you have 60 percent of the land in your State owned by the Federal Government, oftentimes just getting a transaction approved requires an act of Congress. So what we have today in this package, big as it is, is a culmination of countless years of work by lawmakers in this body. It is time that we advance many of these very important measures.

This bill is a very bipartisan measure. It is, as I say, 160 bills, but there are both Republican sponsors and Democratic sponsors. It is the work of a lot of compromise on both sides. All but a handful of these bills within the Energy Committee's jurisdiction were ordered reported by the committee on a unanimous voice vote.

We need to recognize that this is not the work of the 111th Congress. It is not even the work of the 110th. It was before that. This is carryover work in an attempt to take care of a lot of unfinished business.

I am optimistic that this bill will pass both this body and the other body and be finally signed into law. I am also optimistic that the 111th Congress can then make a fresh start with public lands legislation and perhaps find a better way to reach consensus on these types of bills. I hope the process for consideration of this package today is a harbinger of the future.

The package we have contains language that the House had sought to add to clarify that access to recreation, including hunting, fishing, and trapping, would not be limited by land designations in this bill. This language was bipartisan and bicameral, and the support truly is there.

The amendments Senator COBURN brought before this body—six serious, relevant amendments—while I have not agreed with the specifics of some of those amendments we have considered, I do take the issues and the concerns raised by them very seriously. I always have and will continue to commit to continue to do so in the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources; as we look to legislation in the future, whether it is the issue of prioritization or acknowledging an inventory of what we own, what we are required to operate and maintain is something that is worthwhile to pursue.

Some of the issues that were raised—for instance, that of eminent domain, locking up our Nation's energy resources—these are issues that are clearly legitimate. But I suggest a broad-brush or one-size-fits-all prohibition does not work in the real world.

The bills in this package were carefully evaluated for these and so very many concerns as they went through the committee. The Energy Committee is very concerned. Our focus is on access to our Nation's energy resources. There was that consideration made bill by bill.

The last comment I wish to make is, it has been suggested that somehow or another this lands package is a Federal land grab. In fact, the bill actually transfers over 23,000 acres of Federal land into the private or State sectors through conveyance, exchange or sale. In most instances, the Federal Government is giving more land into private hands than they are getting or the exchanges are of equal acres or equal value.

Again, I will not suggest the process we have gone through has been the easiest. It is difficult when you have the number of bills we have and issues that are contentious and that require a great deal of effort and compromise. But the product before this body today is one where I would agree with our chairman of the Energy Committee, it does help to protect our country's great assets, it does allow for better enhancements of our public lands, and I think it is worthy of consideration by this full body. I encourage its support.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LEVIN. Madam President, today's vote will mark the second time in 2 months the Senate has passed the Omnibus Public Land Management Act. On January 15, the Senate passed a similar bill, which encompasses over 150 bills related to our Nation's natural, historic, and recreational resources. While I am pleased the Senate will again pass this legislation, I am disappointed this widely supported bill has required nearly 2 weeks of Senate floor time during a time of severe economic crisis.

The omnibus public land bill includes four provisions I authored that will directly benefit Michigan by preserving precious natural resources and improving our parks and trails.

First, the bill would authorize the Federal Government to purchase land from willing sellers for the North Country National Scenic Trail, the nation's longest hiking trail, 1,000 miles of which traverse through Michigan. This trail also runs through New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and New York, with a total length of 4,650 miles. For the majority of the other national scenic and historic trails, the Federal Government has land acquisition authority, but for no good reason this authority has not been available for the North Country Trail. Willing sellers, in many cases public-spirited citizens, should have the right to sell easements or even portions of their land to the Federal Government should they choose to do so and if it is in the national interest. In addition to important trail linkages, with willing seller authority, sections of the current trail could be moved from roads where hikers and other trail users are unsafe. I have been working on this willing seller legislation for nearly 10 years, and I am pleased that it is going to be approved by the Senate again today.

Second, the omnibus public lands bill also includes legislation I sponsored last Congress to improve the Keweenaw National Historical Park, located in Michigan's Upper Peninsula. Established in 1992, this unique park, with nearly 20 independently operated heritage sites, preserves and interprets the incredible story of copper mining and production in Michigan's Keweenaw Peninsula that powered the Industrial Revolution. This legislation would enable the park to better carry out its statutory mission to preserve and bring to life the vibrant history of Michigan's "copper country." Specifically, the legislation would change the onerous matching requirement for federal funds from a 4:1 ratio to a 1:1 ratio, which is typical for most other Park System units that require a non-federal funding match. The legislation would also increase the authorized level of funds to be appropriated for the park to enable the preservation, restoration, and interpretation of the numerous historical properties within the park boundaries. Finally, the legislation would eliminate an overly restrictive prohibition on the Department of the Interior from acquiring certain lands. Making these changes would improve the visitors' experience, preserve important historic resources, and help with economic revitalization of the Keweenaw Peninsula.

Third, the bill provides important protections for about 16 percent of the land—or 12,000 acres—within the Pictured Rocks National Lakeshore, located in Michigan's Upper Peninsula along the south shore of majestic Lake Superior. This wilderness legislation, which I introduced during the last Congress, provides natural resource protection while also ensuring that recreational opportunities and access are maintained. The wilderness designation was proposed by the Park Service after 5 years of careful planning and extensive public consultation. As a result of that open process, the final wilderness designation was changed from the initial proposal to respond to many of the concerns expressed by citizens. For example, the access roads to the lakes and campground are not included in the wilderness designation, so vehicles would still have access to this popular recreation area. Also, motor boats would still be able to access the Lake Superior shoreline, as the wilderness area does not include the Lake Superior surface water. In addition, boats using electric motors would still be allowed on Little Beaver and Beaver Lakes within the wilderness area. Since 1981, the Beaver Basin area has been managed as a backcountry and wilderness area, and this wilderness designation would ensure that the valuable habitat and pristine natural features of the region remain the treasure and peaceful sanctuary they are today.

Finally, the omnibus lands legislation contains a bill that I sponsored in the Senate last year as a companion to Representative JOHN DINGELL's legislation in the U.S. House of Representatives that would designate land on which the battles of the River Raisin were fought, during the War of 1812, as a unit of the National Park System. This land, in Monroe County and Wayne County, MI, includes sites related to a significant set of battles in an area that was once considered part of the "Northwest," a key strategic front in the War of 1812. By designating this land as a unit of the National Park System, the public will have an opportunity to learn about these battlefield sites. While horrific actions took place at the River Raisin, these events prompted a rallying cry that became a turning point in the War of 1812, which is often called America's "Second War of Independence." I look forward to this legislation becoming law in time for the national celebration that will take place on the 200th anniversary of the War of 1812.

I am hopeful the House will also pass this legislation and the President will sign it into law so that we can wrap up one of the major pieces of unfinished business from the last Congress, which will benefit Michigan and the Nation by improving the preservation of and access to important natural, historic, and recreational resources.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. HAGAN). The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Madam President, before the Senator from Oklahoma has the final say, which he certainly should, let me say there are a great many people, excellent staff working for the Democratic side of the Energy and Natural Resources Committee and staff working for Senator MURKOWSKI on the Republican side of the committee who deserve great credit. We enumerated those staff when we dealt with this legislation 2 months ago, and we will do so again in the RECORD. Let me particularly indicate David Brooks here with me and Kara Finkler as the two who have done the most to make this possible. Without their good work, this would not be legislation coming up for final consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

Ms. MURKOWSKI. Madam President, just to add to the comments of Senator BINGAMAN, it is appropriate that we acknowledge our staff. I appreciate him doing so. I thank those who worked on the Republican side as well. But I also wish to acknowledge some of the Members on our side who have been very dogged in an effort to reach final compromise on this legislation.

Senator CRAPO from Idaho has been diligent in his efforts, working alongside Senator BENNETT from Utah and Senator KYL. I appreciate their efforts in getting us to where we are today.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Madam President, let me add two additional individuals to the list of folks I particularly mentioned by name. Mike Connor, who is responsible for all the water rights legislation contained in the legislation in the Secure Water Act, I note for my colleagues that he has been named just today as the President's choice to be head of the Bureau of Reclamation, which I think is a great thing for the country; and Scott Miller, who worked very hard on the forest issues involved with this legislation.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Madam President, I have just a few observations before we start the vote. This has been a long process on this bill. I appreciate the pain and patience of the chairman of the committee. He has been a gentleman to work with all the time in our discussions.

I also note for the Senate that over 70 of these bills could have gone by unanimous consent, but because we chose to have a procedure where up until now, over the last 2 years, no amendments were ever allowed to be offered on any of these bills—none; it was never an option—we have taken approximately 7 weeks on something we could have done in 2 weeks if we had an open amendment process like the Senate is supposed to. We find ourselves ping-ponging between the House and the Senate because we want to avoid the very purpose for which we are here, which is open debate and amendment.

It should be a lesson to us. The American people win when there is a debate. They lose when we use unanimous consent to pass something that is controversial. To say it is not, the average we got on our amendments was 31 votes. That is almost a third of the Senate. So to say we should pass legislation by unanimous consent when a third of the Senate does not agree, I would say there is a great lesson for us and that is, let's open up, let's have a debate, let's put a short period of time on it, and let's not have to use procedures to try to, in fact, get a debate for the American people.

I will also say, in looking at this bill, what have we done? There are a lot of good provisions in this bill. I am not opposed to half of this bill. Half of this bill I am adamantly opposed to.

I was thinking, as we recognize the Republican and Democratic staff, who is representing truly the American people rather than parochial interests and what staff worked on that? We went through this. We rejected transparency for the American people. We rejected the ability to know what we have and how to deal with it and how to manage it. We have said no by a vote of this body that we are not going to do that; we like the darkness, the lack of accountability, the lack of transparency that goes to the American people. We rejected eliminating earmarks. Every appropriator voted against that amendment, even though the President says and the American people say that is not the way they want to do business. But we rejected it.

We have rejected significant amounts of potential renewable energy. Ninety percent of all geothermal, potential renewable clean energy, is put at risk by what we are doing. I know that is disputable, but our own Secretary of the Interior this week said we should not put the cart before the horse. We should have good planning on where we are going with transmission lines, the grids, and everything else, so we can take advantage of solar, wind, and geothermal. But yet we have rejected that.

We have rejected prioritizing the needs of our national parks. That is what the Senate has done this week. We said: No, we are not going to do that, if we want to do something new, even though we have between $12 billion and $19 billion worth of backlogs, as the Government Accountability Office said we have significant health and safety risks for our employees and the American public who visit our parks—we rejected that. We said: No, we should not take care of what we have now before we start something new. We have done exactly the opposite of what the average American would be doing with their own assets.

The other thing we have done is we have taken a large amount of oil and natural gas and said you can never touch it again. Let me emphasize why. Of the 80 wilderness bills my colleagues put in this legislation, 35 of them, under the Wilderness Study Area they said they never should be put into the wilderness, and my colleagues put them in the wilderness anyway.

The whole project of having the Wilderness Study Area is to use the study to determine if an area should be wilderness. Not counting Colorado and Utah, my colleagues put 448,000 acres into wilderness that the study says should never go into wilderness area because they have significant oil and gas and other energy.

We rejected the process by which we do it because parochial interests have trumped the national energy needs of this country, and that does not count Colorado and Utah. Utah has a significant area. So probably well over 35 percent of all the land my colleagues have taken away and said forever we are never going to touch, we are never going to utilize the natural resources that this country could utilize when we are sending $400 billion a year overseas for carbon-based energy which we are going to do for the next 20 years no matter what, you have taken it away. You said never.

As I said earlier, you have taken clean renewables. We don't know what the percentage is but a significant percentage of geothermal for sure. A bill is going to be introduced that is going to take several hundred thousand acres out of the California desert by the Senator from California which is prime land for solar. It is getting ready to be introduced so that can never be touched.

We have to have energy, and we are ignoring assets that we have. We are putting into wilderness area assets that have significant energy. We are ignoring the process under which we said we would make those determinations. When well over 35 of the 80 were recommended they not be put into wilderness area, what are the American people to think? Where is the common sense to say maybe we ought to plan for the future? Maybe we ought to look and say: If we are going to go to a renewable portfolio totally of energy in this country, how long is it going to take us to get there and what do we need in between now and then to do that?

We are not making good long-term decisions with this bill. We are handicapping ourselves, and we are telling the Middle East: Go ahead and jack it up because we are going to limit our options with which we can balance energy needs in this country by what we are doing in this bill.

Finally, we have said in this bill eminent domain is going to be utilized. We say we are not going to do it, but we certainly said: American landowner, if we are there and if we decide we want to do something, we are going to keep it.

The fact is, one of the most painful things that occurs to an American citizen in this country is your land, without your permission, even though you are paid an equitable price for it, is taken from you. We said that is fine. We rejected that. Thirty-five Senators voted to not reject it but 60-some voted to reject it.

Let me summarize. We like our earmarks. We don't want to think long term on energy. We reject policies that say we should not put land into the wilderness area, but we do it anyway. We have taken away our ability to handle the next energy crisis, which is coming. We have told the American people we are going to keep eminent domain and, by the way, it doesn't matter if you own property, we will take it if we need it.

Besides all that, we have now more land area in wilderness in this country than we have developed land. There is 108 million acres now in wilderness in this country and only 106 million acres of developed land. When do we have enough? When do we stop tying our arm behind our back in terms of energy, whether it is renewable or carbon based? When do we do that? Is it wise and prudent to say we should not leave all options on the table for our energy needs for the future, whether it is green energy or traditional energy? Why would we send that signal to the rest of the world? And why would we do that to the American taxpayers?

What is going to happen on energy prices in this country is natural gas is going to double in the next 2 years, and it is going to double for a couple of reasons. One is because they cannot afford to drill for it right now at $4. No. 2, we are taking a large swath, 13 million cubic feet, one area you have isolated, enough to run this country for 2½ years. It is proven, we know it is there, it is easy to get out, we don't have to do a whole lot more drilling, but you can't have it. We have taken 300 million barrels of oil in that same area and said: America, you can't have it. We know its there, its not hard to get out, but you can't have it. And that is just in one of the ranges we are setting off to the side and not making available to the American public to lower their energy costs, to balance the supply-and-demand imbalance we will see in the future.

It is important that this bill was put together by combining what individuals wanted for their States. I know some of these land and water rights issues are complicated. I know the exchanges are hard, and I know protecting things in the right way is important. I know it is to the Senator from Idaho, the Senator from Alaska, and the Senator from New Mexico. But when does the overall best benefit for the American people start trumping things around here instead of what we want parochially?

I think we have two diseases. I think we have attention deficit disorder in the Senate to what the real problems are, so I think we need to be in a 12-step program to correct that. Then I think we have hyperparochialism in the sense that what is most important is what is important in my State; be danged what happens to the rest of the country.

Our country is failing in a lot of areas now, and most of it is our fault. But what we will ultimately fail on is when we start thinking more about individual States than the best long-term benefit for the country. This bill is a classic example where we put parochial interests ahead of the long-term interests of the country.

I worry about the grandchildren of this country. This is an $11 billion bill with $900 million in mandatory spending. When we have all these things we need to do that are a much higher priority, we are going to do this now. I am disappointed in us because we don't think long term, that we think short term. It is beneath the oath we take when we continue to do this. I want to be proud of what we do, and I want us to be above the influence of any short-term, any parochial, or any political decision.

The people in this body know me, that I go after Republican projects as much as Democrats. I go on the basis of what I think is in the best long-term interest. That is not to say my colleagues don't too, but as a collective body we have not been doing that. And we are not going to fix the real problem in our country, which is the economy. It is amazing to me that we are spending time on this bill instead of fixing the economic problems of this country; that we are sitting here and we have spent a total of 7 weeks in the last 3 or 4 months on this bill rather than working on the real problems and the real needs of this country.

The long-term future of our country is at great risk today, and I am not just talking economically. When we choose to protect home—i.e. State or city or earmark—at the expense of the long-term interest of our country, we won't last. What has made this country great throughout its years is we have had leaders who have said: The heck with my position. What is best for the country should come first.

The irony of that—and it is really paradoxical—is, when people see that, we restore confidence. When they see the opposite of that, they lose confidence in us. And we ought to be about restoring the American people's confidence. They are rattled today. They are rattled over the economy. They are rattled over their confidence in us, and we ought to be about restoring that. I don't think this bill does that.

I appreciate the patience of my colleagues. I have great respect for you. I know your sincere desires. But I truly think we need some coaxing to get our eye back on the ball.

Madam President, I yield the floor—I understand we will not vote until 12:20—and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Madam President, I am informed the time to vote has arrived, and I yield back any time that remains on our side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Under the previous order, all time having expired, the substitute amendment, as amended, is agreed to.

The question is on the engrossment of the amendment, as amended, and third reading of the bill.

The amendment, as amended, was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read a third time.

Mr. THUNE. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There appears to be.

The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall it pass? The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) and the Senator from Minnesota (Ms. KLOBUCHAR) are necessarily absent.

TITLE X—WATER SETTLEMENTS

Subtitle A—San Joaquin River Restoration Settlement

PART I—SAN JOAQUIN RIVER RESTORATION SETTLEMENT ACT

SEC. 10001. SHORT TITLE.

SEC. 10002. PURPOSE.

SEC. 10003. DEFINITIONS.

In this part:

(1) The terms "Friant Division long-term contractors", "Interim Flows", "Restoration Flows", "Recovered Water Account", "Restoration Goal", and "Water Management Goal" have the meanings given the terms in the Settlement.

(2) The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Interior.

(3) The term "Settlement" means the Stipulation of Settlement dated September 13, 2006, in the litigation entitled Natural Resources Defense Council, et al. v. Kirk Rodgers, et al., United States District Court, Eastern District of California, No. CIV. S-88-1658-LKK/GGH.

SEC. 10004. IMPLEMENTATION OF SETTLEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to implement the terms and conditions of the Settlement in cooperation with the State of California, including the following measures as these measures are prescribed in the Settlement:

(1) Design and construct channel and structural improvements as described in paragraph 11 of the Settlement, provided, however, that the Secretary shall not make or fund any such improvements to facilities or property of the State of California without the approval of the State of California and the State's agreement in 1 or more memoranda of understanding to participate where appropriate.

(2) Modify Friant Dam operations so as to provide Restoration Flows and Interim Flows.

(3) Acquire water, water rights, or options to acquire water as described in paragraph 13 of the Settlement, provided, however, such acquisitions shall only be made from willing sellers and not through eminent domain.

(4) Implement the terms and conditions of paragraph 16 of the Settlement related to recirculation, recapture, reuse, exchange, or transfer of water released for Restoration Flows or Interim Flows, for the purpose of accomplishing the Water Management Goal of the Settlement, subject to—

(A) applicable provisions of California water law;

(B) the Secretary's use of Central Valley Project facilities to make Project water (other than water released from Friant Dam pursuant to the Settlement) and water acquired through transfers available to existing south-of-Delta Central Valley Project contractors; and

(C) the Secretary's performance of the Agreement of November 24, 1986, between the United States of America and the Department of Water Resources of the State of California for the coordinated operation of the Central Valley Project and the State Water Project as authorized by Congress in section 2(d) of the Act of August 26, 1937 (50 Stat. 850, 100 Stat. 3051), including any agreement to resolve conflicts arising from said Agreement.

(5) Develop and implement the Recovered Water Account as specified in paragraph 16(b) of the Settlement, including the pricing and payment crediting provisions described in paragraph 16(b)(3) of the Settlement, provided that all other provisions of Federal reclamation law shall remain applicable.

(b) AGREEMENTS.—

(1) AGREEMENTS WITH THE STATE.—In order to facilitate or expedite implementation of the Settlement, the Secretary is authorized and directed to enter into appropriate agreements, including cost-sharing agreements, with the State of California.

(2) OTHER AGREEMENTS.—The Secretary is authorized to enter into contracts, memoranda of understanding, financial assistance agreements, cost sharing agreements, and other appropriate agreements with State, tribal, and local governmental agencies, and with private parties, including agreements related to construction, improvement, and operation and maintenance of facilities, subject to any terms and conditions that the Secretary deems necessary to achieve the purposes of the Settlement.

(c) ACCEPTANCE AND EXPENDITURE OF NON-FEDERAL FUNDS.—The Secretary is authorized to accept and expend non-Federal funds in order to facilitate implementation of the Settlement.

(d) MITIGATION OF IMPACTS.—Prior to the implementation of decisions or agreements to construct, improve, operate, or maintain facilities that the Secretary determines are needed to implement the Settlement, the Secretary shall identify—

(1) the impacts associated with such actions; and

(2) the measures which shall be implemented to mitigate impacts on adjacent and downstream water users and landowners.

(e) DESIGN AND ENGINEERING STUDIES.—The Secretary is authorized to conduct any design or engineering studies that are necessary to implement the Settlement.

(f) EFFECT ON CONTRACT WATER ALLOCATIONS.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, the implementation of the Settlement and the reintroduction of California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon pursuant to the Settlement and section 10011, shall not result in the involuntary reduction in contract water allocations to Central Valley Project long-term contractors, other than Friant Division long-term contractors.

(g) EFFECT ON EXISTING WATER CONTRACTS.—Except as provided in the Settlement and this part, nothing in this part shall modify or amend the rights and obligations of the parties to any existing water service, repayment, purchase, or exchange contract.

(h) INTERIM FLOWS.—

(1) STUDY REQUIRED.—Prior to releasing any Interim Flows under the Settlement, the Secretary shall prepare an analysis in compliance with the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.), including at a minimum—

(A) an analysis of channel conveyance capacities and potential for levee or groundwater seepage;

(B) a description of the associated seepage monitoring program;

(C) an evaluation of—

(i) possible impacts associated with the release of Interim Flows; and

(ii) mitigation measures for those impacts that are determined to be significant;

(D) a description of the associated flow monitoring program; and

(E) an analysis of the likely Federal costs, if any, of any fish screens, fish bypass facilities, fish salvage facilities, and related operations on the San Joaquin River south of the confluence with the Merced River required under the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531 et seq.) as a result of the Interim Flows.

(2) CONDITIONS FOR RELEASE.—The Secretary is authorized to release Interim Flows to the extent that such flows would not—

(A) impede or delay completion of the measures specified in Paragraph 11(a) of the Settlement; or

(B) exceed existing downstream channel capacities.

(3) SEEPAGE IMPACTS.—The Secretary shall reduce Interim Flows to the extent necessary to address any material adverse impacts to third parties from groundwater seepage caused by such flows that the Secretary identifies based on the monitoring program of the Secretary.

(4) TEMPORARY FISH BARRIER PROGRAM.—The Secretary, in consultation with the California Department of Fish and Game, shall evaluate the effectiveness of the Hills Ferry barrier in preventing the unintended upstream migration of anadromous fish in the San Joaquin River and any false migratory pathways. If that evaluation determines that any such migration past the barrier is caused by the introduction of the Interim Flows and that the presence of such fish will result in the imposition of additional regulatory actions against third parties, the Secretary is authorized to assist the Department of Fish and Game in making improvements to the barrier. From funding made available in accordance with section 10009, if third parties along the San Joaquin River south of its confluence with the Merced River are required to install fish screens or fish bypass facilities due to the release of Interim Flows in order to comply with the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531 et seq.), the Secretary shall bear the costs of the installation of such screens or facilities if such costs would be borne by the Federal Government under section 10009(a)(3), except to the extent that such costs are already or are further willingly borne by the State of California or by the third parties.

(i) FUNDING AVAILABILITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Funds shall be collected in the San Joaquin River Restoration Fund through October 1, 2019, and thereafter, with substantial amounts available through October 1, 2019, pursuant to section 10009 for implementation of the Settlement and parts I and III, including—

(A) $88,000,000, to be available without further appropriation pursuant to section 10009(c)(2);

(B) additional amounts authorized to be appropriated, including the charges required under section 10007 and an estimated $20,000,000 from the CVP Restoration Fund pursuant to section 10009(b)(2); and

(C) an aggregate commitment of at least $200,000,000 by the State of California.

(2) ADDITIONAL AMOUNTS.—Substantial additional amounts from the San Joaquin River Restoration Fund shall become available without further appropriation after October 1, 2019, pursuant to section 10009(c)(2).

(3) EFFECT OF SUBSECTION.—Nothing in this subsection limits the availability of funds authorized for appropriation pursuant to section 10009(b) or 10203(c).

(j) SAN JOAQUIN RIVER EXCHANGE CONTRACT.—Subject to section 10006(b), nothing in this part shall modify or amend the rights and obligations under the Purchase Contract between Miller and Lux and the United States and the Second Amended Exchange Contract between the United States, Department of the Interior, Bureau of Reclamation and Central California Irrigation District, San Luis Canal Company, Firebaugh Canal Water District and Columbia Canal Company.

SEC. 10005. ACQUISITION AND DISPOSAL OF PROPERTY; TITLE TO FACILITIES.

(a) TITLE TO FACILITIES.—Unless acquired pursuant to subsection (b), title to any facility or facilities, stream channel, levees, or other real property modified or improved in the course of implementing the Settlement authorized by this part, and title to any modifications or improvements of such facility or facilities, stream channel, levees, or other real property—

(1) shall remain in the owner of the property; and

(2) shall not be transferred to the United States on account of such modifications or improvements.

(b) ACQUISITION OF PROPERTY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to acquire through purchase from willing sellers any property, interests in property, or options to acquire real property needed to implement the Settlement authorized by this part.

(2) APPLICABLE LAW.—The Secretary is authorized, but not required, to exercise all of the authorities provided in section 2 of the Act of August 26, 1937 (50 Stat. 844, chapter 832), to carry out the measures authorized in this section and section 10004.

(c) DISPOSAL OF PROPERTY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Upon the Secretary's determination that retention of title to property or interests in property acquired pursuant to this part is no longer needed to be held by the United States for the furtherance of the Settlement, the Secretary is authorized to dispose of such property or interest in property on such terms and conditions as the Secretary deems appropriate and in the best interest of the United States, including possible transfer of such property to the State of California.

(2) RIGHT OF FIRST REFUSAL.—In the event the Secretary determines that property acquired pursuant to this part through the exercise of its eminent domain authority is no longer necessary for implementation of the Settlement, the Secretary shall provide a right of first refusal to the property owner from whom the property was initially acquired, or his or her successor in interest, on the same terms and conditions as the property is being offered to other parties.

(3) DISPOSITION OF PROCEEDS.—Proceeds from the disposal by sale or transfer of any such property or interests in such property shall be deposited in the fund established by section 10009(c).

(d) GROUNDWATER BANK.—Nothing in this part authorizes the Secretary to operate a groundwater bank along or adjacent to the San Joaquin River upstream of the confluence with the Merced River, and any such groundwater bank shall be operated by a non-Federal entity.

SEC. 10006. COMPLIANCE WITH APPLICABLE LAW.

(a) APPLICABLE LAW.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In undertaking the measures authorized by this part, the Secretary and the Secretary of Commerce shall comply with all applicable Federal and State laws, rules, and regulations, including the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.) and the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531 et seq.), as necessary.

(2) ENVIRONMENTAL REVIEWS.—The Secretary and the Secretary of Commerce are authorized and directed to initiate and expeditiously complete applicable environmental reviews and consultations as may be necessary to effectuate the purposes of the Settlement.

(b) EFFECT ON STATE LAW.—Nothing in this part shall preempt State law or modify any existing obligation of the United States under Federal reclamation law to operate the Central Valley Project in conformity with State law.

(c) USE OF FUNDS FOR ENVIRONMENTAL REVIEWS.—

(1) DEFINITION OF ENVIRONMENTAL REVIEW.—For purposes of this subsection, the term “environmental review” includes any consultation and planning necessary to comply with subsection (a).

(2) PARTICIPATION IN ENVIRONMENTAL REVIEW PROCESS.—In undertaking the measures authorized by section 10004, and for which environmental review is required, the Secretary may provide funds made available under this part to affected Federal agencies, State agencies, local agencies, and Indian tribes if the Secretary determines that such funds are necessary to allow the Federal agencies, State agencies, local agencies, or Indian tribes to effectively participate in the environmental review process.

(3) LIMITATION.—Funds may be provided under paragraph (2) only to support activities that directly contribute to the implementation of the terms and conditions of the Settlement.

(d) NONREIMBURSABLE FUNDS.—The United States’ share of the costs of implementing this part shall be nonreimbursable under Federal reclamation law, provided that nothing in this subsection shall limit or be construed to limit the use of the funds assessed and collected pursuant to sections 3406(c)(1) and 3407(d)(2) of the Reclamation Projects Authorization and Adjustment Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-575; 106 Stat. 4721, 4727), for implementation of the Settlement, nor shall it be construed to limit or modify existing or future Central Valley Project rate-setting policies.

SEC. 10007. COMPLIANCE WITH CENTRAL VALLEY PROJECT IMPROVEMENT ACT.

Congress hereby finds and declares that the Settlement satisfies and discharges all of the obligations of the Secretary contained in section 3406(c)(1) of the Reclamation Projects Authorization and Adjustment Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-575; 106 Stat. 4721), provided, however, that—

(1) the Secretary shall continue to assess and collect the charges provided in section 3406(c)(1) of the Reclamation Projects Authorization and Adjustment Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-575; 106 Stat. 4721), as provided in the Settlement; and

(2) those assessments and collections shall continue to be counted toward the requirements of the Secretary contained in section 3407(c)(2) of the Reclamation Projects Authorization and Adjustment Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-575; 106 Stat. 4726).

SEC. 10008. NO PRIVATE RIGHT OF ACTION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Nothing in this part confers upon any person or entity not a party to the Settlement a private right of action or claim for relief to interpret or enforce the provisions of this part or the Settlement.

(b) APPLICABLE LAW.—This section shall not alter or curtail any right of action or claim for relief under any other applicable law.

SEC. 10009. APPROPRIATIONS; SETTLEMENT FUND.

(a) IMPLEMENTATION COSTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The costs of implementing the Settlement shall be covered by payments or in-kind contributions made by Friant Division contractors and other non-Federal parties, including the funds provided in subparagraphs (A) through (D) of subsection (c)(1), estimated to total $440,000,000, of which the non-Federal payments are estimated to total $200,000,000 (at October 2006 price levels) and the amount from repaid Central Valley Project capital obligations is estimated to total $240,000,000, the additional Federal appropriation of $250,000,000 authorized pursuant to subsection (b)(1), and such additional funds authorized pursuant to subsection (b)(2); provided however, that the costs of implementing the provisions of section 10004(a)(1) shall be shared by the State of California pursuant to the terms of a memorandum of understanding executed by the State of California and the Parties to the Settlement on September 13, 2006, which includes at least $110,000,000 of State funds.

(2) ADDITIONAL AGREEMENTS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall enter into 1 or more agreements to fund or implement improvements on a project-by-project basis with the State of California.

(B) REQUIREMENTS.—Any agreements entered into under subparagraph (A) shall provide for recognition of either monetary or in-kind contributions toward the State of California’s share of the cost of implementing the provisions of section 10004(a)(1).

(3) LIMITATION.—Except as provided in the Settlement, to the extent that costs incurred solely to implement this Settlement would not otherwise have been incurred by any entity or public or local agency or subdivision of the State of California, such costs shall not be borne by any such entity, agency, or subdivision of the State of California, unless such costs are incurred on a voluntary basis.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In addition to the funding provided in subsection (c), there are also authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $250,000,000 (at October 2006 price levels) to implement this part and the Settlement, to be available until expended; provided however, that the Secretary is authorized to spend such additional appropriations only in amounts equal to the amount of funds deposited in the San Joaquin River Restoration Fund (not including payments under subsection (c)(1)(B) and proceeds under subsection (c)(1)(C)), the amount of in-kind contributions, and other non-Federal payments actually committed to the implementation of this part or the Settlement.

(2) USE OF THE CENTRAL VALLEY PROJECT RESTORATION FUND.—The Secretary is authorized to use monies from the Central Valley Project Restoration Fund created under section 3407 of the Reclamation Projects Authorization and Adjustment Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-575; 106 Stat. 4727) for purposes of this part in an amount not to exceed $2,000,000 (October 2006 price levels) in any fiscal year.

(c) FUND.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There is hereby established within the Treasury of the United States a fund, to be known as the San Joaquin River Restoration Fund, into which the following funds shall be deposited and used solely for the purpose of implementing the Settlement except as otherwise provided in subsections (a) and (b) of section 10203:

(A) All payments received pursuant to section 3406(c)(1) of the Reclamation Projects Authorization and Adjustment Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-575; 106 Stat. 4721).

(B) The construction cost component (not otherwise needed to cover operation and maintenance costs) of payments made by Friant Division, Hidden Unit, and Buchanan Unit long-term contractors pursuant to long-term water service contracts or pursuant to repayment contracts, including repayment contracts executed pursuant to section 10010. The construction cost repayment obligation assigned such contractors under such contracts shall be reduced by the amount paid pursuant to this paragraph and the appropriate share of the existing Federal investment in the Central Valley Project to be recovered by the Secretary pursuant to Public Law 99-546 (100 Stat. 3050) shall be reduced by an equivalent sum.

(C) Proceeds from the sale of water pursuant to the Settlement, or from the sale of property or interests in property as provided in section 10005.

(D) Any non-Federal funds, including State cost-sharing funds, contributed to the United States for implementation of the Settlement, which the Secretary may expend without further appropriation for the purposes for which contributed.

(2) AVAILABILITY.—All funds deposited into the Fund pursuant to subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of paragraph (1) are authorized for appropriation to implement the Settlement and this part, in addition to the authorization provided in subsections (a) and (b) of section 10203, except that $88,000,000 of such funds are available for expenditure without further appropriation; provided that after October 1, 2019, all funds in the Fund shall be available for expenditure without further appropriation.

(d) LIMITATION ON CONTRIBUTIONS.—Payments made by long-term contractors who receive water from the Friant Division and Hidden and Buchanan Units of the Central Valley Project pursuant to sections 3406(c)(1) and 3407(d)(2) of the Reclamation Projects Authorization and Adjustment Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-575; 106 Stat. 4721, 4727) and payments made pursuant to paragraph 16(b)(3) of the Settlement and subsection (c)(1)(B) shall be the limitation of such entities’ direct financial contribution to the Settlement, subject to the terms and conditions of paragraph 21 of the Settlement.

(e) NO ADDITIONAL EXPENDITURES REQUIRED.—Nothing in this part shall be construed to require a Federal official to expend Federal funds not appropriated by Congress, or to seek the appropriation of additional funds by Congress, for the implementation of the Settlement.

(f) REACH 4B.—

(1) STUDY.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—In accordance with the Settlement and the memorandum of understanding executed pursuant to paragraph 6 of the Settlement, the Secretary shall conduct a study that specifies—

(i) the costs of undertaking any work required under paragraph 11(a)(3) of the Settlement to increase the capacity of reach 4B prior to reinitiation of Restoration Flows;

(ii) the impacts associated with reinitiation of such flows; and

(iii) measures that shall be implemented to mitigate impacts.

(B) DEADLINE.—The study under subparagraph (A) shall be completed prior to restoration of any flows other than Interim Flows.

(2) REPORT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall file a report with Congress not later than 90 days after issuing a determination, as required by the Settlement, on whether to expand channel conveyance capacity to 4500 cubic feet per second in reach 4B of the San Joaquin River, or use an alternative route for pulse flows, that—

(i) explains whether the Secretary has decided to expand Reach 4B capacity to 4500 cubic feet per second; and

(ii) addresses the following matters:

(I) The basis for the Secretary’s determination, whether set out in environmental review documents or otherwise, as to whether the expansion of Reach 4B would be the preferable means to achieve the Restoration Goal as provided in the Settlement, including how different factors were assessed such as comparative biological and habitat benefits, comparative costs, relative availability of State cost-sharing funds, and the comparative benefits and impacts on water temperature, water supply, private property, and local and downstream flood control.

(II) The Secretary's final cost estimate for expanding Reach 4B capacity to 4500 cubic feet per second, or any alternative route selected, as well as the alternative cost estimates provided by the State, by the Restoration Administrator, and by the other parties to the Settlement.

(III) The Secretary's plan for funding the costs of expanding Reach 4B or any alternative route selected, whether by existing Federal funds provided under this subtitle, by non-Federal funds, by future Federal appropriations, or some combination of such sources.

(B) DETERMINATION REQUIRED.—The Secretary shall, to the extent feasible, make the determination in subparagraph (A) prior to undertaking any substantial construction work to increase capacity in reach 4B.

(3) COSTS.—If the Secretary's estimated Federal cost for expanding reach 4B in paragraph (2), in light of the Secretary's funding plan set out in that paragraph, would exceed the remaining Federal funding authorized by this part (including all funds reallocated, all funds dedicated, and all new funds authorized by this part and separate from all commitments of State and other non-Federal funds and in-kind commitments), then before the Secretary commences actual construction work in reach 4B (other than planning, design, feasibility, or other preliminary measures) to expand capacity to 4500 cubic feet per second to implement this Settlement, Congress must have increased the applicable authorization ceiling provided by this part in an amount at least sufficient to cover the higher estimated Federal costs.

SEC. 10010. REPAYMENT CONTRACTS AND ACCELERATION OF REPAYMENT OF CONSTRUCTION COSTS.

(a) CONVERSION OF CONTRACTS.—

(1) The Secretary is authorized and directed to convert, prior to December 31, 2010, all existing long-term contracts with the following Friant Division, Hidden Unit, and Buchanan Unit contractors, entered under subsection (e) of section 9 of the Act of August 4, 1939 (53 Stat. 1196), to contracts under subsection (d) of section 9 of said Act (53 Stat. 1195), under mutually agreeable terms and conditions: Arvin-Edison Water Storage District; Delano-Earlimart Irrigation District; Exeter Irrigation District; Fresno Irrigation District; Ivanhoe Irrigation District; Lindmore Irrigation District; Lindsay-Strathmore Irrigation District; Lower Tule River Irrigation District; Orange Cove Irrigation District; Porterville Irrigation District; Saucelito Irrigation District; Shafter-Wasco Irrigation District; Southern San Joaquin Municipal Utility District; Stone Corral Irrigation District; Tea Pot Dome Water District; Terra Bella Irrigation District; Tulare Irrigation District; Madera Irrigation District; and Chowchilla Water District. Upon request of the contractor, the Secretary is authorized to convert, prior to December 31, 2010, other existing long-term contracts with Friant Division contractors entered under subsection (e) of section 9 of the Act of August 4, 1939 (53 Stat. 1196), to contracts under subsection (d) of section 9 of said Act (53 Stat. 1195), under mutually agreeable terms and conditions.

(2) Upon request of the contractor, the Secretary is further authorized to convert, prior to December 31, 2010, any existing Friant Division long-term contract entered under subsection (c)(2) of section 9 of the Act of August 4, 1939 (53 Stat. 1194), to a contract under subsection (c)(1) of section 9 of said Act, under mutually agreeable terms and conditions.

(3) All such contracts entered into pursuant to paragraph (1) shall—

(A) require the repayment, either in lump sum or by accelerated prepayment, of the remaining amount of construction costs identified in the Central Valley Project Schedule of Irrigation Capital Rates by Contractor 2007 Irrigation Water Rates, dated January 25, 2007, as adjusted to reflect payments not reflected in such schedule, and properly assignable for ultimate return by the contractor, no later than January 31, 2011, or if made in approximately equal annual installments, no later than January 31, 2014; such amount to be discounted by $\frac{1}{2}$ the Treasury Rate. An estimate of the remaining amount of construction costs as of January 31, 2011, as adjusted, shall be provided by the Secretary to each contractor no later than June 30, 2010;

(B) require that, notwithstanding subsection (c)(2), construction costs or other capitalized costs incurred after the effective date of the contract or not reflected in the schedule referenced in subparagraph (A), and properly assignable to such contractor, shall be repaid in not more than 5 years after notification of the allocation if such amount is a result of a collective annual allocation of capital costs to the contractors exercising contract conversions under this subsection of less than $5,000,000. If such amount is $5,000,000 or greater, such cost shall be repaid as provided by applicable Reclamation law, provided that the reference to the amount of $5,000,000 shall not be a precedent in any other context;

(C) provide that power revenues will not be available to aid in repayment of construction costs allocated to irrigation under the contract; and

(D) conform to the Settlement and this part and shall continue so long as the contractor pays applicable charges, consistent with subsection (c)(2) and applicable law.

(4) All such contracts entered into pursuant to paragraph (2) shall—

(A) require the repayment in lump sum of the remaining amount of construction costs identified in the most current version of the Central Valley Project Schedule of Municipal and Industrial Water Rates, as adjusted to reflect payments not reflected in such schedule, and properly assignable for ultimate return by the contractor, no later than January 31, 2014. An estimate of the remaining amount of construction costs as of January 31, 2014, as adjusted, shall be provided by the Secretary to each contractor no later than June 30, 2013;

(B) require that, notwithstanding subsection (c)(2), construction costs or other capitalized costs incurred after the effective date of the contract or not reflected in the schedule referenced in subparagraph (A), and properly assignable to such contractor, shall be repaid in not more than 5 years after notification of the allocation if such amount is a result of a collective annual allocation of capital costs to the contractors exercising contract conversions under this subsection of less than $5,000,000. If such amount is $5,000,000 or greater, such cost shall be repaid as provided by applicable Reclamation law, provided that the reference to the amount of $5,000,000 shall not be a precedent in any other context; and

(C) conform to the Settlement and this part and shall continue so long as the contractor pays applicable charges, consistent with subsection (c)(2) and applicable law.

(b) FINAL ADJUSTMENT.—The amounts paid pursuant to subsection (a) shall be subject to adjustment following a final cost allocation by the Secretary upon completion of the construction of the Central Valley Project. In the event that the final cost allocation indicates that the costs properly assignable to the contractor are greater than what has been paid by the contractor, the contractor shall be obligated to pay the remaining allocated costs. The term of such additional repayment contract shall be no less than 1 year and no more than 10 years, however, mutually agreeable provisions regarding the rate of repayment of such amount may be developed by the parties. In the event that the final cost allocation indicates that the costs properly assignable to the contractor are less than what the contractor has paid, the Secretary is authorized and directed to credit such overpayment as an offset against any outstanding or future obligation of the contractor.

(c) APPLICABILITY OF CERTAIN PROVISIONS.—

(1) Notwithstanding any repayment obligation under subsection (a)(3)(B) or subsection (b), upon a contractor's compliance with and discharge of the obligation of repayment of the construction costs as provided in subsection (a)(3)(A), the provisions of section 213(a) and (b) of the Reclamation Reform Act of 1982 (96 Stat. 1269) shall apply to lands in such district.

(2) Notwithstanding any repayment obligation under paragraph (3)(B) or (4)(B) of subsection (a), or subsection (b), upon a contractor's compliance with and discharge of the obligation of repayment of the construction costs as provided in paragraphs (3)(A) and (4)(A) of subsection (a), the Secretary shall waive the pricing provisions of section 3405(d) of the Reclamation Projects Authorization and Adjustment Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-575) for such contractor, provided that such contractor shall continue to pay applicable operation and maintenance costs and other charges applicable to such repayment contracts pursuant to the then-current rate-setting policy and applicable law.

(3) Provisions of the Settlement applying to Friant Division, Hidden Unit, and Buchanan Unit long-term water service contracts shall also apply to contracts executed pursuant to this section.

(d) REDUCTION OF CHARGE FOR THOSE CONTRACTS CONVERTED PURSUANT TO SUBSECTION (A)(1).—

(1) At the time all payments by the contractor required by subsection (a)(3)(A) have been completed, the Secretary shall reduce the charge mandated in section 10007(1) of this part, from 2020 through 2039, to offset the financing costs as defined in section 10010(d)(3). The reduction shall be calculated at the time all payments by the contractor required by subsection (a)(3)(A) have been completed. The calculation shall remain fixed from 2020 through 2039 and shall be based upon anticipated average annual water deliveries, as mutually agreed upon by the Secretary and the contractor, for the period from 2020 through 2039, and the amounts of such reductions shall be discounted using the Treasury Rate; provided, that such charge shall not be reduced to less than $4.00 per acre foot of project water delivered; provided further, that such reduction shall be implemented annually unless the Secretary determines, based on the availability of other monies, that the charges mandated in section 10007(1) are otherwise needed to cover ongoing federal costs of the Settlement, including any federal operation and maintenance costs of facilities that the Secretary determines are needed to implement the Settlement. If the Secretary determines that such charges are necessary to cover such ongoing federal costs, the Secretary shall, instead of making the reduction in such charges, reduce the contractor's operation and maintenance obligation by an equivalent amount, and such amount shall not be recovered by the United States from any Central Valley Project contractor, provided nothing herein shall affect the obligation of the contractor to make payments pursuant to a transfer agreement with a non-federal operating entity.

(2) If the calculated reduction in paragraph (1), taking into consideration the minimum amount required, does not result in the contractor offsetting its financing costs, the Secretary is authorized and directed to reduce, after October 1, 2019, any outstanding or future obligations of the contractor to the Bureau of Reclamation, other than the charge assessed and collected under section 3407(d) of Public law 102-575, by the amount of such deficiency, with such amount indexed to 2020 using the Treasury Rate and such amount shall not be recovered by the United States from any Central Valley Project contractor, provided nothing herein shall affect the obligation of the contractor to make payments pursuant to a transfer agreement with a non-Federal operating entity.

(3) Financing costs, for the purposes of this subsection, shall be computed as the difference of the net present value of the construction cost identified in subsection (a)(3)(A) using the full Treasury Rate as compared to using one half of the Treasury Rate and applying those rates against a calculated average annual capital repayment through 2030.

(4) Effective in 2040, the charge shall revert to the amount called for in section 10007(1) of this part.

(5) For purposes of this section, "Treasury Rate" shall be defined as the 20 year Constant Maturity Treasury (CMT) rate published by the United States Department of the Treasury as of October 1, 2010.

(e) SATISFACTION OF CERTAIN PROVISIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Upon the first release of Interim Flows or Restoration Flows, pursuant to paragraphs 13 or 15 of the Settlement, any short- or long-term agreement, to which 1 or more long-term Friant Division, Hidden Unit, or Buchanan Unit contractor that converts its contract pursuant to subsection (a) is a party, providing for the transfer or exchange of water not released as Interim Flows or Restoration Flows shall be deemed to satisfy the provisions of subsection 3405(a)(1)(A) and (I) of the Reclamation Projects Authorization and Adjustment Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-575) without the further concurrence of the Secretary as to compliance with said subsections if the contractor provides, not later than 90 days before commencement of any such transfer or exchange for a period in excess of 1 year, and not later than 30 days before commencement of any proposed transfer or exchange with duration of less than 1 year, written notice to the Secretary stating how the proposed transfer or exchange is intended to reduce, avoid, or mitigate impacts to water deliveries caused by the Interim Flows or Restoration Flows or is intended to otherwise facilitate the Water Management Goal, as described in the Settlement. The Secretary shall promptly make such notice publicly available.

(2) DETERMINATION OF REDUCTIONS TO WATER DELIVERIES.—Water transferred or exchanged under an agreement that meets the terms of this subsection shall not be counted as a replacement or an offset for purposes of determining reductions to water deliveries to any Friant Division long-term contractor except as provided in paragraph 16(b) of the Settlement. The Secretary shall, at least annually, make publicly available a compilation of the number of transfer or exchange agreements exercising the provisions of this subsection to reduce, avoid, or mitigate impacts to water deliveries caused by the Interim Flows or Restoration Flows or to facilitate the Water Management Goal, as well as the volume of water transferred or exchanged under such agreements.

(3) STATE LAW.—Nothing in this subsection alters State law or permit conditions, including any applicable geographical restrictions on the place of use of water transferred or exchanged pursuant to this subsection.

(f) CERTAIN REPAYMENT OBLIGATIONS NOT ALTERED.—Implementation of the provisions of this section shall not alter the repayment obligation of any other long-term water service or repayment contractor receiving water from the Central Valley Project, or shift any costs that would otherwise have been properly assignable to the Friant contractors absent this section, including operations and maintenance costs, construction costs, or other capitalized costs incurred after the date of enactment of this Act, to other such contractors.

(g) STATUTORY INTERPRETATION.—Nothing in this part shall be construed to affect the right of any Friant Division, Hidden Unit, or Buchanan Unit long-term contractor to use a particular type of financing to make the payments required in paragraph (3)(A) or (4)(A) of subsection (a).

SEC. 10011. CALIFORNIA CENTRAL VALLEY SPRING RUN CHINOOK SALMON.

(a) FINDING.—Congress finds that the implementation of the Settlement to resolve 18 years of contentious litigation regarding restoration of the San Joaquin River and the reintroduction of the California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon is a unique and unprecedented circumstance that requires clear expressions of Congressional intent regarding how the provisions of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531 et seq.) are utilized to achieve the goals of restoration of the San Joaquin River and the successful reintroduction of California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon.

(b) REINTRODUCTION IN THE SAN JOAQUIN RIVER.—California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon shall be reintroduced in the San Joaquin River below Friant Dam pursuant to section 10(j) of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1539(j)) and the Settlement, provided that the Secretary of Commerce finds that a permit for the reintroduction of California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon may be issued pursuant to section 10(a)(1)(A) of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1539(a)(1)(A)).

(c) FINAL RULE.—

(1) DEFINITION OF THIRD PARTY.—For the purpose of this subsection, the term "third party" means persons or entities diverting or receiving water pursuant to applicable State and Federal laws and shall include Central Valley Project contractors outside of the Friant Division of the Central Valley Project and the State Water Project.

(2) ISSUANCE.—The Secretary of Commerce shall issue a final rule pursuant to section 4(d) of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1533(d)) governing the incidental take of reintroduced California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon prior to the reintroduction.

(3) REQUIRED COMPONENTS.—The rule issued under paragraph (2) shall provide that the reintroduction will not impose more than de minimus: water supply reductions, additional storage releases, or bypass flows on unwilling third parties due to such reintroduction.

(4) APPLICABLE LAW.—Nothing in this section—

(A) diminishes the statutory or regulatory protections provided in the Endangered Species Act of 1973 for any species listed pursuant to section 4 of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1533) other than the reintroduced population of California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon, including protections pursuant to existing biological opinions or new biological opinions issued by the Secretary or Secretary of Commerce; or

(B) precludes the Secretary or Secretary of Commerce from imposing protections under the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531 et seq.) for other species listed pursuant to section 4 of that Act (16 U.S.C. 1533) because those protections provide incidental benefits to such reintroduced California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon.

(d) REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than December 31, 2024, the Secretary of Commerce shall report to Congress on the progress made on the reintroduction set forth in this section and the Secretary's plans for future implementation of this section.

(2) INCLUSIONS.—The report under paragraph (1) shall include—

(A) an assessment of the major challenges, if any, to successful reintroduction;

(B) an evaluation of the effect, if any, of the reintroduction on the existing population of California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon existing on the Sacramento River or its tributaries; and

(C) an assessment regarding the future of the reintroduction.

(e) FERC PROJECTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—With regard to California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon reintroduced pursuant to the Settlement, the Secretary of Commerce shall exercise its authority under section 18 of the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 811) by reserving its right to file prescriptions in proceedings for projects licensed by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission on the Calaveras, Stanislaus, Tuolumne, Merced, and San Joaquin rivers and otherwise consistent with subsection (c) until after the expiration of the term of the Settlement, December 31, 2025, or the expiration of the designation made pursuant to subsection (b), whichever ends first.

(2) EFFECT OF SUBSECTION.—Nothing in this subsection shall preclude the Secretary of Commerce from imposing prescriptions pursuant to section 18 of the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 811) solely for other anadromous fish species because those prescriptions provide incidental benefits to such reintroduced California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon.

(f) EFFECT OF SECTION.—Nothing in this section is intended or shall be construed—

(1) to modify the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531 et seq.) or the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 791a et seq.); or

(2) to establish a precedent with respect to any other application of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531 et seq.) or the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 791a et seq.).

(c) REPORT.—The Secretary shall ensure that a report containing the results of the Integrated Regional Water Management Plan for the hydrologic regions is submitted to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate and the Committee on Natural Resources of the House of Representatives not later than 24 months after financial assistance is made available to the California Water Institute under subsection (a)(1).

(3) EFFECT.—The forbearance of the delivery of water under paragraph (1) shall be subject to the requirements in subsection (c).

(e) EFFECT.—Nothing in this subtitle—

(1) authorizes the marketing, leasing, or transfer of the water supplies made available to the Nation under the Contract to non-Navajo water users in States other than the State of New Mexico; or

(2) authorizes the forbearance of water uses in the State of New Mexico to allow uses of water in other States other than as authorized under subsection (d).

(f) COLORADO RIVER COMPACTS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law—

(1) water may be diverted by the Project from the San Juan River in the State of New Mexico for use within New Mexico in the lower basin, as that term is used in the Colorado River Compact;

(E) seriously impair long-term economic planning and development for all parties to the litigation;

(7) after many years of negotiation, the Tribes, the State, and the upstream water users have entered into a settlement agreement to resolve permanently all water rights of the Tribes in the State; and

"(3) a regional or State watershed protection or management plan involving coastal states with approved coastal zone management programs; or

"(4) a State coastal land acquisition plan that is consistent with an approved coastal zone management program.

"(c) GRANT PROCESS.—The Secretary shall allocate funds to coastal states or National Estuarine Research Reserves under this section through a competitive grant process in accordance with guidelines that meet the following requirements:

"(1) The Secretary shall consult with the coastal state's coastal zone management program, any National Estuarine Research Reserve in that State, and the lead agency designated by the Governor for coordinating the implementation of this section (if different from the coastal zone management program).

"(2) Each participating coastal state, after consultation with local governmental entities and other interested stakeholders, shall identify priority conservation needs within the State, the values to be protected by inclusion of lands in the program, and the threats to those values that should be avoided.

"(3) Each participating coastal state shall to the extent practicable ensure that the acquisition of property or easements shall complement working waterfront needs.

"(4) The applicant shall identify the values to be protected by inclusion of the lands in the program, management activities that are planned and the manner in which they may affect the values identified, and any other information from the landowner relevant to administration and management of the land.

“(5) Awards shall be based on demonstrated need for protection and ability to successfully leverage funds among participating entities, including Federal programs, regional organizations, State and other governmental units, landowners, corporations, or private organizations.

“(6) The governor, or the lead agency designated by the governor for coordinating the implementation of this section, where appropriate in consultation with the appropriate local government, shall determine that the application is consistent with the State's or territory's approved coastal zone plan, program, and policies prior to submittal to the Secretary.

“(7)(A) Priority shall be given to lands described in subsection (a) that can be effectively managed and protected and that have significant ecological value.

“(B) Of the projects that meet the standard in subparagraph (A), priority shall be given to lands that—

“(i) are under an imminent threat of conversion to a use that will degrade or otherwise diminish their natural, undeveloped, or recreational state; and “(ii) serve to mitigate the adverse impacts caused by coastal population growth in the coastal environment.

“(d) LIMITATIONS AND PRIVATE PROPERTY PROTECTIONS.—

“(1) A grant awarded under this section may be used to purchase land or an interest in land, including an easement, only from a willing seller. Any such purchase shall not be the result of a forced taking under this section. Nothing in this section requires a private property owner to participate in the program under this section.

“(2) Any interest in land, including any easement, acquired with a grant under this section shall not be considered to create any new liability, or have any effect on liability under any other law, of any private property owner with respect to any person injured on the private property.

“(3) Nothing in this section requires a private property owner to provide access (including Federal, State, or local government access) to or use of private property unless such property or an interest in such property (including a conservation easement) has been purchased with funds made available under this section.

“(e) RECOGNITION OF AUTHORITY TO CONTROL LAND USE.—Nothing in this title modifies the authority of Federal, State, or local governments to regulate land use.

“(f) MATCHING REQUIREMENTS.—

“(3) OTHER FEDERAL FUNDS.—Where financial assistance awarded under this section represents only a portion of the total cost of a project, funding from other Federal sources may be applied to the cost of the project. Each portion shall be subject to match requirements under the applicable provision of law.

“(4) SOURCE OF MATCHING COST SHARE.—For purposes of paragraph (2)(A), the non-Federal cost share for a project may be determined by taking into account the following:

“(A) The value of land or a conservation easement may be used by a project applicant as non-Federal match, if the Secretary determines that—

“(i) the land meets the criteria set forth in section 2(b) and is acquired in the period beginning 3 years before the date of the submission of the grant application and ending 3 years after the date of the award of the grant;

“(ii) the value of the land or easement is held by a non-governmental organization included in the grant application in perpetuity for conservation purposes of the program; and

“(iii) the land or easement is connected either physically or through a conservation planning process to the land or easement that would be acquired.

“(B) The appraised value of the land or conservation easement at the time of the grant closing will be considered and applied as the non-Federal cost share.

“(C) Costs associated with land acquisition, land management planning, remediation, restoration, and enhancement may be used as non-Federal match if the activities are identified in the plan and expenses are incurred within the period of the grant award, or, for lands described in (A), within the same time limits described therein. These costs may include either cash or in-kind contributions.

“(1) such assurances as the Secretary may require that—

“(A) the title to the property will be held by the grant recipient or another appropriate public agency designated by the recipient in perpetuity;

“(B) the property will be managed in a manner that is consistent with the purposes for which the land entered into the program and shall not convert such property to other uses; and

“(C) if the property or interest in land is sold, exchanged, or divested, funds equal to the current value will be returned to the Secretary in accordance with applicable Federal law for redistribution in the grant process; and

“(2) certification that the property (including any interest in land) will be acquired from a willing seller.

“(j) REQUIREMENT FOR PROPERTY USED FOR NON-FEDERAL MATCH.—If the grant recipient elects to use any land or interest in land held by a non-governmental organization as a non-Federal match under subsection (g), the grant recipient must to the Secretary's satisfaction demonstrate in the grant application that such land or interest will satisfy the same requirements as the lands or interests in lands acquired under the program.

“(k) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

“(1) CONSERVATION EASEMENT.—The term ‘conservation easement’ includes an easement or restriction, recorded deed, or a reserve interest deed where the grantee acquires all rights, title, and interest in a property, that do not conflict with the goals of this section except those rights, title, and interests that may run with the land that are expressly reserved by a grantor and are agreed to at the time of purchase.

Amend the title so as to read: "To designate certain land as components of the National Wilderness Preservation System, to authorize certain programs and activities in the Department of the Interior and the Department of Agriculture, and for other purposes."

Mr. BINGAMAN. Madam President, today the Senate has passed H.R. 146, the Omnibus Public Lands Management Act of 2009. As I said during the debate, H.R. 146 includes over 160 bills from the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources and reflects many years of hard work.

This achievement would not have been possible without the hard work of our outstanding staff. Both our ranking member, Senator MURKOWSKI, and I are very fortunate to have a very dedicated and experienced professional staff. They service the committee and the Senate well. They deserve our thanks.

On the Democratic staff of the committee, I would like to thank the committee's staff director, Bob Simon, and chief counsel, Sam Fowler, for all of their work on this legislation, as on all the legislation that comes through our committee. I would also like to thank senior counsel Patty Beneke; counsel Mike Connor, who worked on all of the water issues included in the bill; counsels David Brooks, Kira Finkler, and Scott Miller, who coordinated all of the park and public lands bills; professional staff members Jorge Silva-Banuelos, who worked very hard on many of the New Mexico land bills; and Jonathan Epstein; and two National Park Service fellows, Karl Cordova, who worked on the committee last year, and Mike Gauthier, who is on the staff for the current year.

I would also like to thank the committee's chief clerk, Mia Bennett; executive assistant Amanda Kelly; communications director Bill Wicker; press secretary David Marks; and staff assistants Rachel Pasternack, Anna-Kristina Fox, Gina Weinstock, and Rosemarie Calabro.

On the Republican side, let me acknowledge Senator MURKOWSKI's new staff director, McKie Campbell, and chief counsel Karen Billups. I would also like to note my thanks to former Senator Domenici's staff director during the previous Congress, Frank Macchiarola, former minority chief counsel, Judy Pensabene, and former professional staff member Tom Lillie. I would also like to recognize counsel Kellie Donnelly; as well as professional staff members Frank Gladics, Josh Johnson, Chuck Kleeschulte, and Kaleb Froehlich, all of whom made significant contributions to this bill.

In addition, I am very grateful to the committee's nondesignated staff: Allison Seyfurth, Dawson Foard, Nancy Hall, Amber Passmore, Monica Chestnut, and Wanda Green.

H.R. 146 contains over 1,200 pages of text, and was the subject of numerous revisions. I am grateful to the help of the Senate legislative counsel office, and Gary Endicott, Heather Burnham, and Colin Campbell in particular.

I would also like to thank Cliff Isenberg from the Senate Budget Committee for his help; as well as Deb Reis from the Congressional Budget Office, and Tyler Kruzich, formerly with CBO.

Finally, let me acknowledge the great help in bringing the bill to the floor we received from the majority leader and his staff: Neil Kornze, Chris Miller, Randy DeValck, Gary Myrick, and, as always, the secretary for the majority, Lula Davis, as well as Tim Mitchell, the assistant secretary for the majority. I would also like to thank the cloakroom staff, Joe Lapia, Meredith Melody, Brandon Durflinger, and Estaban Galvan, for all of their assistance.

All of these fine staff members had a hand in putting H.R. 146 together and moving it through the legislative process. We would not have been able to pass the bill without their hard work and their professionalism. I wish to thank each and every one of them for their good work.

MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will be in a period of morning business, with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The Senator from California is recognized.

Mrs. BOXER. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that after the conclusion of my remarks, Senator WHITEHOUSE have the floor, and then Senator SHAHEEN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PASSAGE OF H.R. 146

Mrs. BOXER. Madam President, we just took a very important vote on a very important bill that is good for our country and good for our families. It is good for our heritage. It is good for our economy because I would argue that when we preserve magnificent places in our land, it encourages people to come and see those places and spend time around those places and spend money around those places, and that helps our economy.

I thank the leaders of the Energy Committee on both sides of the aisle, Senators BINGAMAN and MURKOWSKI, and others on the committee. I also thank the staff who worked hard, and I want to take exception to a remark by Senator COBURN. After the staff was thanked, he got up and said, "Well, what staff works for the American people?" Well, I would argue that all the staff here and all of the Senators here work for the American people. And even though Senator COBURN does not bless every provision in this bill, this bill has huge support because the bills in this package will protect some of the most breathtaking places in the Nation, areas that provide a refuge for birdwatchers, hikers, campers, equestrians, fishermen, and other visitors who are looking to escape our Nation's crowded, fast-passed cities to enjoy the tranquility of nature.

I am going to show a few pictures. This is in the Eastern Sierra, the bighorn sheep. We are protecting this magnificent creature that I know Senator HARKIN appreciates.

The bald eagle, which we know we have been doing a lot to save, will be preserved in the many acres we preserve in my home State of California.

In the Riverside bill, this is another magnificent scene of the mountains and the beautiful vegetation that grows without any water to speak of.

The Eastern Sierra, these White Mountains—imagine the beauty of this. So when people come and say we are not doing right by America to save areas such as this, all I say is, open your eyes and gaze upon God's creation. It is so magnificent.

I have one more photo I would like to show you. I know Senator SCHUMER feels the way I do about this. In the Eastern Sierras, this beautiful creek here, a beautiful place to come and enjoy the day, as I said, get away from our crowded cities, bring your family, and stay in the area.

Many bills in this package provide much needed water resources for our communities. It provides recycled water to areas suffering from drought, restoring major watersheds. We are experiencing one of the worst droughts in our State's history. That is why a coalition of 16 western water agencies and organizations wrote to Congress about the urgency of passing this bill that we happily just passed.

You saw some of the magnificent photos of some of the wilderness areas in California that have been saved. They are in what is called the California Desert and Mountain Heritage Act, the Sequoia-Kings Canyon National Park Wilderness Act, and the Eastern Sierra and Northern San Gabriel Wild Heritage Act.

I want to make a point to colleagues. On each of these wilderness areas, I worked with colleagues in the House, many of whom are Republicans, and I thank them enormously for their work: BUCK McKEON, MARY BONO MACK, DEVIN NUNES. I also worked with many Democrats, including JIM COSTA. So we have had a wonderful working relationship across party lines.

There are 700,000 acres of wilderness and/or wilderness study areas and 105 miles of wild and scenic rivers in this bill in my home State. I would say again to Senator COBURN, although I suppose the best thing I can say to him is his argument did not win the day, is that it is our responsibility, I would say to him, to protect these magnificent areas so future generations can enjoy them exactly as we do. These are breathtaking places in California. They provide critically important habitat, as you saw, for the Peninsular bighorn sheep, the mule deer, mountain lions, desert tortoises, and bald eagles.

Again, the economics of this are very clear. In a time of recession, we want to look to the future for jobs, and we know that wilderness bills, just the three of mine in this bill, will produce an estimated 420 jobs and $7 million in income to my State. I cannot say enough about the importance of opportunities such as this when you save the environment and you create jobs and everybody comes away a winner.

I would like to respond to some things Senator COBURN has been saying about one of these bills, the California Desert and Mountain Heritage Act. He has questioned why we are designating Beauty Mountain and the Pinto Mountains as wilderness in this bill even though the Bureau of Land Management failed to recommend them for wilderness back in 1990. Well, the answer is that a lot has changed since then—private lands have since been acquired by the BLM and dozens of mining claims have been retired. Without these restrictions, the BLM now supports wilderness designation for these areas and has testified before Congress in support of this bill. Also, Congress has repeatedly asserted its right to name wilderness areas—the agencies make recommendations but we make the final decision based on what we are hearing from the constituents we represent.

These three bills have bipartisan, bicameral, and diverse support. They would not impact the use of private lands, but would simply improve the protection of existing Forest Service, National Park Service, or Bureau of Land Management lands.

While preserving these areas, we have been careful to accommodate stakeholders' needs. For example, we worked to clarify that the Eastern Sierra and Northern San Gabriel Wild Heritage bill's designation of a Wild and Scenic River on segments of Piru Creek will not affect the operations of the United Water Conservation District or Pyramid Dam on the creek, including any rights they may have to modify water releases.

I will close by thanking my colleague, Senator FEINSTEIN, for not only supporting my wilderness bills that are in here but for her leadership in the San Joaquin River Restoration Settlement Act, which is included in this bill.

Senator COBURN tried to remove it from this bill. I do not understand his motivation. The settlement ended 18 years of litigation over the impacts of the Friant Dam on Chinook salmon populations. Why on Earth would anyone try to derail a settlement and drive us back into the courthouse?

What is in here is a carefully crafted compromise solution that is good for our environment, for our agricultural economy, and for our urban communities.

Again, there is more to be said on this matter. I will say again, to see Senator COBURN get up and try to torpedo this important legislation was kind of shocking to me because once in a while I say we should come together here to preserve our Nation's heritage and to try to avoid litigation.

You know, the fact is, the San Joaquin settlement had broad bipartisan support, has it in my State, from the Governor. We even have the support of the outgoing Bush administration, bipartisan House Members, water agencies, conservation groups, elected officials.

So it is a happy day, frankly, for my State of California, a very happy day—700,000 acres of wilderness, the settlement over the San Joaquin River—and for this whole Nation it is a wonderful moment because we addressed the drought some of our areas are facing.

The areas in this bill are truly magnificent places representing California's and the Nation's incredible range of landscapes and habitats. I look forward to working with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to enact this bill into law and protect these treasures for future generations of Americans.

I hope this bill will get much attention. I hope the President will have a ceremony when he signs this bill because it deserve far more attention than it has been getting. It is good for the environment, it is good for the economy, and it shows a spirit of bipartisanship that I know our President and all of us encourage.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

THE BUDGET

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Madam President, I thank the distinguished chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee for her passionate defense of our natural resources. She is a constant ally of the very best we cull forth from each other as Senators where our most precious environmental concerns are engaged. It is an honor to follow her.

Before I yield the floor to the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire, who has already made an impact here, I wanted to say a few words about the President's new budget.

Across the country, families sit at their kitchen tables and talk and make tough choices about their own family budget, about what they can afford to spend, about what they have to save. What will they do when it is time for the kids to go to college? What will they do if the car breaks down? What will they do if an elderly parent becomes ill? How will they use their finances wisely to plan for the future? This year, those choices are more difficult than ever. We have families in Rhode Island, as I am sure we have across the country, trying to save their homes, to save their jobs, to save their health care. The bills pile up, and all too often there is not enough to pay them. Well, our country is in a deep hole too. But I would like to remind my colleagues that it was not always this way.

In January 2001, when George Bush became President, the Congressional Budget Office, which is the non-partisan accounting arm of Congress that does our budget outlook on a regular basis, projected that we would see surpluses straight through the decade. These budget surpluses, the product of President Clinton's responsible governing, were projected to be enough to completely wipe out our national debt by 2009, this very year. Imagine, a debt-free America this year. Well, President Bush fixed that.

Usually when American families have a surplus, they use it responsibly, they pay down credit card debt or make an extra mortgage payment. They put it away in retirement savings. They set it aside for college for the kids. Or they spend it on something they need, such as a downpayment on a car or a house. Well, President Bush chose tax cuts for the wealthiest Americans, a misguided war he would not pay for—an irresponsible economic policy, leaving a mountain of debt to the next administration. He, of course, had the enthusiastic support of a Republican Congress which was with him every step of the way into this debt.

Today, the difference between the expected surpluses left by President Clinton and the actual deficit run up by President Bush is a staggering $8.9 trillion—$8.9 trillion on America from the Bush administration and its Republican allies in Congress.

So that is what President Obama inherited—a legacy of reckless borrowing, bad decisions, compounded by skyrocketing unemployment and now a deepening recession that only adds to our country's fiscal woes.

President Obama is trying to help us dig our way out of this mess by focusing his budget on the policies and programs that will repair our economy and create the foundation for long-term economic growth and success. He proposed, and we passed, an economic recovery plan to create jobs and support struggling families and make badly needed investments in our infrastructure during this recession. It wasn't perfect. It probably will not be enough. But it was a good start.

Now, the same Republican Party that thought tax cuts for the rich and an unnecessary war in Iraq were good uses of President Clinton's budget surpluses, the same Republican Party that ran up an $8.9 trillion debt on the country now has its leaders calling President Obama's plans "the fleecing of America's children." It is hard to imagine that this irony eludes them.

President Obama wants to cut taxes for working families, invest in renewable energy, help more young people get a college education, and reform our broken health care system—key priorities for the future of America. But some Republicans who stood by while our country became more and more dependent on foreign oil, while the cost of a college education went through the roof, and while a crisis brewed in our health care system are calling these investments in our future "a remarkable spending binge." Once again, the "department of irony" appears to be open late on the other side of the aisle.

Families in America know we will not get out of this mess with the same failed policies that got us into it—that it is time for new priorities. That is what President Obama's budget offers.

Perhaps our greatest challenge, certainly one of our greatest challenges and opportunities, is presented by our broken and dysfunctional health care system. Unless we take serious remedial action and soon, right away, this recession we are living through now will seem like an economic speed bump compared to what will happen when that $35 trillion in unfunded Medicare liabilities, against which we have set not one nickel, comes bearing down on us.

We had a lot of fighting in this body about that Recovery and Reinvestment Act. The Recovery and Reinvestment Act was nearly $800 billion. Compare that to the Bush debt I talked about that they ran up of $8.9 trillion. Where was the complaining then? Compare that to the $35 trillion in unfunded liabilities we face for Medicare. Where are the serious ideas about how we address this problem?

When you put these problems to scale, you will see that wave of cost, that tsunami of health care cost coming at us is something we have to address. We are facing truly the financial ruin of our health care system and, if nothing is done, the financial ruin of our country. Every one of us should share the goal of making sure health insurance coverage reaches every American. President Obama's budget makes a downpayment on that badly needed reform. But it is not enough just to give coverage to everybody. It is not enough just to get everybody on board, if the boat itself is sinking.
